TWO CARDS OF WARNING

SENT BY EDWARD FISCHER

He Is Former Employe of French High Commission, Which Also Was Warned.

BOTH PREDICTED EXPLOSION

Fischer Had Made Prophecy in Toronto and Declared Millionaires Should Be Killed.

Warnings that an explosion was to occur in Wall Street were received by at least two persons in advance of yesterday's catastrophe. One was received on Wednesday by Lieutenant Arnaud, chief of the French High Commission, with offices at 65 Broadway, and is known to have been sent by a former employe of the commission. The other was received by George F. Ketchledge of 2,025 Broadway, an employe of B. F. Schwartz & Co., at 2 Broadway. The warning received by Mr. Ketchledge two days ago was from Edward Fischer, a former employe of the French High Commission.

The information in both instances was turned over to the police. It was commented on that Fischer, who, it was assumed, had written both missives, had expected the explosion to be of such magnitude that the staff of the French High Commission two blocks and a half away and Mr. Ketchledge, whose place of business is nearly half a mile away, would be in danger.

Mr. Ketchledge at first refused to divulge the identity of the sender of the warning, which he said was received on a postcard. After being informed that a dispatch to THE TIMES from Toronto stated that a man registered at the Queens Hotel in that city had predicted an explosion on September 15 and that "four millionaires should be killed," Mr. Ketchledge said that the postcard was from Edward Fischer, formerly employed by the French High Commission and, he said, the son of an old and respected New York family. Mr. Ketchledge said the postcard was mailed at Toronto, Can., on Sept. 11. It read:

"Get Out of Wall Street."

"Greetings. Get out of Wall Street as soon as the gong strikes at 3 o'clock Wednesday, 'the fifteenth.' Good luck.
"ED."

The dispatch received by THE TIMES from Toronto, which led Mr. Ketchledge to make public the contents of the postcard and the identity of the sender, follows:

"TORONTO, Sept. 16.—A man who stayed at the Queen's Hotel here for two days and was registered as E. P. Fischer, New York, predicted an explosion in New York on Sept. 15. This statement, coupled with assertions that there were 'four millionaires around here who should be killed,' and the expression of other extreme sentiments, uttered in a loud voice, attracted the attention of the hotel staff. He left the hotel last Tuesday in time to take the late train for New York.

"He did not pay his hotel bill and the management says that he also left an unpaid bill at the Queen's Royal, Niagara-on-the-Lake. What effects he left disclosed little that could be useful for identification. There are two raincoats, containing several railroad time tables with a name scrawled across one; a pair of gloves, a handkerchief with an embroidered initial "E," a spool of dental floss silk and a twelve-ounce tennis racquet branded "Sutton," with several broken strings, in a rainproof case.

"Fischer is a German, who is reputed to have had a grudge against Wall Street because he had lost money there. He had attended Communist meetings here."

Says Fischer Is Deranged.

Mr. Ketchledge said he knew that Fischer had suffered a mental breakdown. He had put the card in his pocket and thought no more about it. "It is all bunk," he said. "The man is deranged, I fully believe, otherwise I would have turned the card over to the Department of Justice immediately. I have known Ed for twenty years. He is a man of great intellectual power and integrity, but four or five years ago he had a nervous breakdown which left him mentally deranged."

Maurice Casenaye, head of the French High Commission, admitted that Fischer had been in its employ, but would not admit that he was the writer of the warning letter received by Lieutenant Arnaud.

"I have turned the letter over to the police and cannot divulge the name of

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—J. P. Morgan, who is spending a quiet holiday in an English country house, was informed of the explosion in Wall Street late tonight. He refused to comment on it beyond saying the private reports he had received were reassuring. C. F. Whigham, Director of the affiliated London firm of Morgan, Grenfell & Co., had the same reports. He said no threats against Morgan's had been received by the firm recently. His information was that the explosion was entirely outside the company's premises and the damage not so great as had been first believed.

HAVOC WROUGHT IN MORGAN OFFICES

MANY OF EMPLOYES INJURED

One employe of J. P. Morgan & Co., William Joyce, of the securities department, was killed yesterday by the explosion in Wall Street between the Morgan & Co. building and the United States Assay Office. If, as is generally believed, the explosion was an anarchistic assault upon J. P. Morgan & Co. as a leading banking firm, it failed in its purpose. None of the Morgan partners was injured except Junius Spencer Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan, who was cut slightly.

Although the interior of the Morgan offices was wrecked, the substantial stone building, except for some slightly defacing scars, was not damaged. Within four hours after the explosion workmen were repairing the damage and Thomas W. Lamont announced for the firm that the offices would reopen today.

Four of the partners of J. P. Morgan & Co., Mr. Lamont, Dwight W. Morrow, George Whitney and Elliott Bacon, were in the customary conference when the explosion occurred. J. P. Morgan is in Europe. Thomas Cochran, another partner, was said to have left town the night before, and Henry P. Davison was not in at the time.

The conference was held in Mr. Morgan's office, which is on the second floor and at the corner of Broad and Wall Streets, with no windows on the Wall Street side. Protected from an explosion by a solid stone wall, none of the partners at the conference was injured, although all were shaken.

Junius Spencer Morgan, who is also a partner, was at his desk on the Broad Street side on the ground floor. Mr. Morgan was having a business discussion with John Markle of Jeddo, Pa., an anthracite coal operator; A. B. Jessup, Mr. Markle's chief engineer, and T. W. Joyce and Walter Dickerson, employes of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Showered with Flying Glass.

All five were showered with flying glass. Mr. Morgan was cut slightly in the hand. Mr. Joyce, father of the employe who was killed, who has been with J. P. Morgan & Co. for many years and is in charge of gold shipments, and Mr. Dickerson were badly cut about the head. Mr. Markle and Mr. Jessup were also badly cut.

"We were in Mr. Morgan's private office talking with Mr. Junius Spencer Morgan and Mr. Joyce," said Mr. Markle. "After the roar of the explosion glass fell in a shower upon all in the office. On every side clerks were thrown to the floor and many of them were cut by glass. Mr. Morgan did not seem to be hurt seriously, but Mr. Joyce was badly cut."

Mr. Markle said that he and Mr. Jessup rushed to a window and saw a shattered automobile in Wall Street in front of the Morgan building. "Both Mr. Jessup and I are technical men, and the centre of the explosion was in or near the automobile. I don't know what else blew up, but the automobile was in the centre of it. And there is no question in my mind that it was the work of Bolsheviki."

There were between four and five hundred employes in the Morgan building at the time and a large percentage of them were cut slightly. The members of the firm for the most part took the explosion coolly. Mr. Lamont appeared soon afterward, and was asked for a comment. He said:

"One of our valued employes, William Joyce, was killed. Mr. Joyce was the son of Thomas W. Joyce, who has been in our employ for thirty years and who was himself badly hurt. Others of our

REMICK NIPS PANIC ON STOCK EXCHANGE

HALTS MILLING ON FLOOR

Brokers and Messengers Surged Toward Centre to Avoid Falling Glass.

For a moment, but for only a moment, yesterday brokers and messengers on the trading floor of the New York Stock Exchange were stunned by the crash of the explosion in Wall Street and the noise of shattered glass falling from the windows at either end of the big board. Then, less than one minute after the disaster occurred, William H. Remick, President of the Exchange, walked quickly up the stairs from the floor to the rostrum and rang the gong, suspending trading for the day.

This action nipped in the bud the possibility of a panic among brokers who had started to mill about on the floor in an effort to get away from the windows from which heavy glass was falling. The gong, which starts the day's business and ends it, was something that every one recognized as a definite every-day affair and it served to restore confidence immediately.

The emergency suspension of business was the first of its kind in the history of the Exchange, although there have been suspensions for other reasons. In 1888 on the second day of the blizzard in March trading was suspended at noon because brokers and their clerks were snowbound. Again the Exchange was closed for a period following the outbreak of the European war, and trading has been delayed at the opening several times when brokers and their employes have been held up by strikes and other causes.

Shortly after Mr. Remick rang the closing gong the Governors of the Exchange met and unanimously approved his action, and ruled in addition that there would be no clearing of stocks last night, while deliveries would be suspended until Monday. It was also ruled at the meeting that no closing prices would be given for the day. At the same time another meeting was scheduled for the late afternoon.

Exchange Governor Tells Story.

A Governor of the Exchange, who was standing in what is known as the "Money Crowd" at the moment of the explosion, gave the following account of what occurred on the big board and praised the President for his ready action:

"I was standing talking with Mr.

EXPLOSIVE STORES ALL ACCOUNTED FOR

NONE MOVING DOWNTOWN

Enright, Laying Emphasis on Slugs, Withholds Opinion on Cause of the Blast.

Within half an hour of the explosion detectives from the Bomb Squad at Police Headquarters, officials of the Bureau of Combustibles at Fire Headquarters and agents of the Secret Service and Department of Justice began investigations to ascertain whether the explosion was the work of radicals or was due to an accident.

At the suggestion of Captain John Coughlin, head of the Detective Bureau, John Dixon, Chief of the Bureau of Combustibles of the Fire Department, began to check up the records of his bureau to learn whether any permits had been issued for the removal of dynamite during the day.

It was revealed that a permit had been issued to the du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, whose office is at 120 Broadway, to unload explosives from their pier at West Forty-eighth Street and the North River, and that a similar permit had been issued to the Carl Dittmar Company, with offices at 102 West 103d Street and whose pier is at 108th Street and the East River.

It was explained that the permits entitled the companies to distribute explosives about the city, but investigation by the detectives and agents of the Department of Justice revealed that the du Pont de Nemours Company had not removed any explosives from the pier during the day. Detectives who questioned officials of the Dittmar Company reported to Captain Coughlin at Police Headquarters that the officials declared the only explosives removed by them during the day was to Lexington Avenue and East Forty-eighth Street, where a contractor is excavating for the foundation of a building.

Trace Two Other Permits.

Two other permits were issued, it developed, that interested the investigators and caused an immediate inquiry to learn whether explosives were missing. Those permits were issued to George A. Fuller & Co., contractors, for storing dynamite in the excavation now under way for a building in Beaver Street, between Wall and Pearl Streets, less than three blocks from the scene of the explosion, and to the Underpinning and Foundation Company to store explosives in the excavation for the new Clearing House of the Stock Exchange at the

Guard Is Thrown Around Other Financial Districts

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—A cordon of police was thrown around the Chicago Stock Exchange, Board of Trade and other buildings in the La Salle Street financial district, by Chief of Police Garrity this afternoon in an effort to prevent here a possible repetition of the New York explosion.

Garrity said he had no knowledge that the New York explosion was due to a conspiracy, and explained that he "was merely playing safe."

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—The financial district tonight was under guard of police reserves as a result of the Wall Street explosion today.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—An extra guard of policemen and detectives, rushed to the financial district today when news from the New York explosion was received, were still on duty tonight.

EVIDENCE OF BOMB IN BODY OF VICTIM

SIMILAR PARTS IN STREET

Discovery by Rockefeller Institute Chemist Adds Confirmation to Theory.

Two pieces of evidence came out last night which indicated that the explosion in Wall Street yesterday was caused by a bomb. A curved piece of metal, pronounced by Dr. Charles H. Norris, Chief Medical Examiner, to be part of a bomb, was found in the body of a messenger killed by the explosion. Three similar pieces of metal were discovered two feet beneath the surface of the pavement in the hole caused by the explosion. These were pronounced by a chemist who said he was employed by the Rockefeller Institute as part of a bomb.

The first piece of metal was removed from a body which was identified as that of Robert Westday, 16 years old, of 232 West Twenty-fourth Street, by his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Duane, of the same address. The bit of metal was curved and measured two inches by one inch and was three-eighths of an inch thick.

Dr. Norris, after examination of the fragments, said it was part of the shell of a bomb. The boy, who must have been near the scene of the explosion, was struck in the abdomen and the metal went almost entirely through his body. He was employed by Curtis & Sanger, brokers, 49 Wall Street.

Chemist Finds Parts of Bomb.

The other bits of metal were discovered by a man who described himself as Martin D. Pollack of 516 West Twenty-fifth Street, a chemist and purchasing agent for the Rockefeller Institute. Pollack dug down further in the hole caused by the explosion than had the police and found the three pieces of metal. He turned his find over to Captain Thomas M. Fay, in charge of detectives of the Second Inspection District, and expressed the opinion that the bits of metal were fragments of a bomb.

Pollack said the metal was treated Bessemer steel, coated with white lead. The pieces were distorted by the explosion, but Pollack contended that they were evidently parts of the bomb cap covering a twenty-pound container of trinitrotoluol, popularly known as "TNT." He reconstructed in theory the bits of metal before Captain Fay to form a steel cap two inches long and a crosspiece with holes half an inch in diameter bored in either end. Captain Fay turned over the pieces to the Bureau of Standards and said:

"I don't know whether these pieces offer a solution of the explosion or not, but I will say that I am interested."

Pollack expressed belief that the bomb had been set off by a time fuse in which acid played a part. Some of the detectives were inclined to discredit the discovery of the bits of metal, and said the police had searched the hole thoroughly. Other detectives said the examination by the police had been superficial and had not extended to the depth of two feet, at which the fragments were found.

More than a score of men were said to have witnessed the finding of the bits of metal by Pollack. The latter told Captain Fay that he came to the scene of the explosion at the suggestion of Assistant Battalion Chief Ross, who is stationed uptown. Pollack obtained passage through the police lines by a Fire Department card.

The immense force of the explosion was shown by the distance some of the iron slugs were thrown. The Department of Justice received last night a slug nearly four inches long which was turned over by a man who said he picked it up in John Street between Broadway and Nassau, after it had struck him in the neck as it fell, apparently from the sky. The man, whose name was not revealed, said he picked up the slug which was so hot that he had to drop it. John Street is five blocks from Wall Street and the slug to reach there would have had to go over a number of high buildings.

RED PLOT SEEN IN BLAST

An explosion, believed to have been caused by a time bomb, killed thirty persons and injured probably 300 others at Broad and Wall Streets yesterday at noon.

The blast shattered windows for blocks around, threw the financial district into a panic and strewed the street in its immediate vicinity with the bodies of its dead and injured victims.

Twelve hours later investigating authorities were almost certain the disaster was due to an infernal machine left on an uncovered one-horse truck in Wall Street directly in front of the new United States Assay Office next door to the Sub-Treasury, and directly across the street from the J. P. Morgan Building.

While no arrest had been made up to last midnight, Federal, State and city authorities were agreed that the devastating blast signaled the long-threatened Red outrages.

Throughout the nation the same interpretation was placed upon the explosion, and public buildings and great storehouses of wealth, as well as conspicuous men in several cities, were placed under vigilant guard.

A guard of thirty detectives was placed around the Morgan home in Madison Avenue last night. Pedestrians were not allowed to pass in front of the house. It was said the guard would be kept on duty all night.

Accident Theories Doubted.

Rumors that a red wagon loaded with explosives had collided with an automobile or that its cargo had ignited spontaneously had been very nearly dissipated by the criminal investigators, working at unprecedented high pressure. It had been established that no vehicle freighted with such material was lawfully in the vicinity at that hour, and no other accident theory, supported be the least plausibility, had been advanced.

Against this negative foundation for any hypothesis of accident stood the positive fact that the explosion rained death through the neighborhood in the form of short, heavy slugs of cast iron window weights. These were of a cheap make, easily obtainable, rust on their fractured ends showing that they had not been broken by the explosion itself, and a minute, exhaustive examination of the many damaged buildings in the neighborhood proved that no such weights had fallen from their torn and twisted steel window casings.

Slow identification of the dead, many of them mangled beyond ready recognition, retarded the investigation. That there was a one-horse truck, probably with lattice sides, standing directly in front of the Assay Office, where the explosion occurred, is known. Parts of the dead horse were found, as well as the axles and hubs of the wheels, with a few stubs of spokes still sticking in them. But whether the driver was a victim of the blast or whether he is an escaped conspirator is a point of vital importance that remains in doubt.

Police Convinced of Plot.

So the investigators became more and more convinced that they faced a piece of organized deviltry, executed with a terrible effectiveness that dwarfed such anarchist and other radical crimes of the past as the attempts on the lives of Russell Sage and Henry C. Frick, and the bombs in Union Square, St. Patrick's Cathedral and St. Alphonsus's Church.

If their interpretation was correct, the conspirators in large measure failed of whatever direct objects they had beyond sheer terrorization. They evidently timed their infernal machine for an hour when the streets of the financial district were crowded, but they chose as well the hour when not the captains of industry but their clerks and messengers were on the street. J. P. Morgan himself, who already had escaped one attempt of assassination when he was shot by Eric Muenter, was in Europe.

Thomas W. Lamont, Dwight W. Morrow and several other partners in the Morgan firm were in conference in Mr. Morgan's own office on the second floor directly in front of the Broad Street entrance to the Morgan Building when the explosion occurred. They were uninjured.

Junius Spencer Morgan, Mr. Morgan's son, at his desk in the banking house below, was cut only slightly by flying glass. Henry P. Davison was out at the time and escaped unscathed, but William Joyce, a young employe of the Morgan firm, was killed.

Middle-Class Workers Suffer.

Thus it was throughout the district. Men of wealth and prominence escaped, some by miles and some by narrow coincidence and the great force of the blow fell upon middle-class workers.

And though the explosion—in the opinion of experts T. N. T., hedged about with iron slugs and encased in a steel or wooden box and actuated by a time device—let go within yards of fabulous riches, the amount missing last night was but eighty-odd thousand dollars in bonds and a couple of thousand shares of stock. These were dropped by messengers and others and may be recovered. A few batches of them may have been destroyed.

Stored in the vaults of the Sub-Treasury and in those below the street level in the new Assay Office was some $900,000,000 in gold. This bullion in small ingots was being transferred to the new structure along a wooden runway crossing the narrow alley way, guarded by iron grills at both ends, between the two buildings. Workmen who were moving it in little wooden boxes each containing more than $8,000 worth of gold, had just stopped for lunch. Also stored in the Sub-Treasury were probably $100,000,000 in Federal Reserve notes. There were other millions in the Morgan vaults and those of famous banks and stock exchange houses throughout the district. But not a dollar except that little bit in transit was lost, nor were any of the vaults damaged.

The explosion tore a hole in Wall Street where the wagon was standing. But the great force of the blast was upward and outward and this hole, out of which was scooped a bit of sticky brown substance, as yet unanalyzed, did not reach within many feet of the Assay Office vaults, and examination showed them to be intact.

Doors and Gratings Wrecked.

While buildings through the neighborhood suffered severely, damage to them was largely superficial. Great iron grills and doors were torn from the Morgan Building and iron gratings protecting the cages of tellers and clerks were twisted up as though they had been of wax. Metal window frames were torn loose and the vaulted dome was shaken so that for a time it was feared it would fall, but it did not.

In the Mills Building, the Equitable Trust Building and the United States Trust, stretching in the order named from the Morgan structure toward William Street, window casings were ripped out here and there and thousands of panes of heavy plate glass were shattered, but no severe structural damage was done.

On the north side of the street the Sub-Treasury escaped wit honly a few scars in its masonry, while virtually every pane of glass in the new Assay Office was broken to bits. There window frames were blown out, partitions were twisted loose and great sheets of plaster and metal lath were ripped loose by air pressure which thrust itself straight upward after damaging the vaulted stone entrance.

Other buildings along that side, including Post & Flagg, the Bank of the Manhattan Company and the Bank of America suffered similarly and windows as far away as the Broad Street projection of the Equitable Building, at 120 Broadway, felt the effects, a window in the Bankers' Club, more than thirty stories above the street level, being broken by one of the iron missiles.

The damages are estimated at $2,500,000.

Stock Exchange Is Closed.

Almost within seconds after the traged the financial work of the nation was halted and the work of rescue, of guarding the billions of money and securities endangered was under way.

Around in Broad Street the Stock Exchange was running full blast. Trading centred about the Reading post at the centre of the pit and William H. Remick, President of the institution, stood nearby chatting with one of the Governors. He heard the terrific detonation, saw the glass raining everywhere, listened a second to cries and groans and excited shouting and running feet, then said quietly:

"I think we had better stop trading for the day."

A second later he had stepped over and rung the gong that brought the financial operaions of the city to an end. The wires flashed the news and a few momenst later other big cities were following suit. They will reopen today.

Meantime hundreds had been overtaken by swift disaster and the first few moments of wild panic had gripped many thousands. From the excited, ofttimes incoherent, stories of eyewitnesses and the first rescuers to arrive there developed a composite picture of frightfulness that recalled the days of German raids and long distance bombardments of unprotected allied cities.

First a blinding flash of bluish-white light that illuminated the whole of Wall Street; then the deafening, bewildering roar of the explosion, carrying with it dozens of those iron slugs with all the velocity of a high explosive shell.

Smoke Blots Out the Scene.

It seemed, the eyewitnesses said, as if there was just the slightest lull after that through which was heard the tinkle and smash of glass as hundreds of windows showered down over the stone fronts of buildings, or were blown back through rooms where busy men and women bent over desks.

Those who went through those dread moments heard the glass before they saw it. A great cloud of smoke surrounded the immediate seat of the explosion, a great cloud of dust blotted out the whole of the street.

That cleared and there, many eyewitnesses say, lay hundreds of men and women, most of them prone on their faces. Some were dead. Some writhed in agony. Some already were scrambling to their feet. Some were badly hurt and silent. Others screamed in pain or fright, some moaned, some cried for help for themselves. One little messenger, badly hurt, begged that some one would look after the little fortune of securities he clutched in an injured hand.

According to the clock in the Assay Office, which stopped from the force of the explosion, it was 12:01. Gray Trinity, over at Broadway, was not yet done tolling the hour. From every office the lunch clouds of clerks and messengers who report for work early were jamming their way into the street.

There seemed to be just that little instant after the dust cleared away when every one stood still, dazed, puzzled, frightened. Then as window after window, with now and then a chunk of stone, came tumbling down they ran—ran in blind fear. That was the second phase as many described it.

Thousands Crowd Into Street.

Again it was but seconds until the third phase, with its returning sanity. Nothing dreadful was happening, the worst was over, and those who raced to corners and turned to see from what they had fled, saw the stricken lying on the streets and in the sidewalk. Back they tore, thousands of them, jamming into the narrow gulley, getting into one another's way, trying almost aimlessly to help.

Very soon cooler heads were in command. A dozen patrolmen from the Old Slip Police Station and the many guards and watchmen and special detectives came racing. Directly across the street from where the wagon had stood were two automobiles. One was aflame and an alarm was sent in.

Then the rescuers, recruiting the younger men, particularly those with service buttons, began to sort the dead from the wounded and send those who were hurt to hospitals. Some of them did strange things. Michael Kerwin, a clerk in Schulte's cigar store at 36 Wall Street and a former member of the ammunition train of the 79th Division, for example, tells how habit moved him. Accustomed for months to slap his steel helmet on his head at the first sound of high explosive shells, he snatched his soft felt hat from under the counter, clapped it on his head and ran in his shirt sleeves to the street.

In front of the store door he stumbled over three men, unconscious, their clothing afire. He grabbed out his knife and tore away their garments, at the same time beating at the flames and trying to quench them. In the end he did, but the three men were dead or died very soon.

Vechicles Seized by Rescuers.

While Kerwin was at work, others were lifting the injured into touring cars, trucks, limousines, anything they could pluck from the dense traffic nearby. Most of those first rescued were sent to the Broad Street Hospital, but soon steady streams were being directed toward other institutions. So well was the volunteer rescue work carried on that by the time trained and organized forces got there most of those badly hurt had been sent away.

The first patrolmen to arrive communicated to headquarters the magnitude of the disaster and soon every ounce of official exertion was being directed toward mastering the situation.

Fire apparatus arrived minutes before reserves from the nearest stations. By then tens of thousands were fighting to get as near as they could, wild tales were flashing from lip to lip and the crowds were so nearly hysterical it was only with the greatest difficulty the trucks and tenders fought their way through. They found no blaze except the one automobile which was afire. This was virtually destroyed. The second automobile which stood near it was able to leave under its own power. Later the police found both machines were owned by respectable persons and that their presence in the neighborhood was legitimate.

Realizing that in their task the firemen were badly hampered and that in the confusion huge thefts might be committed, volunteers with service men at their head began to throw a cordon about the nearby streets. They fought back the crowds as best they could until the first reserves arrived.

Reserves Rush to Wall Street.

A moment later the reserves from every precinct in the lower part of the city were ordered to the scene and Police Commissioner Enright, Chief Inspector Lahey, and a dozen other officials took command of them. With their nightsticks swinging they forced back the crowds, stretching their lines a block away in every direction and putting outposts even further from the scene.

As one automobile patrol after another dashed into Wall Street the air was filled with clanging of ambulance bells, for the streets still were filled with the less seriously hurt, many of them bleeding from glass cuts. Police Headquarters ordered every hospital in Manhattan below Thirty-fourth street to send ambulances, doctors and nurses if they could be spared. Even before they got there an insurance company which has a blanket policy on all the Morgan employes had sent a score of nurses. They set to work doing first-aid bandaging and later hurried to Broad Street Hospital, where they helped the overtaxed force there upon whom had fallen the brunt of caring for most of the injured.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Martin Vogel was in his office in the Sub-Treasury when the blast went off. He rushed to the street, saw the extent of the damage and, fearing the possibility of looting, telephoned to Governors Island, headquarters of the Department of the East of the United States Army, for a force to protect the Government's property. Colonel William Wisel, chief of staff, responded with 100 regulars from the 22d Infantry, who got under arms, crossed the ferry and reached the Wall Street corner in less than forty minutes.

The soldiers, their rifles loaded and bayonets fixed, took uncompromising charge of the situation for an hour or more. Their lines were drawn tight about the neighborhood and they challenged every one who approached, refusing to allow a single person in or out without the permission of an officer.

Soon after the army took command a big detail of Red Cross nurses and physicians under command of Dr. Thomas J. Reilly, executive officer of the Relief Committee, arrived in ambulances and trucks with plentiful supplies of first aid material. In nearby drug stores and offices they found and cared for many sufferers who had not had the attention of physicians.

In a little while the fire apparatus left, the last of the ambulances had taken away its load and the whole neighborhood was in command of officials.

Mayor Hylan came on the heels of the Police Commissioner, whom he directed at once to issue a proclamation calling upon every person who had information which might be of the slightest assistance to the police to communicate it at once to headquarters or any police station. He followed this with an announcement that he would call a special meeting of the Board of Estimate today to offer a reward—probably $10,000—for the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the explosion.

Looks as if Cyclone Had Passed.

After that there came a small army of officials, investigators, inspectors, giving the last touch of strangeness to that important little Wall Street block that an hour before had been going calmly about its usual business. The usual crowds were gone, except where they massed at corners, peering over the shoulders of soldiers and policemen.

Morgan's and the Assay Office looked as if they had borne the full force of a cyclone that had swept the whole block. Heavy stone buildings were scarred and pitted as though machine guns had rained missiles point blank upon them.

The bronze statue of George Washington, in front of the Sub-Treasury, was sprayed with bits of metal, and a bronze bas relief, showing Washington kneeling in prayer, was wrenched loose from the front of the building by the force of the explosion.

There were uniformed men with rifles, officers with pistols slung from their belts, a swarm of detectives with their badges, George Lamb, head of the local division of the Justice Department's Investigation Bureau, with his men; heavily armed men in civilian attire before the Sub-Treasury and the Assay Office and bare, littered offices seen through yawning gaps in masonry where once windows had been.

And among them all wandered men with bandaged heads or hands or legs who either had remained after treatment or had begged their way back because of business to transact.

Now and then some half-frantic woman would beg the police for information they were not in a position to furnish. Again men would meet with a great handshake, as though both had emerged from a battle and each would tell the other of what he conceived to be the miracle of his escape. Not a man or woman who viewed it all, either at close range or from a vantage point of some neighboring skyscraper but marked the uncanniness of it and yet the lifelike resemblance to some once busy place where some swirling flurry of a war had passed.

Telephone Exchanges Taxed.

Long before the police work—described by many who saw it as of a brilliant quality—was well organized, the shock of the disaster had run through the whole city and was spreading sorrow throughout the nation.

The peak of the morning's telephone business in the downtown exchanges was passed and many operators were starting for their luncheons when the sudden burden of a city's fright and anxiety came upon the system. The system had been scarcely damaged by the explosion and messengers were sent scurrying about to recall the girls starting for lunch. Emergency forces were dispatched to those exchanges upon which fell the heaviest load of calls and a special station was opened in the Schulte store a few yards from the explosion, where free calls were allowed all who had need of them.

About 4 o'clock, after the police unquestionably had the situation in hand and it appeared there was to be no aftermath of outrage, the soldiers were withdrawn. Meantime Ray Baker, Director of the Mint, advised in Philadelphia by the Treasury Department in Washington of the occurence, had reached the Assay Office, inspected it and found no need for military protection.

Long before the soldiers went the task of investigation was under way. An early report that a powder wagon of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company was in the neighborhood had been denied by the company, which had announced that the only wagon it had in New York at that hour should have been far uptown.

Workmen Repair Damages.

The Bureau of Combustibles of the Fire Department was searching its records to learn if any special permit had been granted for the carting of explosives in the neighborhood. Ordinarily such movements are forbidden between sunset and sunrise and at a late hour no record of any special exception to the rule was found. It was learned further that there were very few places in the city where even small quantities of explosives were being used in construction work and none of them anywhere in the general area of the financial district.

As building inspectors went through one after another of the structures which had been damaged to determine if they were safe, groups of workmen began timbering up doorways and windows that had been blown away and hustling plate glass companies started replacing shattered panes. Department of Justice men, agents of the District Attorney's office and members of the police special squads went minutely over the débris, gathering together every scrap of metal that might serve to establish the exact nature of the explosion.

Chief William J. Flynn of the Federal Secret Service was in Washington. He reached here at 10 o'clock last night to take charge of that end of the investigation. Meantime some of his men, reluctant at first to commit themselves, had reached the conclusion that only a great infernal machine could account for the nature and extent of the explosion and particularly for the iron slugs.

All the officials were puzzled and impeded for a time by the story of the red explosives wagon which was circulated persistently, but as hour after hour this failed of substantiation and the find of new bits of metal seemed to make the nature of the contrivance more and more certain they felt they were making progress.

There were hundreds of stories of witnesses and near-witnesses which they took down and patiently sorted. They did not say whether they had learned much of a positive nature that they expected to prove of great value.

Flight of Three Men Discounted.

They were much interested for a time in the story from several responsible sources of three men running away in a motor truck just after the explosion. They were told that one of these men, a coatless individual, was blood-spattered, and that the three jumped into a truck across from where the wagon had stood and rushed away.

The unlikelihood that any one concerned with the crime would have waited for an explosion, the terrible nature of which he had every reason to anticipate, or that any of the supposed conspirators would rely upon so slow a vehicle as a motor truck for their escape, soon became apparent, however. It was recognized that a premature explosion might account for the three being present when it happened, and, while they did not abandon that line of investigation, they did not regard it seriously.

Some of the police appeared more impressed by a middle-aged, foreign-looking woman in black who called at Headquarters late last night and asked to whom she might impart information which she believed might be of value. She was closeted some time with several police officials who declined to disclose the nature of her story.

All phases of the various investigations lasted until far into the night and will be resumed early this morning, by which time the authorities hope they will have got through much of the inevitable deadwood of false clues and conflicting stories and deceptive rumors and be able to make more direct progress.

It was said last night that they already were investigating the recent movements of every person in the city of known radical tendencies and that, unless definite evidence should lead elsewhere, they would continue this phase of their work until every person who might be expected to have any possible knowledge of the affair had been examined.

In this connection they hoped that the material amassed during the various recent investigations of radical propaganda and propagandists of all sort would be of help. They were mindful, too, that some of the more notorious adherents of revolutionary doctrines had been eliminated when they were deported on the Soviet "Ark" Buford and other vessels, and the question of a possible plotted revenge for their going was worth considering.

Chief Inspector Lahey early this morning announced that a cordon of 150 police would be stationed in the Wall Street district as a precautionary measure. Inspector William A. Coleman of Brooklyn will be in command. He has been temporarily transferred to the affected district and will remain there for the next three or four days. Inspector Lahey said Wall Street and adjacent streets would be electrically lighted every night.

Police lines are to be formed and will be maintained for at least three days. Persons doing business in the stricken area or who are employed there will have to produce business cards or credentials of some kind before they will be permitted to pass through.

Nature of Contrivance Puzzling.

Many experts today will try to establish with some degree of definiteness the nature of the infernal machine or bomb or whatever it proves to be.

One thing they are eager to decide is whether the contrivance actually was operated by clockwork or whether those who placed it where it went off lighted a fuse just before they started or if some acid eating through a thin metal partition was relied upon to detonate it. Believing that the whole thing probably stood in a box on an uncovered truck with only racks on its sides, they discount the fuse theory, since a smoking fuse, they think, would have been detected.

Another matter of speculation was whether the explosion occurred in the precise place its perpetrators had selected. Some of those who studied the whole occurrence believed it might have been their purpose to place it directly in front of the Broad Street entrance to the Morgan building, from which point Mr. Morgan's own office would have been more vulnerable. Driving about in the vicinity, according to this theory, the men got caught in a traffic jam, became fearful of their time device, whatever it was, and deserted their wagon as near to the Morgan offices as they could get.

Another theory that engaged the attention of the police and others but briefly was that a gigantic robbery, prompted by knowledge that nearly $1,000,000,000 in gold was being moved into the new Assay Office, was the motive behind the crime. The absence even of any attempt at looting and the small amount of bonds and stocks which disappeared, as well as the failure of the explosion to reach anywhere near vaults or safes, and the wild improbability that such an enterprise could be carried to fruition, all served to negative that theory.

Most of the damaged buildings were boarded up late last night and the whole district was policed with extraordinary vigilance, the department calmly taking on its added burden despite the long strain of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit strike.

HUNDREDS VISIT MORGUE.

Relatives and Friends Stay Far Into Night to Identify Bodies.

The scene of the Morgue last night resembled in many respects the night of the Slocum disaster. From the moment of the arrival of the first police automobile in the afternoon with bodies of victims of the Wall Street explosion men and women passed in steady line into the building. Many of the visitors declared relatives employed in the financial district had been reported as having been killed, but in most instances the police soon discovered that the persons sought had been taken to hospitals in the lower part of the city where the injured were cared for.

Occasionally a man or a woman, and sometimes small groups of both, identified the body of a victim, and policemen on hand speedily arranged for the removal of the body to the home of the relatives. Police Commissioner Enright earlier in the day had offered a force of policemen to the morgue to make a careful record of the clothing and other identififying marks of the victims, and the Lieutenant in charge soon found that such a record was necessary in most cases, because the victims had been badly burned or maimed.

Boy Seizes Auto and Takes 30 Injured to the Hospital

Among the notable instances of rescue work following the explosion was that of James Saul, a red-headed, seventeen-year-old office boy, employed by Robinson & Co., 26 Exchange Place.

Knocked over and cut by the force of the explosion as he was running through the street in front of the Morgan Building, he picked himself up and began to load injured into a nearby automobile which he commandeered. He made four trips to Broad Street Hospital, carrying more than thirty persons.

Upon his return he could not find the owner of the automobile and, fearing the latter might be among the injured, turned the car over to the police at the Old Slip station. He lives at 2,868 Riggs Avenue, Brooklyn.

EX-SERVICE MEN AID IN HANDLING CROWD

FORCE CAUGHT AT LOW EBB

The explosion occurred at a time when the force of detectives and policemen usually on duty in the financial district was at its lowest number in many years. Most of the reserves from the Old Slip Station were on duty over in Brooklyn at the Brooklyn Rapid Transit strike, and several detectives were patrolling the routes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system in automobiles.

Members of the Traffic Squad usually assigned to the intersections of streets in the district to regulate traffic were ordered to police the line of march of the parade of negro Odd Fellows uptown, and among those policemen was the man usually stationed outside the Sub-Treasury, at Wall and Broad Streets.

With the report of the explosion, however, the few policemen on patrol duty in the vicinity hurried to the scene, but they found they could make little headway in regulating the crowd of 10,000 men, women and boys who gathered within five minutes. The first policeman to arrive rushed to the signal box outside the Stock Exchange and sent in a call to the Old Slip Station for every available ambulance in the lower part of the city and for the small groups of policemen on reserve in the district south of Thirty-fourth Street.

Ex-Service Men Give First Aid.

Fumes from the explosive and dust blown from the street and the buildings lining Wall Street from Broad to William Street formed a dense haze for more than fifteen minutes after the explosion, and that made more difficult the work of the civilians, many of them veterans of the A. E. F., who aided the first group of policemen to care for the injured.

Witnesses later said that the movement to aid those who suffered injuries from flying particles of the truck in which the explosive is believed to have been carried and the rain of glass from adjacent buildings was the most spontaneous ever witnessed in this city. Former officers of the army and navy employed in the financial district are credited with having plunged into the work before the first policeman arrived and within two minutes after the explosion scores of the injured were being removed to the Broad Street, Volunteer, Hudson Street and Gouverneur Hospitals in automobiles and trucks of every description.

Upward of two hundred men, women and girls, many of the latter in their teens, suffered cuts from the glass which was falling from the building occupied by J. P. Morgan & Co., the Sub-Treasury building and the Assay Office, one door east, as well as the Mills and the other Buildings at the east end of the block.

Crowd of 40,000 Gathers.

Within ten minutes most of those who had suffered minor hurts were out of the way and then groups of men and women went about the work of providing first aid for the more seriously injured. By that time ambulances from the Volunteer and Broad Street Hospitals were on the scene, having brought most of their hospital staffs with them.

When the ambulance surgeons endeavored to go about their work of attending to the wounded, however, the crowd had increased to upward of 40,000, forming a dense mass which extended through Wall Street west to Trinity Church at Broadway, to Pearl Street, and north and south on Broad, Nassau and William Streets.

Several of the ex-service officers then held a conference with three of the first policemen on the scene, and as a result three of the former officers made their way to the steps of the Sub-Treasury, where one of them, under the statue of Washington, in stentorian voice called for all former service men to assemble there immediately.

Within five minutes upward of 500 young men had forced their way through the crowd and assembled on the sidewalk for orders. The former soldiers were divided into two battalions and, headed by one of the officers, the first battalion forced its way through the crowd to a point about opposite the scene of the explosion and started to drive excited onlookers in the direction of William Street. The second battalion slipped behind them and began to force the rest of the crowd in the direction of Broad Street.

Crowd Forced Back.

The men and women in front of them were so suddenly and densely massed, however, that the former sailors and soldiers found it difficult to clear a space until some of the more vigorous among them actually began to pummel those in the front ranks, and when they realized they were not making headway rapidly enough seized débris from the wrecked truck and pieces of stone which had fallen from the Assay Office and began to hurl them at those in the rear.

They were aided considerably in their efforts owing to the fact that the automobile owned by Dunham S. Beldon, a druggist of Newark, N. J., which was standing in front of the Wall Street side of the Morgan banking house when the explosion occurred, by this time was completely enveloped in flames, and the service men shouted to those in the rear that they'd better get out of the way as the gasoline tank of the machine was about to explode.

With this announcement all those near the burning machine began a concerted effort to get away from the vehicle, and as a result the whole mass became a flying wedge and thousands of those in the mass were lifted off their feet and forced back until the ex-service men had pretty well cleared the block.

Clear Field for Ambulance Surgeons.

There the former sailors and soldiers formed lines across the street by grasping one another's hands, and by the time the first squad of detectives and police reserves arrived in automobiles the ambulance surgeons had a fairly clear field in which to work.

That lasted only a few minutes, however, for thousands of the more curious made their way to the Broad Street entrance of the Mills Building, which runs "L" shaped behind the Morgan banking house into Wall Street, and other neighboring buildings having entrances on Exchange Place, William and Pine Streets, and thus evaded the cordon of A. E. F. veterans until in a few minutes the block of Wall Street between Broad and William Street again was choked with humanity.

This time, however, policemen with drawn nightsticks undertook to clear the street, and although they succeeded to a fairly satisfactory degree there was still much confusion, which greatly hampered the work of the firemen who came in response to an alarm turned in by a boy at Cedar and William Streets.

With the first report of the explosion employes of the Sub-Treasury and the Assay Office, many of whom were at lunch in nearby restaurants, hurried out to the fronts of the building on the Wall Street side, as well as in the rear on Pine Street. Within five minutes a considerable force of these men, armed with clubs, stood guard at the entrance, ready to prevent any effort to enter. They were reinforced soon after by half a dozen policemen from the reserve of the Old Slip station, who drew their pistols and stationed themselves at the entrance of the Sub-Treasury and the Assay Office.

Evidently officials of the Sub-Treasury were not satisfied with the protection thus afforded, for within a few minutes of the arrival of the policemen one of the officials communicated with the headquarters of the Department of the East on Governors Island and in a few minutes a battalion of regulars, including Company M of the Twenty-second Infantry, was dispatched to the Sub-Treasury. On their arrival the soldiers took over the work of protecting Government buildings.

150 Men Patrol Financial District.

Before the arrival of the soldiers Police Commissioner Enright, Chief Inspector Lahey and other high police officials had reached the scene and issued orders to get every available policeman to the spot. The reserves began arriving in automobile patrol wagons, touring cars and by subway and elevated, and in a short time the police had spread ropes across each end of the block on which the explosion occurred and began to drive the crowds back to Cedar Street on the north, to Broadway on the west and to Exchange Place on the south.

With the first squad of detectives to arrive from Police Headquarters came the entire force of the Department of Justice, headed by George Lamb, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation in this district, and the entire secret service force under Captain John Tucker. The detectives and the Government agents joined forces in a hunt for evidence of a bomb plot, and within a few minutes scores of persons in the vicinity were being questioned.

When Mayor Hylan arrived on the scene a few hours after the explosion he summoned Police Commissioner Enright and Chief Inspector Lahey to a conference on the sidewalk on the Wall Street side of the Morgan banking house. After the conference Mayor Hylan said there was every indication that the explosion had been caused by a bomb, but he explained that the police had not at that time obtained any definite information to that effect.

After the débris from the explosion had been cleared up and all persons other than officials engaged in investigating the explosion had been excluded from the police lines, Chief Inspector Lahey announced that arrangements had been made to assign 150 detectives and policemen to patrol the financial district during the night. It was learned later that Mayor Hylan had ordered a large detail of detectives and policemen assigned to the district night and day for a week at least to insure protection against possible acts of violence by Reds.

Information Bureau Established.

Red Cross ambulances loaded with volunteer workers appeared within half an hour, but by this time most of the injured had been removed to hospitals or attended by the ambulance surgeons and taken away by friends. Ambulances also were sent from the Department of the East on Governors Island and from the Navy Yard.

In the afternoon Mrs. Helen G. Timko, a volunteer Red Cross worker, who resides at 422 East Seventy-ninth Street, made a canvass of the hospitals and compiled a list of the dead and wounded taken to those institutions. Later she conferred with Chief Inspector Lahey at Broad and Wall Street and on her suggestion a policeman was stationed outside the Morgan banking house with the lists to inform relatives of persons working in the financial district whether their kin had been injured in the explosion.

It was the first time that such an information bureau had been established in a catastrophe here. Mrs. Timko said she was in charge of the Red Cross volunteer workers at the explosion at Morgans, N. J., where she established such a bureau with the aid of the police, and that previously she had been delegated by the officials of the Red Cross to establish a similar bureau for relatives and friends of victims of the sinking of the steamship Titanic.

southwest corner of Wall and Broad Streets, less than two hundred feet from the point of explosion.

Later it was learned that another permit had been issued by the Bureau of Combustibles for the receipt of dynamite at premises in the area of the explosion where excavation work is going on. The third permit holder was Andrew V. O'Neil, who is excavating at 96 Broad Street, about three blocks from the scene of the explosion.

Like the permit issued to George A. Fuller & Co. and to the Underpinning and Foundation Company, the contractors are allowed to "move" dynamite within the premises for the purpose of blasting. It was reported that inspectors from the Bureau of Combustibles checked up the dynamite allowed for storage by O'Neil on the premises and that the investigation revealed that none of it was missing.

The Construction Committee of the Stock Exchange, following rumors that dynamite which was being used to blow up old foundations on the site of the new addition to the Exchange building had blown up, issued the following statement:

> Robert J. Eidlitz, Treasurer of Marc Eidlitz & Son, Inc., the builders conducting the building operation for the New York Stock Exchange, states that he is positively informed by the President of the Underpinning and Foundation Company, who have the foundation work under way, that absolutely no explosive is in transit for the New York Stock Exchange job, and that there was none on the way for the Stock Exchange at any time today.

Brophy Examines Scene.

Fire Marshal Thomas J. Brophy, who conveyed the information about the permits to the detectives, was closeted with several Government and city officials in the vicinity of the explosion for several hours last evening before he went to Police Headquarters to discuss the matter with members of the bomb squad. He was accompanied by Fire Commissioner Thomas J. Drennan, Chief Inspector Lahey and several other officials.

While the conference was on in Chief Inspector Lahey's office Fire Commissioner Drennan came out and declared that investigation by inspectors of the Bureau of Combustibles had revealed that all contractors in the city permitted to have dynamite on premises where they are excavating were found to have the amount of the explosives called for under their permits. He said it was his impression that each contractor was permitted to have upward of 25 pounds of the explosives on hand, and when they use any of it they are required to make a report of the amount used to the inspector from the Bureau of Combustibles.

The Fire Commissioner explained that the entire force of clerks and inspectors in the Bureau of Combustibles had been put to work checking up stores of dynamite in the city and that both the Fire Marshal and the head of the Bureau of Combustibles had made reports to him which he will turn over to Mayor Hylan this morning.

He was asked if he believed the explosion was due to a bomb, and he replied: "We are endeavoring to ascertain facts and are not giving out theories."

Later Chief Inspector Lahey came out of the conference with a statement signed by Gilbert C. Smith, a real estate dealer and restaurant proprietor at 217 Broadway, who lives at 21 East Twenty-first Street, and John Furlong, who gave the same business address. The statement as read by Inspector Lahey follows:

"At about 11 o'clock this morning I was standing at the corner of Vesey Street and Broadway when a large red automobile truck with a red trailer and in large blue letters the name du Pont Powder Works, crossed Broadway at Vesey Street and passed into Ann Street to Nassau Street. We both remember that the trailer had five hogsheads on it which we presumed contained powder."

Various Stories of Explosives Truck.

The statement was in line with other statements of the kind made to the police in the course of the day, which indicated that a vehicle of some kind containing high explosives passed through streets in the lower part of the city a short time before the explosion.

"We are piecing together the statements of more than one hundred persons we interviewed at the scene of the explosion," continued Inspector Lahey, "and as yet we have arrived at no conclusion. Their statements are so conflicting that it will only be by a process of elimination that we will be able to arrive at something tangible.

"So far we have established that a horse-drawn racked truck, marked 'Powder' or 'Dynamite,' was in that vicinity about the time of the explosion. We have learned from a boy on Broadway that about ten minutes before the explosion he saw a yellow or red colored horse-drawn truck marked 'Explosives,' going south on Broadway, near Wall Street.

"A man just before he died in the Broad Street Hospital told one of the physicians there that he saw a red wagon explode and upset. It was a racked truck."

Detectives under Captain Coughlin of the Detective Bureau believe that a man who stood on the wooden structure over the sidewalk in front of the site of the new Stock Exchange Clearing House, at the southwest corner of Wall and Broad Streets, can reveal the identity of the owner of the vehicle in which the explosive in believed to have been carried.

Ray Cark, foreman for Albert A. Volk, contractor in charge of the construction, told the detectives that about fifteen minutes after the explosion he ordered a well dressed man who was among several hundred that climbed to the top of the structure to get down to the street. The man, Clark said, refused to go at first, saying, "That's my horse over there, and I can't go for a while," pointing to the animal killed in front of the Assay Office. The man disappeared soon after, Clark said, while the foreman was endeavoring to find a detective to question him.

While the police and Government agents were awaiting an examination of the books of the Bureau of Combustibles, which issues permits for the removal of explosives in the city, George Lamb, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice in this city, had joined forces with Captain Coughlin and Captain John Tucker, of the Secret Service, in an effort to determine whether the explosion was due to a bomb or an accident.

Caused by Bomb, Says Burns.

William J. Burns, head of the Burns Detective Bureau, hurried to the scene of the explosion and after making a cursory investigation of the condition of the street when the explosion occurred he said:

"There is not the slightest doubt that it was a bomb which caused the explosion. It might be closer to the truth to say that it was a wagon load of bombs. From my investigation I am certain that the bomb was in the wagon which was destroyed. There is no other reasonable theory.

"The pieces of window weights picked up in the office buildings, where they had been hurled by the explosive, could have had no other connection with the disaster than to be parts of a bomb or bombs used as projectiles by some one who figured closely to do the most possible damage they could imagine."

Soon after Mr. Burns made that statement Frank Francisco, an investigator of the Department of Justice who was among the first of the Government investigators to arrive at the scene, declared that he did not believe the explosion was the result of an attempt on the life of any of the members of the Morgan banking firm. He said it was one of the most powerful explosions in the history of this part of the country and asserted that there were indications that it was due to an accident.

It was decided to send Government agents and detectives into the office buildings and throngs in the vicinity of the explosion to obtain information which might establish the explosion as a bomb plot, but it was admitted late last night that no definite evidence of the fact had been established.

It was known that from the start of the investigation of the explosion both the police and the Government investigators were inclined to the theory that Reds had placed a time bomb in the wagon. That theory was strengthened by the presence of several score pieces of iron sash weights found by the police in the street and in buildings in the vicinity soon after the explosion.

So strong was the inclination of the police in that respect that officials at Police Headquarters sent word of the explosion to District Attorney Swann in the Criminal Court Building, and soon after he appeared on the scene, accompanied by Chief Assistant District Attorney Talley.

After a conference with Police Commissioner Enright, Mayor Hylan and other city officials Mr. Swann ordered Mr. Talley to begin an immediate investigation of the cause of the accident. Later in the afternoon Mr. Talley, after a consultation with District Attorney Swann, issued the following statement:

"The explosion is too much of a coincidence to be accepted as an accident. The factors that lead me to this belief are that the time of the explosion was at 12:01, when probably the greatest damage could have been done; and the location of the explosion was midway between the Morgan offices and the Federal Treasury. This is our impression, gained by a study of the place and the wreckage with the first city officials to reach the scene, Mayor Hylan and Chief Inspector W. J. Lahey.

"One of the first things I did was to direct that all the sweepings of the immediate pavement and the debris on floors and in windows of the damaged buildings be retained by the Street Cleaning Department for a minute examination. It is hoped that some trace or clue to the cause of the explosion may be obtained from this source, as there appears to be nothing else tangible left by the explosion on which to work, except a quantity of slugs believed to be broken window weights. The Fire Marshal was directed to take charge of these.

Slugs Puzzle Investigators.

"It was though these slugs might have formed part of the bomb, and it was also suggested that they might have come from windows that were damaged by the explosion. But all appeared to be old fragments, apparently broken some time ago, and police who were sent through nearby buildings reported that there were no similar fragments to be found and that the slugs were not such as those used in window irons in modern buildings. Some of the slugs were approximately three inches in length."

Mr. Talley said that a number of witnesses rounded up on the street by the police were unable to add anything of value to the investigation. Most of these persons could tell only the effects of the shock of the crash. One said he had seen an auto truck going down Broadway, toward Wall Street, on the sides of which was marked "dynamite." This was a few minutes previous to the explosion. This, however, appears to have no connection with the vehicle that stood near to the Morgan office, for that was a horse and wagon. All that was left of it was a shaft. The horse lay in the street disemboweled. Continuing Mr. Talley said:

"Martin J. White, a contractor at 165 Broadway, told of the effects of the explosion at Broadway and Wall Street, two short blocks from Wall and Broad Streets. Mr. White was on a Broadway car, which he says was thrown from the tracks by the shock. All the passengers fled from the car and took refuge in the Trinity Church yard.

"One of the theories advanced by spectators was to the effect that the destroyed truck may have been engaged in transferring explosives without having a proper permit. If that were so the persons responsible for sending it out may be indicted for homicide."

One of the witnesses questioned at the place of the explosion told a story that indicated a bomb suspect had stood near by to witness the effects of the expected explosion. This witness, whose name Mr. Talley did not recall, was employed at reconstruction work on the building at the southwest corner of Broad and Wall Streets, directly opposite the offices of Morgan & Co.

"Over the walk where this work is in progress a protective scaffold had been built, and we learned from this worker that he saw a stranger on top of this roof immediately preceding the explosion," said Mr. Talley. "The workman told us he had intercepted the stranger, who had no business to be on the scaffold, and had asked him why he was there. He said the man replied: 'I am looking for my horse.'"

"Considerable light will be thrown on the matter as soon as the owner of the wagon is found. If it is learned that the wagon was traveling through the streets without an explosive license or permit we will ask for an indictment for homicide."

Assistant District Attorney Dineen, with a corps of stenographers and process servers, continued the investigation started by Mr. Talley until a late hour last night. He said it had been impossible to get statements from some of the injured in the hospitals, because physicians had advised against it, but that this feature of the investigation will be taken up today.

"We particularly wish to get a statement from one of the employes of J. P. Morgan & Co., who is in St. Vincent's Hospital," said Mr. Dineen. "This employe suffered a broken leg from the explosion, as he was crossing Wall Street. He may be able to tell us something of value."

Enright Gets Various Clues.

While the District Attorney was questioning several witnesses gathered up by detectives, Police Commissioner Enright said that several of the detectives had made important disclosures to him which necessitated careful investigation by them. It was learned later that the Commissioner had been informed that three men had been seen running away a minute after the explosion and that they were believed to have leaped into an automobile, containing four roughly dressed men outside the old Custom House at William and Wall Streets, now occupied by the National City Bank.

"I do not wish to be understood that I am convinced entirely that this explosion is the result of dynamite loaded in a wagon," said the Commissioner. "I have never said that it was and I do not wish it understood that the police are working exclusively on any one theory.

"My men have found slugs of cast iron all around the disaster. They are broken sash weights, but they did not come from windows in the vicinity, as far as we can find out.

"We are investigating very thoroughly the theory that this has been the work of bomb plotters. We have been working on the reported escape of the two men at William and Wall Streets. We have about thirty leads thus far, which we are following up."

There was a report in circulation during the afternoon that a city ordinance prohibited the transportation of explosives in this city between sunrise and sunset. Chief Inspector Lahey, when asked about the matter last night at Police Headquarters said:

"A person qualified to handle explosives can receive a permit at the Bureau of Combustibles for the transportation of explosives through the city at any time of the day or night, under certain conditions prescribed by the bureau."

It was learned last night that as the result of the conference earlier in the day between detectives of the Bomb Squad and Chief Lamb of the Department of Justice and Captain Tucker of the Secret Service, detectives were detached from every precinct in the city to make a careful canvass of all the stables in their precincts in an effort to establish the identify of the owner of the horse and truck blown to pieces by the explosion.

Under a special order issued by Commissioner Enright late in the afternoon every policeman on patrol duty in the five boroughs of the city was ordered to aid the detectives in their quest, but it was declared at Police Headquarters that up to midnight no report had been received of a missing vehicle of the kind.

In the crossfire of investigations instituted during the day it developed that two experts from the office of the Bureau of Mines in this city had been summoned by the head of the Department of Justice to make a minute examination of the depression in the asphalt pavement in front of the Assay Office made by the explosion.

In the depression, which was about eight inches deep, inspectors from the Bureau of Combustibles found several slugs of sash weights such as were hurled through the windows of all the buildings in the vicinity. The hole, which was about forty inches in width, was coated with a yellowish-brown layer, which, the experts from the Department of Mines declared, resembled very much the stain left by picric acid, which is used in TNT.

Says Missiles Indicate Bomb.

After the Government experts had made a careful inspection of the depression, Inspectors of the Bureau of Combustibles carefully gathered up all the top layer for chemical analysis. Last night Dr. William F. Coyle, who is attached to the Bureau of Combustibles, declared he was inclined to the belief that the explosion was due to a bomb.

He said the finding of pieces of sash weight in the hole similar to those found in the Morgan banking house, in the Assay Office and other buildings in the neighborhood, strongly indicated the fact. He also asserted that it was hardly likely that all the scars on the walls of the banking house, the Government buildings and the adjacent buildings east of Wall Street could have been made by the explosion of a quantity of dynamite or TNT alone.

Other officials investigating the explosion called attention to the fact that in none of the buildings affected by the explosion were the window casings dislodged, and therefore there was little likelihood of the sash weights coming from that source. One official pointed out that sash weights of the kind were not used in any of the office buildings, and that all the windows in the Assay Office open on hinges, allowing the windows to swing inside like doors.

It was learned at the office of the Department of Justice last night that an expert on explosives employed by the Hercules Powder Company called on Chief Lamb, head of the Bureau, in the evening and said he had made an examination of the depression in the pavement in front of the Assay Office and was convinced the explosive was a mixture of picric acid and dynamite.

He declared the general impression that dynamite makes a large hole in the ground when it explodes was erroneous, and that, considering the fact that the explosive evidently was lying on the floor of the wagon when it exploded, there was an air cushion of at least four feet under it which would have had the effect of permitting the explosive to expand before the full effect was impressed on the pavement.

Agents of the Department of Justice, it was learned, interrogated William Gluckman, a messenger boy, of 584 Concord Avenue, the Bronx, who declared he saw a wagon marked "Explosives" pass the corner of Broadway and Vesey Street at 11:45 in the morning. It is believed the boy is the same one referred to by Chief Inspector Lahey last night in his statement at Police Headquarters.

The Department of Justice officials also received reports from Police Headquarters about the statement made by Gilbert and Furlong, the real estate men, in which they declare they saw a wagon marked "dynamite" pass Broadway from Vesey Street and enter Ann Street, directly to the east of Vesey Street.

Save Shreds of Clothing.

Detective Sergeants James J McCoy, Irving O'Hara, Henry Oswald and James Traynor of the Bomb Squad early in the afternoon gathered up all the shreds of clothing found in the street in the vicinity of the explosion. It was said the men were ordered to do so by Captain Coughlin, head of the Detective Bureau, and that an effort will be made to learn whether anybody was in the horse-drawn vehicle at the time of the explosion, through pieces of shattered cloth of a poor material found on the steps of the Assay Office by Government employes after the work of removing the injured had been ended.

The clothing shreds found by the detectives filled six large burlap bags, and detectives were set to work in Police Headquarters immediately to make a minute record of each. The detectives also found many small articles of jewelry, most of which had been broken by the force of the explosion. Several bundles of men's and women's hats also were carried to Police Headquarters in a patrol wagon. Inspector Lahey explained that the police were of the belief that most of them were thrown out of offices long after the explosion by cleaners.

All that remained of the wagon which is believed to have contained the explosive were the axles, a few shattered spokes and a small heap of tangled metal. All were taken to Police Headquarters. The forty pounds of broken sash weights retrieved by the police were removed to the office of the Bomb Squad.

While detectives were searching for witnesses they learned that somebody had placed a black metal box in an automobile owned by a man named Babb, which was standing in front of 52 Wall Street when the explosion occurred. They hurried down to the automobile and found Babb surrounded by a throng of men, women and boys. He pointed to a black box in his automobile, and declared he thought it was a bomb. One of the detectives carried the box to the Old Slip station. An inspector from the Bureau of Combustibles later opened the box and discovered it contained a dry battery. The owner of the automobile subsequently learned that a friend had placed the battery in his car soon after the explosion.

HOSPITALS RUSH AID TO VICTIMS

Every Relief Agency in the City Responds to the Call for Help.

SCENE LIKE BATTLEFIELD

SEVEN HOSPITALS FILLED

Trucks, Automobiles and Taxicabs Pressed Into Service as Ambulances —Nearly All the Injured Burned.

The echo of the explosion's roar had scarcely been lost in the agony cries of the victims before the city's relief agencies were at work—either in the shattered street itself, where girls and men, young and old, were writhing and dying, or in downtown hospital wards, where doctors and nurses were hurrying preparations for the stream of injured hundreds that later poured in.

Literally only minutes elapsed between the detonation and the coming of help to those hurt. Like a flash the message went into Police Headquarters and out again and in a score of directions flew the call to serve. It snapped into Volunteer Hospital and into Broad Street Hospital, they heard it in Gouverneur and in New York and Bellevue. The alarm sounded in Fire Headquarters; City Hall got it. And they got it in Red Cross Headquarters. The summons was:

"Come!" And those who serve in such an emergency responded like the nation went to war—fully and quickly.

And when the nurses—droves of them heard the call—and the physicians—some of them came from their homes—arrived in Wall Street the suggestion of a throw-back from the war was strengthened. Most of them had served overseas and to them Wall Street must have provoked a memory—the shattered buildings, the paneless windows and the victims—some too still, some writhing, some silently in agony, others crying out —young and old, girl and man, clerk and banker.

Because of the nearness of Volunteer Hospital to the tragedy, the first medical aid to arrive came in charge of Dr. George Vaughn, Surgical Director of the hospital. At Nassau Street the Volunteer Hospital ambulance came to an abrupt stop. Dr. Vaughn and a young interne, satchels in hand, sprang out.

A Surgeon's Description.

"Stretched face downward, an elderly woman, her head, the back of her skull, depressed. A foot away was a man. He seemed young. One leg, the left one, hung by a shred. He was bleeding profusely. I saw other forms down the street. I knew that additional aid would be there in seconds and I ran down the street. I found the forms to be bodies, so I turned back for the man and the woman.

"As I came running back I saw an old gentleman turn the corner of Nassau Street. I remember that he looked like a deacon. He carried an umbrella, a large one. He saw the man lying in the street. Even as I watched he tore off his necktie, stooped down and tied the tie tightly around the man's leg, above the cut. Then he inserted his umbrella under the tie bandage and made a tourniquet. Then he walked off, as though his act were a matter of everyday occurrence.

"We hurried to the hospital. The Red Cross, and they did wonderful work today, was already functioning. A telephone message had come to Volunteer offering as much of anything in the hospital supply line as we needed. Thirty minutes later a Red Cross man had delivered all the supplies that we needed. It seemed only a matter of minutes before eight Red Cross nurses had come hurrying into the hospital and reported for duty, and directly afterward eight nurses in an automobile came down from Presbyterian Hospital.

"Those nurses were bully. They went to work without a word. And they worked until the work was done. Telephone messages enabled us to recall for service all the members of our staff who were off for the day, and in addition the Police Department dispatched to Volunteer five police surgeons.

Victims Exposed to Terrific Heat.

"Arrangements were just completed when the injured began to arrive. I was astonished at the high morale of the injured. Many of them were suffering from terrible hurts, but none of them whimpered. I was struck by the evidence of terrific heat which all of the injured appeared to display. Scarcely one of them but showed that he or she had been exposed to a heat quite out of the ordinary. And many of the victims —I marked this especially among the girls—had had their finger nails burned down to the quick. I am quite unable to account for this.

"Then there was one man who had 200 distinct puncture wounds scattered all over his body. They had been made by penetrations of splintered glass. He appeared to have an exceptionally bad case of smallpox."

With the inpouring of the injured, Volunteer became a base hospital and a dressing station in one. Of the more than 100 persons treated, eighteen of those who remained at the hospital last night were in a serious condition, and the cases of twenty-four others, listed as minor injuries, were described by physicians as cases which would require surgical dressing and medical attention for some days to come.

Volunteer's three ambulances got on the scene a minute or two after being called. Maurice Davies, Superintendent of the hospital, who rode on the second ambulance, quickly saw that three ambulances were not enough, and, unaware that there had been a general call for hospital carriers and physicians, directed that trucks and automobiles be commandeered to transport the less seriously burned and otherwise injured persons to the hospital.

When the three ambulances dashed back with three victims each the six visiting physicians, twelve internes and twenty-four nurses at the hospital were told to prepare for a great rush of casualties. It was fortunate, Mr. Davies said last night, that the hospital's visiting physicians were in the building at the time. Several operations were performed immediately, the less seriously injured were examined and as quickly weeded out and turned over to internes and the work of handling the victims who arrived by the truck load proceeded smoothly, albeit the comparatively small hospital building was crowded to its doors.

"When I reached Wall Street in the second ambulance," Mr. Davies said, "I thought I was looking at a battle scene or a massacre. Dead and injured were lying in the street, a motor car was overturned in the middle of Wall Street, glass was thick in the street, and the crowd which gathered was so dense that it is a wonder that the arriving ambulances did not cause additional casualties.

"The ambulances literally had to plow their way through the crowd, and this greatly hampered our speed, but I feel that we did a good job nevertheless. Our ambulances went to and fro through William Street, narrow at all times, and made more so yesterday by the great crowd running toward and away from the scene of the explosion. When I got to Wall Street glass was still falling from the buildings. Persons were dodging here and there, the police were busily roping off the immediate neighborhood. Some glass shattered just in front of one of the ambulances as it drove up.

"I only made one trip, that in the second ambulance, in order to determine what help we would need at the hospital. On this trip we picked up three men, two of whom died on arrival at the hospital. The other is seriously injured.

"I told as many policemen as I could find in my haste to get back to the hospital to send as many of the less seriously injured to the hospital in trucks and autos, telling them that the ambulances would take care of the more serious cases."

Each ambulance from Volunteer Hospital made more than a dozen trips between the hospital, at Beekman and Water Streets, and Wall Street. One of several trucks which carried victims to the hospital carried more than twenty less seriously injured. Taxicabs and other vehicles were commandeered as temporary ambulances and for more than twenty minutes there came a steady stream of victims to the emergency ward. There physicians examined them quickly, the stretcher cases were dispatched to the wards and operating rooms, a nurse assigned to each which appeared serious. About an hour after the explosion nurses and private physicians summoned by the Red Cross had reached the hospital.

Volunteers Arrive at Hospital.

It was estimated that about seventy-five volunteer nurses and physicians visited the hospital during the afternoon to ask whether their services were needed. Those the Red Cross officers reachd first were assigned to the cases in the wards, providing a nurse and a physician for each of the ward cases. There were eighteen of these.

The other volunteers worked in the emergency wards. By 5 o'clock last evening the hospital had settled down to its normal routine, those who suffered minor injuries had been sent to their homes, many attended by one of the volunteer nurses, and the hospital was able to furnish a list of casualties.

Four of the hundred or more victims removed to Volunteer Hospital died on arrival or soon after they had reached the hospital. The bodies of two men, a sixteen-year-old boy and an elderly woman were removed to the Morgue.

"Within twenty minutes after Atlantic Division headquarters of the American Red Cross received word of the explosion from Police Headquarters a scores of nurses," said a Red Cross official last night, "half a dozen truckloads of surgical dressings, medical supplies and hospital equipment, and thirty-five field directors of the organization, men skilled in handling crowds and with considerable emergency experience, were on their way to the scene of the disaster.

Field Directors Get the Call.

"The thirty-five Field Directors of the Atlantic Division, men who direct Red Cross activities at the various army hospitals and camps in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, were holding a roll call conference at division headquarters in East Twenty-third Street when the report of the disaster was received. The entire force, under command of Colonel H. O. S. Heistand, until a few months ago Adjutant General at Governors Island, was hurried to the scene. Colonel Heistand at once established co-operation with the police and, at their suggestion, detailed two of his men to each of the half-dozen hospitals that were receiving the injured. At these hospitals the Red Cross set up an information service, obtaining the names and addresses of the injured and getting in touch with relatives of the latter by telephone and Red Cross messengers. None of the many services rendered by the Red Cross was more appreciated than this activity, which won high praise from the police and relatives of the injured.

"Red Cross headquarters, in East Twenty-third Street, was a clearing house for the names of the injured. This service will be maintained throughout the night."

Tales of the Injured.

But few of those who lay in the wards of Volunteer could tell what happened.

"A piece of ceiling fell in on me as I stood in the hall of 36 Wall Street," said Patrick Fanning of 2,601 Bainbridge Avenue, the Bronx, who was treated for a scalp wound and went home. "I was knocked unconscious, and when I came to I noticed that the clothing of two men—I forget whether they were in the hall or out in the street—was burning. I tried to put out the fire, but in bending over the men, who were huddled together, I fell over unconscious again, I guess, and was brought here."

Fanning had fully recovered from his shock when he left the hospital, but still was unable to remember whether his attempt at rescue was made in the hall of the building or the street. His case was typical of others, and Captain Arthur Carey of the homicide squad and agents of the Department of Justice, who visited Volunteer Hospital soon after the explosion to get first-hand stories of the tragedy, found it difficult to elicit coherent replies to their questions.

Nearly all of the victims removed to Volunteer suffered from severe shock.

"The sidewalk came up and hit me," said one man, as he smiled through bandages. "I thought I was in Maiden Lane, but they tell me the explosion took place at Broad and Wall."

His brief account of what had happened was typical of stories told by others. One man, however, Gus Ohlsen, an automobile accessory dealer of Jamaica, L. I., said he was convinced that the explosion was caused by TNT, the action of which he had once witnessed.

"I was knocked from my automobile," he said. "I had stopped to buy a few cigars and had just started off in my car when the explosion occurred. I felt as if a giant hand had picked me up and thrown me with great force to the street. My head was badly hurt, and I suppose I was knocked out for a minute or two.

"I once saw a small amount of TNT explode, and since its action is different from that of dynamite I am led to believe that some of this explosive went off.

Pathetic Scenes in Wards.

There were several pathetic scenes in the wards of Volunteer Hospital when relatives of victims were notified by the Red Cross.

Esther and Amelia Hugher, sisters, suffered severe burns and lacerations from which they may die. Their mother, who hurried from her home, 930 St. Nicholas Avenue, the Bronx, was hysterical when she reached the hospital.

"The girls just went to work," she cried, "and here they are at the point of death."

Physicians who questioned Mrs. Hugher were unable to learn where the daughters were employed, and because of their extreme condition no attempt was made to question her daughters on this point. It was also impossible to learn what they knew of the explosion.

In adjacent hospital cots lay the Misses Margaret and Charity Bishop, twins, 18 years old, daughters of Mrs. Margaret Bishop, a widow, of 1,040 Park Place, Brooklyn. Both girls suffered severe burns and lacerations, and physicians thought last night there was little hope of Margaret Bishop's recovery. They held out more promise of her twin sister's recovery to Mrs. Bishop when she reached the hospital last night, but Mrs. Bishop was told that her daughter would doubtless carry the marks of her injuries for some years.

"The Bishop sisters are the sole support of their mother," said John Bishop of Plainfield, N. J., uncle of the twins, who came from his home yesterday afternoon. "Charity was in the employ of Brown Brothers & Co., bankers and brokers, and Margaret worked for the First National Bank. It was their habit to meet every day for lunch.

In spite of his age and a deep wound on his back, Pietro Negri, 60, who gave his address as the Pennsylvania Hospital, aided several other victims before he collapsed himself. Physicians said Mr. Negri apparently did not know he was wounded when he recovered consciousness—his lapse had been due to loss of blood—and wanted to know whether a man dressed in a corduroy suit who had fallen on his face ahead of Mr. Negri had reached safety.

Mr. Negri suffered from shock as well as from the wound, which hequired fifteen stitches. Physicians said they thought he would be able to leave the hospital for his home within a few days.

The last rites of the Church were administered to the three men and the elderly woman before they died by the Rev. Hugh Dalton of St. Francis Xavier's Church, in West Sixteenth Street. Othey priests from St. Andrew's Church, who made the rounds of the downtown hospitals in taxicabs, administered the last rites to several at Volunteer and other hospitals.

Broad Street Cares for 173.

Broad Street Hospital took care of 173 persons, more patients than have ever been in the hospital at one time. These were rushd to th building in ambulances, in commandeered automobiles, on wooden doors and other contrivances which could be put into use within a few minutes' notice, and they were treated just as quickly as the hands and brains of the attaches of the hospital could work. Of the number attended 125 were so slightly injured that their names were not taken.

Situated in the financial district, about four blocks from the scene of the explosion, the hospital was one of the first to receive the injured. About ten minutes after surgeons in the building heard the blast of the explosion, eighty-three patients were being brought in on stretchers. Dr. Aspinal Judd, attending surgeon, and Dr. Lefferts A. McClelland, Chairman of the Medical Board, who were performing operations when the explosion occurred, finished their tasks as quickly as they could, to take care of the victims.

One of the first patients taken into Broad Street Hospital gave the name of David Worth Bagley. It was supposed at first that he was the brother of Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, a naval officer of that name, but it was learned later that the latter is at The Hague serving as a naval attaché. The Bagley injured in the explosion was only slightly hurt and left the hospital after receiving treatment.

Copper Shares Burned.

A representative of the firm of Harris, Winthrop & Co. learned that O'Brien, their messenger, had lacerations on the legs and arms and that 100 shares of Anaconda Copper which he had in his back pocket had been burnt to a crisp.

Nicholas De John, 23 years old, of 208 East Twenty-first Street, a messenger for Parrish & Co., 115 Broad Street, was carrying a roll of bonds and currency aggregating $15,000 when the explosion occurred. He was thrown on his back and received a severe wound in the stomach. The bonds fell to the ground, but he had presence of mind to seize them and stuff them in his pocket. He carried the valuables to the hospital.

Mrs. Lena Faick, who is in the hospital with her husband, John, reported that her pocketbook had been torn from her by the explosion. In it, she said, were passports for herself and husband. They intended sailing for Genoa on the Cretic tomorrow. They recently came from their home in Sacramenta, Cal., and were stopping at the Adelphi Hotel, Tenth Avenue and Twenty-third Street. Street.

Virtually every patient in the hospital had been burned, Dr. Judd said, but most of the burns were superficial. The clothing of the majority of the wounded men and women was badly burned.

The four surgeons, Drs. Judd, McClelland, McKevin and Kinlock, performed more than thirty operations, most of them for fractures. A piece of steel, bent from impact, was removed from a patient's heart, Dr. Judd said. Another victim's leg had been amputated by the force of the explosion as if cut off by a knife.

The force of the explosion, Dr. Judd said, must have been upward, because a great many of the injured persons whom he saw had the palms of their hands and the soles of their feet torn off.

In Uptown Hospitals.

The scenes in the hospitals further uptown were similar to those in the Broad Street and Volunteer institutions. More time was given to prepare for the unfortunates than in the hospitals in the immediate vicinity of the explosion, but it was the uptown hospitals which received the persons which had been overlooked or shut up in office rooms where some of the wounded had lain unnoticed for nearly two hours.

The New York Hospital, in Sixteenth Street, near Fifth Avenue, did not receive all of its patients from the explosion until nearly 3 o'clock. St. Vincent's Hospital resembled an emergency dressing station during the war.

The emergency receiving rooms in both these hospitals were crowded. Old men, the heads of departments of their firms, were huddled together with messenger boys. It was not a question of whether they could afford a private room; the one thought was to give first aid to every one and the nature of their wounds decided who would be treated first.

Hugh Fay, 16 years old, of 366 East 158th Street, a messenger boy, in New York Hospital, was suffering from multiple contusions of the entire body. He said he wished he could forget what he saw. He related that some one had picked him up and placed him on a window sill where he saw "men bleed to death and suffering more than possible." He said he sat there waiting for his turn to receive attention, but that every one thought he was just a "looker-on" until he fainted.

force were cut, some more or less seriously, by flying glass.

"None of our partners was in any way injured, except that Junius S. Morgan was slightly cut on the hand. All our large windows on the first floor and some on the second floor were blown in. The office will be ready for business tomorrow morning."

Later Mr. Lamont said:

"From what we have learned I am inclined to believe that the explosion was due merely to an accident. There are no reasons that we can find that would lead to a premeditated bombing. I can see nothing to be gained by such an act. Circumstances of the occurrence surely do not point to an attempt to wreck the Morgan offices.

"If anybody really plotted destruction of our building, I believe that we would have been sent the warning that is usual in such instances. And we have not been threatened in any manner. I believe the explosion was due to nothing more than an unfortunate accident to a dray loaded with explosives which I am informed had arrived on the site of the Stock Exchange Building addition across the street from our offices."

Wire Screens a Shield.

Mr. Morrow, who came out on the steps soon after the explosion, said he believed that a large loss of life in the Morgan offices had been prevented by the steel wire screens in each of the large windows. These screens, which were of one-eighth-inch steel wire, were put in as a precaution when the building was built. They were bent and shattered, but held partly and undoubtedly checked the shower of broken glass.

Arthur M. Anderson, head of the bond department, had a narrow escape. Mr. Anderson said he was sitting at his office desk, on the Wall Street side, with his back to the window when the explosion occurred. Except for a few scratches on head and hands, he was unhurt, but a large piece of glass was driven into the back of Mr. Anderson's chair for nearly half an inch. William Ewing, assistant manager of the bond department, was cut about the head and had one hand badly bruised.

The limestone front of the Morgan building on the Wall Street side was pitted in forty or fifty places by the shower of iron slugs which were projected broadcast by the explosion. These slugs, which were about two inches long and an inch and a quarter in diameter, were of the type used as window weights. They had been broken roughly, apparently by the used of a sledge hammer. One passed through the sash of one of the windows, making a circular hole such as might have been made by a projectile from a gun of corresponding calibre.

The interior of the Morgan offices was completely wrecked. The steel grill work, enclosing the various departments in a series of "cages," was demolished. Desks and chairs and office furniture of every kind were overthrown. Lighting fixtures were shattered. Only the ceilings, floor and counters on the first floor survived the explosion's force.

On the second floor the damage was slighter. Windows were broken, but the sweep of the blast was not so great as it was nearer the level of the street.

Borough President Henry H. Curran, accompanied by Rudolph P. Miller, Superintendent of Buildings, went to the Morgan offices within an hour. It had been feared that the ceilings might have been weakened or the building might have sustained structural damage to make it unsafe. Mr. Miller, after an inspection, satisfied himself that this was not the case and that the offices could be re-opened after the repairs necessary to put them in condition for business.

Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright, who went to the scene early, conferred with the members of the Morgan firm soon after his arrival. Commissioner Enright did not give the details of the discussion, but said that the members of the firm had informed him that the explosion was undoubtedly in the street.

Police Guard Offices.

Because of the great value in currency and securities in the Morgan offices, unusual precautions were taken against the admission of unauthorized persons into the Morgan building. Commissioner Enright at once detailed policemen to stand guard, which was maintained during the night.

Junius Spencer Morgan left the building about an hour and a half after the explosion, and had his injured hand treated at Broad Street Hospital. He left there immediately after receiving attention. He said he had been covered with glass, but had "escaped injury," as he put it.

The exact number of the Morgan employes who were injured was not obtainable, as many of the slightly cut were bandaged by surgeons without a record being made. In all seventeen employes of the firm were removed to hospitals. It was said that most of these were not seriously hurt.

Inquiry of members of the firm were met with the reply that there would be no comment upon the probable cause of the explosion. It was said informally that no threatening letters had been received and that the members of the firm were no better able to speculate on the possibility of an anarchistic plot than anybody else.

Frank Francisco, an agent of the Department of Justice, was one of the first Federal officials to begin an investigation. Mr. Francisco said he doubted if the explosion had been caused by a bomb or if it had been aimed at J. P. Morgan & Co.'s offices.

"If an attempt had been made upon the Morgan institution, the destruction would not have been so powerful on the other side of the street," he said. "All prior explosions show that they do not usually cover a large area, though I have never before seen so large an area of destruction. If an attempt had been made on the Morgan offices, I believe it would have been made at night, or some radical would have secured a position in the institution and planted an infernal machine inside."

Dr. William F. Doyle, Chief of the Bureau of Fire Prevention of the Fire Department, called attention to peculiar effects of the explosion. He pointed out that the dome in the Morgan building was peppered with small holes instead of being completely blown out as, he said, would be the usual case in so violent an explosion, which is usually followed by the upheaval of a great air cushion. He said that the lives of many employes in the Morgan offices were undoubtedly saved by the strong steel wire screening on the windows.

Dr. Doyle said his bureau intended to make a thorough investigation. "The condition of those who might be able to throw light on the cause of the explosion was so hysterical all the afternoon," he added, "that we have been unable to ascertain anything of real value concerning the circumstances of the catastrophe."

LIKE SNOW, SAYS MARKLE.

Injured Coal Operator Describes Glass Shower in Morgan Offices.

One of those who entered the doors of J. P. Morgan & Co. just a few minutes before the explosion was John Markle, the largest independent anthracite coal operator in this country. Mr. Markle came from the mines in Pennsylvania on Wednesday on his way to his Summer home on the North Shore of Long Island. He had business relations with the firm.

Mr. Markle was accompanied to the office by A. B. Jessup, a mining engineer and the general manager of the mines. Both were injured by flying glass, and subsequently went to St. Vincent's Hospital to be treated. At the time of the explosion Mr. Markle was seated within the space cut off from the public part of the offices by a stone railing. He was talking with Thomas W. Joyce, one of the department managers. Mr. Jessup stood outside the railing and about four feet away.

"What happened came without warning," said Mr. Markle. "There had been no intimation of danger and no time for the forming of impressions. Over the centre of the office and, I should judge, about sixty feet above the floor was the great colored glass dome. Along the Wall Street side of the building were the long windows of grille work and glass. There came the sound of a tremendous explosion and before any one could move the clatter of breaking glass. Then came a shower of glass. It is not strictly correct to say that one sound followed the other. They seemed to come all at once and there was no time to duck nor to seek to escape.

"I was sitting with my back to the Wall Street windows and Mr. Joyce was facing them. We got the glass from both directions, from the north windows and from the dome."

In describing that shower of glass Mr. Markle likened it to a snowstorm, and he added, as he touched a cut on the top of his head, that the flakes were much larger and more destructive than the snow variety.

"It is hard to say what did happen after that, but it was pandemonium," he continued. "I looked across at Joyce and he had been cut by the glass, for I noted that blood had run down his face and was staining his shirt. Jessup, too, was badly cut. I had been more fortunate in that I was sitting with my back to the Wall Street windows and also because my new felt hat was lying beside me. Almost unconsciously I grabbed it up and pulled it down on my head. Joyce was without this means of protection."

In the confusion which followed Mr. Markle and his engineer assisted Joyce toward the door, and then things steadied up a bit with the realization that the danger was over. The place was literally covered with wreckage, and scattered all about were bits of metal that had been part of the window ornamentation. The two men lost no time in getting a taxicab and driving to St. Vincent's Hospital. Mr. Markle said he had seen too many mine disasters not to know the value of timely first aid and antiseptic treatment.

Mr. Markle said that when he reached the street he gained the impression that the explosion had occurred near the middle of the street and that it had been caused by some high power explosive.

"As we came out of the doors I could see the havoc that had been wrought," he said. "There were at least three bodies in the street and there was the wreck of what had once been an automobile. I had the impression that the explosion had come from the automobile."

Mr. Markle, who has a knowledge of explosives, was asked if in his opinion the destruction had been caused by a bomb.

"There is no question in my mind," he replied, "that the explosion was caused by Bolsheviki."

Mr. Markle spent much of the afternoon in his apartments in the Hotel Plaza assuring friends that he had only been slightly cut by the shower of glass and receiving congratulations on his narrow escape.

Remick when we heard the explosion," said the broker. "Fortunately the heavy silk window shades were drawn over all of the windows on the Broad Street side of the floor except the end panel over the money crowd. This probably saved a great many men from serious injury due to falling glass, as only a few pieces succeeded in ripping their way through the shades.

"Some glass showered down about us in the money crowd and one or two persons were slightly cut. Almost before I had had time to ask Mr. Remick what had happened he looked out over the floor and said, 'I think it is time to ring the gong.' There wasn't any hesitation about it, and as soon as it was said he walked quickly up to the rostrum and rang it.

"Naturally some of the men on the floor surged toward the centre to avoid falling glass and for a moment there was a great deal of confusion, but the ringing of the gong calmed things down almost immediately."

Brokers Get Minor Injuries.

According to others who were on the floor at the time of the explosion, a few persons who started to run for the exits collided and fell down, while there was a wild scramble from the vicinity of the Reading post, in the middle of the floor, when it was suggested that the heavy dome overhead was liable to collapse. Several members were stunned and others were cut by flying glass, but as far as could be learned in the Exchange itself, none needed medical attention.

The wisdom of the Governor's ruling regarding deliveries was proved within a few moments after the crash, when the burden of telephone service in the financial district became too heavy for the local exchanges and the majority of calls were delayed. Out-of-town calls came in in such numbers that it was almost impossible for persons living in the suburbs to obtain service.

Reports began to come in to the Stock Exchange by 1 o'clock of missing securities, and an unofficial estimate placed these early in the afternoon at 2,574 shares of stock and $85,000 in bonds. That this estimate was far from the actual total was indicated later in the day by individual firms reporting losses aggregating at least $250,000, most of which was in negotiable bonds. Much of this, however, was returned by the persons who found it in various parts of the financial district. The total of missing securities will probably not be known for a day or two.

Trading To Be Resumed Today.

After the meeting of Stock Exchange Governors in the afternoon it was stated that trading would be resumed today at the usual hour of 10 o'clock, and that deliveries of stocks which were due yesterday must be completed today. Where deliveries are not completed until Monday the Governors ruled that they will carry three days' interest.

This ruling, of course, suspended the emergency action taken earlier in the day when all deliveries were suspended until Monday.

At the same time the Governors passed a resolution commending and thanking all of the employes of the Exchange for their action following the explosion. Elevator men stuck to their posts, as did the various doormen and other attendants.

Curb Market Also Suspends.

About 1 o'clock when officials of the Curb market learned formally that the Stock Exchange had suspended trading for the day dealings in that market were suspended. They had been greatly interrupted anyway because many of the brokers who were in the street at the time of the explosion deserted their posts and ran up to Wall Street, where some of them gave first aid to victims.

Trading on the Consolidated Exchange was also suspended and while the Cotton Exchange and the Produce Exchange remained open the amount of business done was less than usual. The foreign exchange market was virtually over by 1 o'clock.

The explosion brought about a paralysis of business throughout the financial district. After the first shock of the disaster many buildings in the immediate vicinity closed their doors. The big iron gates at the entrance to the Mills Building on Broad Street were dropped down, and the main entrance to the Bankers Trust Building was closed, the only entrance to the bank being through the narrow doorway on Pine Street. The Assay Office and the Sub-Treasury were abandoned as far as business was concerned, and guarded by cordons of police or soldiers. The same condition prevailed as to the smaller buildings, most of which had suffered seriously from the effect of the detonation. In practically all of the buildings slugs hurled through windows and doors were to be found.

Slug Misses Seward Prosser.

One of these slugs narrowly missed causing serious injury to Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers Trust Company. He was sitting in his office on the second floor of the trust company building when the explosion occurred. This office is at the corner of the building, the windows overlooking lower Wall Street. The force of the blast burst in the windows, and Mr. Prosser and his secretary were showered with glass, but with their backs toward the explosion the pieces for the most part fell harmlessly.

Through one of the windows a bar of metal half an inch thick and some three inches long was hurled. This passed close to the President of the Trust Company, went on through a bookcase and landed against the marble on the far side of the room. Owing to the sound of the explosion the fact that this piece of metal had been cast into the Bankers Trust Building was not discovered until some minutes later. So great was the concussion that glass from the window was driven clear through a desk and a mass of papers, cutting them to ribbons.

Falling glass was one of the dangers in the stricken section throughout the afternoon. While the buildings in the immediate neighborhood were stripped of glass, the explosion played freaks with more distant offices. Here and there windows far above the street level, some of them as high as the topmost floors of the Bankers Trust Building, were shattered in a way to leave large fragments hanging loosely and holding imminent danger to workers in the streets. The southeast corner of the Equitable Building, in which place is housed the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, was roped off because of the danger of falling glass, and the bank during most of the afternoon was inaccessible.

2 MESSENGERS KILLED WITH $170,000 IN BONDS

Securities, Charred and Torn, Are Scattered on Street—All but $20,000 Recovered.

Two veterans of the A. E. F. who had gone through the campaign in France, where one was severely wounded and subsequently decorated, were caught in yesterday's Wall Street tragedy. Both were killed. They were Bernard Kennedy of 443 Tenth Street, Brooklyn, and Thomas Osprey of the firm of Johnson & Wood, 115 Broadway. Both bodies were identified at the morgue.

Kennedy and Osprey left their office at 11:55 o'clock with securities valued at $170,000, which they were to deliver to other Stock Exchange firms in the district. They crossed Broadway and started down Wall Street and must have been directly opposite the scene of the explosion when it occurred.

Members of the firm which employed them, knowing the route the messengers naturally would follow, became alarmed when they heard of the explosion and started inquiry. None of the firms to which the securities were directed had seen the boys, but an hour or so later some of the securities were recovered from some one in the crowd who had picked them up in the street and turned them over to the authorities. Part of the bill of sale which had been attached to the parcel of securities bore the firm name of Johnson & Wood and through this the owners were identified.

Later more of the securities were recovered from different sources, and last evening J. Fletcher Shera of the firm said that all but about $20,000 had been found. The securities which had been returned to the firm at that time were in very bad condition. Many of them were so badly burned as to be almost unrecognizable.

COL. CHAS. NEVILLE ONE OF BOMB DEAD

He Was Stationed at Governors Island—Ranked as Brigadier General in the War.

TWO ROMANCES SHATTERED

Morgan Clerk Was on Honeymoon and Bookkeeper Was to Wed in Two Weeks.

One by one the victims of the bomb outrage were being identified last night at the Morgue by relatives who fought their way through the crowd of curious thousands outside the building. Hope, however, that all of the dead would be identified by today was slight, due to the disfiguration which many of the victims suffered.

One of the first to be identified was Colonel Charles Neville, a West Pointer, stationed on Governors Island. He served throughout the war in the Quartermaster's Corps with the rank of Brigadier General. At the address indicated as his, 44 West Forty-fourth Street, an apartment hotel, it was stated that Colonel Neville had merely visited there and that his home was unknown.

In the identification of William Joyce, a Morgan clerk, and Charles Lindrothe, a bookkeeper for the National City Bank, there was disclosed the fact that the tomb had terminated two romances. Lindrothe, who lived at 546 East Fifth Street, Brooklyn, was married less than two months ago to Miss Adeline Dennick and was spending a prolonged honeymoon at a cottage colony at Great Kills, Staten Island. Joyce, a member of a well-known Flatbush family, lived at 1,806 Ditmas Avenue, Brooklyn, and was to have been married within a fortnight.

Both Had War Records.

Both served throughout the war, Lindrothe as a private in the Machine Gun Company of the 106th Infantry of the Twenty-seventh Division and Joyce as an officer with a Western division. Six months after he was invalided home after a gas attack Lindrothe went to work for the National City Bank. He was on his way from the bank to a nearby restaurant when he was killed.

Joyce was the son of Thomas W. Joyce, head of the gold shipment department of J. P. Morgan & Co. The elder Joyce was attending a conference in the main office of the banking firm when the explosion occurred. A glass dome above the conferees was shattered and portions of it cut Mr. Joyce about the head. He made his way to the street and walked to the Broad Street Hospital. After he had had his wounds dressed he took a taxicab back to the Morgan offices and arrived just as the body of his son was being carried to the street.

Miss Carolyn Dickinson, another victim, was 43 years old and lived with her mother, brother and two sisters at 73 Hanover Street, Elmhurst, Queens. She was employed in the office of George Burr & Co., stock brokers, in the Equitable Building, as a stenographer. She, like Lindrothe, was on her way to luncheon when she was caught by the full force of the explosion. After the identification at the Morgue last night the woman's body was removed to her home.

William F. Hutchinson was 32 years old and lived in Garden City. He was an insurance broker at 120 Broadway, and for some time had acted as a city agent for the Equitable Life Assurance Company. He was married five years ago to Miss Dorothy Allen, member of a prominent California family.

Another victim identified last night was Ludolph Portong, 28 years old, of 25 McCauley Avenue, Jamaica, a teller in the National City Bank. Portong was passing the Morgan offices on his way to lunch when the disaster occurred. News of his death was being kept last night from his wife, Mrs. Edna Portong, whose health is delicate. Wounded twice overseas, Portong resumed his place with the bank immediately upon his discharge from the army.

Alfred Mayer, 25 years old, was a clerk in the employ of the Morton Trading Company at 32 Broadway. He was taking a corrected invoice to a customer in Wall Street when the bomb exploded. He lived with his mother and two brothers, Sigmund and Leonard L. Mayer, at 511 West 138th Street. Mrs. Sarah Mayer was in a serious condition last night from shock at her son's death.

Another woman victim of the outrage was Miss Mildred Xylander of 46 Commerce Street, Manhattan, who died last night in the Broad Street Hospital. She was the daughter of Adolph Xylander, a carrier in the Park Row branch of the postoffice. She was chief stenographer in the offices of Jay & Candler, 48 Wall Street, where she had been employed for seven years. As a rule, said the girl's mother last night, Mildred came home for her luncheon. Yesterday, however, she decided to get the meal downtown and her death came while she was hurrying through Wall Street to a restaurant in Broadway.

Alvin W. Krech Injured.

Among the several hundred who were injured was Alvin W. Krech, President of the Equitable Trust Company. He was struck by flying glass while conferring with a business associate on the first floor of the building at Nassau and Wall Streets. He was treated at Volunteer Hospital for slight cuts on the face and went home. Mr. Krech is a Vestryman in St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church and was Chairman of the committee which raised $2,000,000 for the church's new edifice at Park Avenue and Fiftieth Street.

Edwin A. Sweet, one of the patients whose wounds proved fatal, retired from the banking business in this city three years ago. He lived in Huntington, L. I., and yesterday, for the first time in many weeks, he traveled to New York to see his broker at 37 Wall Street, almost directly opposite the scene of the explosion. The explosion occurred as Mr. Sweet was coming out of the building. He died shortly after his arrival in the Broad Street Hospital. He was married but lived separately from his wife.

That's what observant business men are saying these days about our "Direct-from-The Wholesale Plant" service for New Yorkers.

Why shouldn't it be?

When the greatest wholesale tailoring house in America opens its doors at retail to home-town trade

—when it gives New York men an exclusive Retail pass-key to its $4,000,000 wholesale facilities

—when it grants local trade the privilege of ordering direct from the house which makes the clothes

—is it any wonder that great crowds respond?

"An oasis in the desert of high-clothes prices—the only Economic Relief Station in New York clothesdom"—that's the way a clothing trade-paper expresses it.

Featuring Suits and Overcoats at $40 Made to your special order
1500 Combinations in Fabrics and Fashions for Your Selection

Boiling it all down into one sentence, this local service of ours means the privilege of securing the finest custom-tailored clothes at less than ready-made prices.

But it isn't merely because we're upstairs—and free from ground-floor overhead

That helps, of course. But the greater economies come from the fact that ours is the largest wholesale tailoring house in the world—with the largest buying power, the largest sales output

In rendering a retail service here at home—in our own headquarters-city—we can easily afford to deliver Fifth Avenue quality at a National Purveyor's profit margin.

Is it any marvel, then, that regiments of smart clothes-buyers are trooping here daily to do their clothes-shopping—despite the walk up one flight of stairs?

WAR ON INSECT PESTS.

A feature of this week's MID-WEEK PICTORIAL consists of fifteen etchings of the war of the United States Department of Agriculture on insect pests, with illustrations of the boll worm, corn borer, boll weevil and other pests—a very interesting study. There are ninety other etchings, covering the big news events in all parts of the world, including an interesting double page of the celebration at West Point of the annniversary of the birth of Lafayette; new pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Eamonn De Valera; interesting pictures of the Russo-Polish war; unveiling of the statue at Metz; current sports, drama and other interesting subjects, and a beautiful etching, "The Harvest Maid," on the outside cover, especially posed by Alfred Cheney Johnston. On news stands today.—Advt.

$10,000 CITY REWARD FOR BOMB EVIDENCE

MAYOR HURRIES TO SCENE

Mayor Hylan was an early arrival at the scene of the explosion. He was at the City Hall at the time and was informed of what had taken place by the police. Jumping into his automobile, the Mayor hurried to the scene and soon caught up with Fire Chief Kenlon, Police Commissioner Enright and other city officials. The Mayor made a close inspection of the wrecked buildings, heard the stories of witnesses and visited some of the near by hospitals.

The Mayor then announced that he would call a special meeting of the Board of Estimate for this morning to consider the advisibility of offering a reward for evidence leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the affair, if it should develop that the disaster was due to a bomb plot. The Mayor thought that $10,000 would not be too much to offer as a reward, but the other members of the Board of Estimate may decide upon a still larger amount.

The Mayor was doubtful if the city had the power to offer a reward as big as $10,000, but said this would be determined at the Board of Estimate meeting. Asked as to his opinion regarding the cause of the explosion the Mayor said:

"So far there has been found no eyewitnesses who can tell just what actually did happen. A great amount of iron scrap, such as was used in the construction of old buildings, and which is not used now in modern structures, has been found in the street, and this may indicate that the explosion was the work of a bomb. Another theory is that a wagon containing high explosives may have been struck by an automobile. Such a wagon, or parts of it, has been found, and the body of a dead horse and a wrecked automobile. The explosion may also have been caused by a time bomb placed in a wagon or other vehicle, and so timed as to explode at a certain time and place. Conditions are so chaotic that it is impossible to give a clear statement."

The Mayor kept in close touch with Police Commissioner Enright throughout the evening. He denied a statement published yesterday afternoon in a Boston newspaper that he had said that the explosion was the result of a "plant."

Mayor Hylan called upon Commissioner Enright to issue the following statement:

"All persons in the vicinity of the scene of the explosion who can give any information, no matter how slight, regarding any of the details, especially regarding vehicles in the street, which might have caused the explosion, or the presence of any suspicious persons at the time of the explosion should communicate such information to the police at once. Call any police station or headquarters.

TO-DAY the Unusual Sale of Shoes

Speech is silver and silence is golden

Beautiful words they are, and good to live with every day.

A careful analysis of the common talk in the daily round gives convincing proof that speech in the main is mostly nickel—

Whereas silence is wrought into golden bars and coins of unbroken friendships, unlost loves and betterments, instead of estrangements of lives.

FLYNN HURRIES HERE BY PALMER'S ORDER

TREASURY IS ALSO IN CASE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Attorney General Palmer ordered a searching investigation into the cause of the explosion which occurred in the heart of New York's financial district, immediately after the news of the event was flashed into the Department of Justice through newspaper channels. Beyond permitting it to become known that such an investigation had been ordered, the Attorney General refused to comment on the disaster.

William J. Flynn, Director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, has been placed in charge of the main investigation being made by the forces of the department, and started for New York this afternoon to put himself in touch with his agents and others in New York at work on the case. The Treasury Department through its own secret service force is also making an investigation, and it was explained at that department that the Treasury was dealing with the matter only so far as it affected Treasury interests.

Officials of the Department of Justice and of the Treasury were in touch this afternoon and tonight with their respective agents in New York and learned that there was a strong belief among men at work on the case that the explosion was caused by a time bomb.

Washington has been advised as to the finding of slugs in the vicinity of the explosion and this, it is declared, is the evidence upon which is based mainly the tentative opinion of some of the official investigators that the cause was a bomb, or perhaps an infernal machine. It was stated by one official that it was not yet definitely determined whether the pieces of metal found were in reality slugs and that the evidence so far indicated that the explosive used was something other than dynamite.

Mr. Flynn arrived here last night and was in conference with his staff until a late hour. He refused to discuss the case until his investigation had progressed further.

HAYWOOD'S ARREST ORDERED.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Federal agents were sent from Chicago today to apprehend William D. ("Big Bill") Haywood, I. W. W. Chieftain, following the explosion in the Wall Street financial district. It is said Haywood is wanted merely as a general precautionary measure.

Search here revealed that Haywood is in New York. It was recalled that his last public pronouncement was in the form of several thousand letters to workers in England, France and Germany, urging them to "deprive American capitalists of labor power, which creates their wealth."

Officials of the I. W. W. here, through Secretary J. H. Byers, denied that the organization had any part in any bomb plot, and said the police might "frame up" some labor organization.

The materials used for modeling these suits are as varied as the purposes for which they were designed. Duvetyn, veldyne, duvet de laine and marvella are a few of the most fashionable; but there are many others. PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

The new Paige is arousing the keenest and most appreciative interest on the part of the motoring public attending our "Open House" this week. They are recognizing the fact that we but stated the bare truth when we declared this new triumph of Paige engineering and designing is a car without a legitimate competitor.

On the basis of cost they find it in the popular priced field, yet they find no other standards of comparison than those of the most luxurious and expensive motor vehicles.

We suggest that you reach these conclusions for yourself by personally inspecting the new Paige.

We have withheld formal invitation to view the LaFayette car until this time on account of the many advance engagements for demonstrations which have demanded our attention since the arrival of the first cars in New York several weeks ago.

During this period our enthusiasm for the remarkable qualities of LaFayette has been substantially augmented by the expressions of approval which have come to us from those who have seen the car and ridden in it.

WALL STREET NIGHT TURNED INTO DAY

SKYSCRAPER LIGHTS ABLAZE

WORKMEN REPAIR DAMAGE

Glass and Stone Fragments Crash to Pavements While Police Burn Debris.

The tomb-like silence that settles over Wall Street and lower Broadway with the coming of night and the suspension of business was entirely changed last night as hundreds of men worked under the glare of searchlights to repair the damage to skyscrapers that were lighted up from top to bottom.

Other gangs were busy trying to clear out of the streets all the débris and the marks of the explosion, while thousands of curious persons pressed the heavy police lines in efforts to catch a glimpse of the quickly vanishing results of the disastrous blast. All night long the work of repair was to continue so that business might not be impeded today.

Neither the veteran policemen in the steadfast lines that kept the throngs back from the centre where the explosion wrought its greatest damage, nor the oldest watchman in the financial district could remember when all the big skyscrapers had ever been lighted up throughout the night. The only dark spots in the entire section of lower Manhattan were the churchyards of Trinity and St. Paul, and not a light glowed anywhere in the dark outlines of those edifices.

Until after midnight the throngs that surged against the lines in Broadway were so large that the police had to use the unusual expedient of sending the crowds down one side of the street and up the opposite side, as they were compelled to do in Times Square on such unusual occasions as Armistice Night and the old-time New Year's and Election Day noise-making parades. But never were the New Year's throngs listening to the chimes of Trinity so large as the great crowds of the morbidly curious last night.

Unable to see much of the damage from the Broadway side, persons who knew the streets surged against the police lines in Pine Street, which is north of Wall; into William Street, which is east, and to Exchange Place on the south, to which the lines were drawn back late last night. But everywhere the lines held against a throng that, unlike a great merrymaking crowd, was silent save for low, humming voices reciting over and over again some of the terrible details of the disaster.

So dense was the throng in the subway stations that there was great congestion, and men and women pressed and pushed into the short night trains with an even greater pressure and insistency than rush-hour crowds. There were far fewer trains than in the rush hour because the operating officials of the Interborough had not foreseen the rush to lower Broadway.

The usually silent and deserted streets were filled with interminable lines of slowly moving automobiles—lines moving more slowly in some streets than in a rush hour. Failing to see anything more startling than Wall Street's midnight darkness turned for this one night into a bright glitter of light like that of Times Square the streams of automobiles turned northward up Broadway, Lafayette and other streets, crossed the bridges to Brooklyn, or streamed away northward to the more cheerful atmosphere of uptown.

Oblivious of the watching throngs, workmen labored on window ledges, ten, twenty and thirty stories up, tearing out jagged pieces of broken glass that still remained in broken window frames and putting in new panes, so that the offices would be ready for the new day of business. Some times they forgot the danger of falling glass splinters and swept fragments and glass powder over the edges of window ledges to the ground. These falling fragments, catching the white rays of searchlights on their jagged facets, resembled showers of flashing gems.

There could be heard at intervals the ominous crash of fragments of wreckage hitting the pavements as they fell hundreds of feet from the ledges and roofs of buildings, loosened by the force of the explosion hours before.

At the conjunction of Broad, Wall and Nassau Streets members of the Fire Department and the Street Cleaning Department were still at work at midnight under the glare of searchlights. In all these streets were bonfires where the firemen burned up débris after careful inspection had been made by agents of the Department of Justice and members of the Police Bomb Squads. The district resembled a huge camp ground.

After the pavements had been scoured for every sign of a clue to the cause of the explosion and to the identity of the persons who caused it, hoses were dragged in so that the streets could be washed off. The sewer holes were opened and the last of the débris was carried away during the night.

Here and there policemen and detectives still searching for clues, but near midnight even they abandoned their work to make way for motor trucks and wagons laden with glass and other supplies for repairing the damage to buildings. These moved in and out of the police lines all night.

One of the big searchlights of the Fire Department was placed on the southwest corner of Broad and Wall Streets, so that its glare took in the entire front of the old Sub-Treasury Building. The strong beams lighted up every feature of the placid statue that stood there, unharmed and untouched by any of the heavy slugs hurled by the force of the explosion, and an immense shadow of the statue of the first President was thrown back on the pillars and gray front of the building, in front of which he took his first oath of office.

In the sharp light of other big arcs the gashes and splotches of damage in other buildings were even more plainly visible than in the day, the strong, white light distorting them. Persons who had seen the buildings during the day were surprised at the number of marks which the new light made visible.

A heavy, breath-depressing dust hung over the neighborhood until nearly midnight when it seemed to combine with the mists or the running water in the streets and vanish suddenly. But the strong odor of powder and of burning débris lingered, despite the fresher night air that came with winds from the bay, so that the section, notwithstanding the bright stacks and lines of lights in the skyscrapers, became even more dismal as the night wore on.

The soldiers of the 22d Infantry departed for their barracks late in the afternoon, and in the night picture there was no military color. Hundreds of gray-uniformed special officers, called out immediately after the explosion, remained on duty throughout the night in the lighted buildings and offices. They stood at the entrances of the skyscrapers, scrutinizing all workmen who passed in and out.

Some of these men, with regular police, stood watch at the doors of J. P. Morgan & Company, which were wide open to permit workmen to make all speed with the repairs on the dome, the windows, and the heavy "bomb proof" screening that had been bent in checking the entrance of many of the heavy missiles. At midnight a special squad of workmen entered the Morgan building, erected scaffolding in the vast counting room, put up heavy canvas curtains and began to rip down the decorated ceiling that had been badly damaged. Foremen said that they had orders to rush the work night and day.

Near 1 o'clock this morning the crews working on the Morgan building had virtually completed restoring the heavy plate glass windows. Similar crews began moving out of other office buildings at about the same time, their overtime work of repair completed. Some of these gangs joined the workmen in the Stock Exchange Building, where it was said the work of putting in the glass, a huge task, might be ended before time for trading to begin today.

At 1 o'clock this morning it was evident that all of Wall Street and the financial section, with most of the necessary repair work virtually completed, would go on with business as usual today.

SLUGS AND GLASS BOMBARD BUILDINGS

Sykscrapers of Financial District Appear to Have Been Shelled.

The financial centre of America, which has its very heart within a stone's throw of Broad and Wall Streets, had its baptism of fire yesterday. The buildings which house J. P. Morgan & Co., the New York Stock Exchange, the United States Assay Office, the United States Sub-Treasury, the Bankers Trust Company, the Equitable Trust Company and a score of other important financial institutions were subjected to a rain of flying missiles following the explosion.

The two last-named buildings particularly looked as though they had been subjected to the fire of artillery. Their imposing stone fronts were pitted in scores of places by a shower of iron slugs which were thrown in all directions by the explosion. Windows were shattered within a radius of 300 feet from the point of the explosion. Wall Street was covered with broken glass from Broadway to the National City Bank at William Street. The material damage was restricted chiefly to a quadrilateral bounded by Broadway, Pine Street, William Street and Exchange Place, but the force of the detonation was felt for a considerable distance and many windows were broken by the concussion outside that area.

Assay Office Chief Sufferer.

The Assay Office, nearest the point of explosion, naturally suffered the most. The front was pierced in fifty places where the cast iron slugs, which were of the material used for window weights, were thrown against it. Each slug penetrated the stone an inch or two and chipped off pieces ranging from three inches to a foot in diameter. The ornamental iron grill work protecting each window was broken or shattered. Part of this over the two nearest windows was broken off completely. In other windows the iron work was merely bent. One large piece and several smaller pieces of the cornice were chipped off and the structure in general looked as though it had been bombarded by shrapnel.

Inside, the Assay Office was a wreck. Bits of plate glass covered the floor of every room. Lighting fixtures and movable furniture were overthrown and mixed together. It was as though some gigantic force had overturned the building and then placed it upright again, leaving the framework uninjured but scrambling everything inside. The plaster was cracked on practically every floor. On the ground floor, the marble wainscoting was wrenched from the wall and in some cases broken.

The Assay Office Building is a new one, and workmen were engaged yesterday in moving furniture and records from the old Assay Office in Pine Street, just back of the new building. Furniture had been placed in the office of Ray Baker, the Director, and in the offices of other executive officers on the second floor. The cashier's office on the ground floor had also been supplied with furniture.

There were no regular employes in the building at the time of the explosion, but a number of workmen engaged in the last bit of interior finishing, most of whom were just starting for lunch, were there.

Windows were shattered in the thirty-eight-story building of the Bankers Trust Company at the northwest corner of Broad and Wall Streets. One flying iron slug crashed through the window of the private office of President Seward Prosser, missing his head by less than a foot, and breaking the glass foot of a bookcase at the opposite side of the room. Mr. Prosser, who was seated with his back to the window, escaped a shower of flying glass because he was somewhat protected by a partition. His Secretary, a young woman, was slightly cut. Another slug struck four feet above Mr. Prosser's office window and chipped off a piece of the cornice more than two feet long.

A still more remarkable illustration of the great force of the explosion was the flight of a slug through a window of the Bankers' Club on the thirty-fourth floor of the Equitable Building. This slug hurt no one, but the height to which it was hurled indicated that the propelling force must have been a tremendous one.

On Wall Street, adjoining the Morgan & Co. Building, is an "ell" of the Mills Building, with an entrance in Broad Street. Then come in order the Equitable Trust Building, the United States Trust Building, the Atlantic Building and the National City Bank on the other side of William Street. On the north side of Wall Street, east of Broad Street and running to William Street, are the Sub-Treasury, the Assay Office, 34 and 36 Wall Street, the old Post and Flagg Building, the Bank of Manhattan, and the Bank of America. Windows were broken in all of these.

Every window of that part of the Mills Building facing Wall Street was broken. Herman Stearn, proprietor of the cigar store there, had a narrow escape. One of the iron slugs was blown through a first floor window and pierced a cabinet on the desk behind which Mr. Stearn was sitting. He was in a direct line and undoubtedly would have been seriously hurt if the missile had not been checked.

There are a number of offices in the Atlantic Building, 49-51 Wall Street. Among the tenants are the Union Bank of Canada, the Atlantic Safe Deposit Company, Colgate, Parker & Co., Johnson & Higgins, Clarke, Dodge & Co., Heiderbach, Ickleheimer & Co., the Thompson-Starrett Company and Mather & Co. All in the building were thoroughly shaken by the shock.

Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, which has offices on the seventh floor of the National City Bank Building, was in conference with Hugh Baker, one of the Vice Presidents, at the time of the explosion. Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Baker were thrown from their chairs. Windows in the ofifces were demolished and a number of employes were cut by the flying glass.

National City Employes Injured.

One of the company's messengers was in the Morgan offices and another was almost directly across the street from the scene of the explosion but neither was badly hurt and they were able to report. Mr. Mitchell's stenographer was struck by glass in Wall Street.

According to John H. Fulton, general executive manager of The National City Bank, nine employes of that institution were badly injured, two dangerously. He knew of none who were not accounted for, however, and said that all of the bank's messengers had reported.

A client of the law firm of Gay & Goddard, who have offices on the fourth floor of 52 Wall Street, immediately opposite the National City Bank, informed the police of an incident which he believed might throw light on the cause of the explosion. This man, who had called to see Mr. Goddard, his attorney, found the lawyer out, and while waiting for him sat by a window in the office.

Immediately after the explosion, he said, he saw three men, one of whom was in his shirt sleeves and had apparently been hurt, run east in Wall Street and jump on an automobile truck which was standing in front of the National City Bank. The incident was also witnessed by Miss Matilda Schless, a stenographer in the law office. It was said that the automobile truck went east in Wall Street and disappeared.

Captain Arthur Carey, head of the Homicide Bureau of the Police Department, investigated the story and said he believed the incident had little significance as the three men were probably victims of the accident and were taken in the automobile truck to a hospital.

The tenants of 34-36 Wall Street, adjoining the Assay Office on the east, include the Bank of Cuba, the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway Company, James B. Colgate & Co., Thomas M. McKee and the New York agency of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. George Merchant, brother of the President of the Bank of Cuba, was seriously cut by glass. Miss L. G. Jones, a stenographer, who had been sitting at a window, had just arisen to answer a telephone call when the explosion occurred and the glass from the broken window swept everything from her desk and cut a deep gash in the back of her vacant chair.

One of the hurtling iron slugs broke through a window in the office of Hollister, Lyon & Walton, on the eighth floor of 7 Wall Street, and imbedded itself in the wall. Another broke through a window of the office of Parkinson & Burr on the floor below.

Louis Greenspan, a lawyer of 320 Fulton Street, Jamaica, said he believed his decision to eat another sandwich in a lunchroom in Wall Street saved his life. He reached the street just in time to see a sheet of flame shoot up from the street in front of the Morgan offices, followed almost instantly by the noise of the explosion.

A trail of broken glass marked the force of the explosion in Wall Street as far as Broadway. A shattered window in the United Cigar Store at Broadway and Wall Street seemed to mark the limit of damage in this direction. The plate glass front of the Huyler store at 10 Wall Street was completely demolished, while windows higher up in the same building were broken.

Strict precautions were taken by the police and soldiers guarding this part of the financial district to prevent injury to pedestrians from falling glass. Even when persons having business in the section were admitted through the lines policemen took the precaution of making all walk in the centre of the street. An occasional tinkle caused by the falling of a piece of glass dislodged from a broken window showed that the precaution was necessary.

VIVID EYEWITNESS STORY.

Reporter Describes Scene Moment After the Explosion.

"It was a crash out of a blue sky—an unexpected, death-dealing bolt which in a twinkling turned into shambles the busiest corner of America's financial centre and sent scurrying to places of shelter, hundreds of wounded, dumbstricken, white-faced men and women, fleeing from an unknown danger."

A reporter for The Associated Press, who was an eyewitness of the explosion, thus described the scene.

"I was just turning into Wall Street from Broadway," he said, "when I first felt, rather than heard the explosion. A concussion of air similar to that experienced by a passenger on the subway when a train dashes into one of the under-river tubes was felt. Its force was sufficient to all but throw me off my balance. Instantly following the concussion came a sharp, resounding crash, which shook to their foundations the monster buildings facing either side of Wall Street. With the roar of the blast, came the rattle of falling glass, and from the junction of Wall, Nassau and Broad Streets—a block distant—screams of injured men and women.

"I dodged into a convenient doorway to escape falling glass and to reach a telephone and call the office. Looking down Wall Street later I could see arising from the vicinity of the Sub-Treasury Building and the J. P. Morgan and Company bank a mushroom shaped cloud of yellowish, green smoke which mounted to the height of more than 100 feet, the smoke being licked by darting tongues of flame.

"I reached the scene a few moments after the explosion took place. The smoke had partly cleared from the street, but from the Morgan Building there was belching forth through the broken windows clouds of dust and white vapor. In the street an overturned automobile was blazing fiercely and nearby, close to the body of a dead horse, was another fire, evidently among a pile of wreckage.

"Almost in front of the steps leading up to the Morgan bank was the mutilated body of a man. Other bodies, most of them silent in death, lay nearby. As I gazed horror-stricken at the sight, one of these forms, half naked, and seared with burns, started to rise. It struggled, then toppled and fell lifeless into the gutter.

"On the opposite side of the street were other forms. One of them was that of a young woman—her clothing torn and burned away. It was moving—not in an effort to rise—but in the agony of death. I started toward her, but as I did it became still. Glancing down I saw that the pavement was discolored with blood. In plain sight, within a radius of thirty to fifty feet, were nine lifeless forms.

"The body of the dead horse in the middle of the street showed plain evidence of having been in very close proximity to the centre of the blast. It was literally torn to pieces.

"The windows of the Morgan building were blown out and through the openings could be seen the smoke-blackened interior of what but a few moments previous had been one of the handsomest banking rooms in the city. Opposite, the entrance to the newly completed white exterior of the Sub-Treasury annex was battered and torn as if having been subjected to a bombardment of machine gun fire. The doorway, with its massive steel grill work, was shattered and the stone surrounding the door cracked and battered away.

"By this time the crowd was pressing in, held in check by the hastily gathering police. At the doorway of the Morgan Bank was a uniformed guard, apparently half-dazed, but sticking to his post and holding back those who sought to enter the structure.

"The crowd was strangely quiet, and over it seemed to hang a feeling of awe and horror. At the commands of the police it moved and fell back silently. On the steps of the old Sub-Treasury Building, the spot where years ago stirring scenes connected with the American revolution were enacted, stands a statue of George Washington. Looking down from its pedestal between the massive granite columns, scarred by missiles from the explosion, the outstretched hand of the Father of his Country seemed to carry a silent command to be calm.

"Then came the ambulances. Nearby trucks and automobiles were first pressed into service. Volunteers, heeding not blood-smeared hands and clothing, tenderly lifted into the vehicles the bodies of the dying and the dead. The dead that remained for additional conveyances were charitably hidden from sight by coverings torn from awnings or by robes from arriving motor cars.

the writer," he said. "You will understand that I cannot give his name."

Mr. Casenave in reply to questions as to just who Fischer was and what his duties were with the commission said he did not know him personally and could not give any information about him.

The warning of the explosion received by the French High Commission was conveyed in a letter enclosed in a plain white envelope and dropped through the letter, like the postcard to Mr. Ketch- the Commission at 65 Broadway. Although the French officials would not admit that Fischer was the writer, it was regarded as significant that the letter, like the potscard to Mr. Ketchledge, began with the word "Greetings."

The letter gave warning that there would be an explosion in Wall Street between 2:30 and 3:30, daylight saving time. The date of the expected explosion was not mentioned, but the writer suggested that the offices of the commission be closed and the members of the office staff sent home so that "their lives might be spared."

The writer said he believed he would be rendering a service to Mr. Casenave and his associates by giving them warning of an impending catastrophe. He intimated that "some people had grievances and wanted to take revenge."

Lieutenant Arnaud read the letter several times. Feeling certain that it had been written by an alarmist, although a friendly one, he tore it up and dropped it into a waste basket. He thought no more of the letter until after the explosion. He went at once to his office and emptied the contents of the waste basket. Fortunately the pieces of the letter were still there. He pasted them together and notified the police. Efforts to learn whether the letter bore a signature or not were unsuccessful.

The letter was turned over to Deputy Police Commissioner Joseph A. Faurot. It was reported that it was believed that the letter had been sent by a man formerly in the employ of the French High Commission, and the police were reported to be seeking him at an address in West Ninety-second Street in the belief that he might be able to throw light on the entire plot.

THE WALL STREET EXPLOSION.

The instinctive hope of every normal heart must have been that the terrible explosion in Wall Street yesterday would prove to be an accident. Unhappily, the evidence does not seem to admit of this belief. The police experts in explosives are convinced that a fiendish crime was committed. It would appear that there were human beings so depraved as to plot and carry out what they knew would be indiscriminate and wholesale murder. If, as was first supposed, the disaster had been accidental, it would have seemed to all appalling and pitiful. As a deliberate attempt at massacre, as a sudden flash of flame from the pit, it shows us what mad passions are ready to be stirred by the wild and whirling words of editors and politicians.

BOLSHEVIST OR GUILDSMAN?

Out of the Italian turmoil one fact emerges with increasing significance. The struggle of workmen against employers is subtended and confused by an almost equally sharp struggle between two factions within the ranks of labor, which may be distinguished as Bolsheviki and Guildsmen. Both derive their theory from Syndicalism, which was most prominently expounded in France by GEORGES SOREL and in Italy by ARTURO LABRIOLA—the latter now Minister of Labor and no longer a Syndicalist. The distinctive idea of Syndicalism is that the workers shall take over not only the functions of production and distribution, but all the functions of the State. The Government of LENIN and TROTZKY is Syndicalism in its initial stage—a dictatorship of the proletariat. Now the Italian Syndicalists have been ardent students of Bolshevism, and what is apparently a majority of them, having seen its natural workings, do not like it. For their present guidance they are looking elsewhere—to England.

In England the Syndicalist idea fared much as Socialism once fared, becoming temperate, compromising—in fact, "Fabian." The Guildsmen believe that labor should be organized along "industrial" lines, that all industry should be controlled "democratically" by the voice of the masses, and that to this end it is necessary to "expropriate" the owners. But they see that a long course of education is necessary before this will be feasible. They recognize, moreover, that certain functions of the State are beyond the sphere of organized labor. "The autocracy of capital must not "be overthrown only to substitute an "autocracy of labor." They somewhat vaguely foresee a society in which there will be two co-ordinate powers, industrial and political, in which each citizen will vote in a dual capacity as producer and consumer. It was doubtless this Guild idea which Signor BALDESI had in mind when he said: "The middle class which works "and produces has nothing to fear "from us," explaining that it was his hope to apply "the same principles "that have begun to be accepted in "England." In a word, his program is evolutionary, measured and, in a sense, conservative. It is equally evident, however, that the Bolshevist element in Italy is active, vigorous and by no means small.

This conflict in the ranks of Italian labor may prove of vast significance. An excursion into Bolshevism would bring calamity, and no less to labor than to capital; it would be pretty sure to have troublesome repercussions in other countries. If the English or Guild idea prevails, the crisis may be averted and a slower movement begun of which only time can tell the end. Before the Guildsmen can successfully "expropriate" industry, they will have to convert the "middle-class" technicians and managers of industry—a thing not easily achieved. In one way or another, the struggle in Italian labor may well prove decisive as to the future of the revolutionary movement.

All this throws light upon Premier GIOLITTI's conduct and gives it some show of consistency. According to the report of a correspondent of The World, "the Premier is not seriously "anxious about the present labor "crisis because he firmly believes that "the common sense of the Italian "proletariat will prevail against the "manoeuvres of irresponsible agi"tators. He is far more anxious "about the country's financial posi"tion, which he thinks the pivot on "which all else turns, and the real "cause of the present agitation." It may prove true of the North Italians as of the French that, beneath their surface volatility, they have some measure of the common sense and practicality traditional in the Latin temperament.

A COURT IN AND OF THE LEAGUE.

The Sun and New York Herald somewhat ruefully remarks that there has been in this country more or less of a "haze" about the new international court on which Mr. ROOT has been working abroad. The haze appears to have been thickest in the region of Marion, Ohio. Senator HARDING was plainly lost in it on Aug. 28, when he spoke about "strengthening The Hague Tribunal." As The Sun justly points out, the new court has nothing to do with The Hague Tribunal. "On the contrary, "it is an integral part of the League's "machinery, and a scion of the Wil"son Covenant itself." This is correct, and it needed no seer to tell it to us. The whole stood written so clear in Article XIV. of the Covenant, and in all that Mr. ROOT and his associated jurists have been doing, that it is hard to see how even a wayfaring man could have erred therein, unless he happened to be a Presidential candidate.

With the actual new court, it is the firm opinion of our neighbor that America can have neither part nor lot. "The Permanent Court of International Justice," it declares, "is not open to acceptance by the "United States so long as acceptance "of the court involves acceptance of "the Wilson League." This will be news to Mr. HARDING. It will be news to all those Republicans who have been complacently saying that their party was against the League, but was for the court which Mr. ROOT had been helping to create. But the latter depends absolutely upon the former. You can't have one without the other. This has all along been indisputable. Mr. ROOT himself could never have had the least doubt of it. His achievement, which Republicans have been lauding, is a distinct strengthening of the League, and makes it seem more than ever indispensable. Mr. ROOT, to be sure, still wants modifications of the Covenant. But to its main purpose he has heartily subscribed, and now he is irrevocably committed to it in both theory and practice. When he gets home, he will doubtless begin educating his party in the whole subject. It can stand a lot of educating.

PACKERS AND CONSUMERS.

The American people are eating less and less meat, according to Dr. JOHN R. MOHLER, Chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry. During last year the consumption per capita fell off eight pounds. If American families did not eat more meat the live-stock industry would suffer, said Dr. MOHLER. The subject is one of great interest to the American people as well as to the packers. The packers have said over and over again, through their representatives, that their profits have been grossly, and in cases mendaciously, exaggerated. THOMAS E. WILSON, President of the Institute of American Packers, has declared that the five large packers made only 87½ cents on each head of 39,000,000 animals slaughtered in 1919, "and in the case of the consumer," he added, "we divide the "profits by the total volume of busi"ness done by the packers and find "the profit paid the packer is less "than two cents on each dollar of "sales—on the turnover."

The net profits of the "five large packers" in 1919 amounted to $34,329,471. If the attention of a people paying high prices for meat per pound were concentrated upon this large sum alone, they could easily be made to believe that the big packers were extortioners. Always on the defensive, and more than ever under suspicion in a period of unprecedented expansion, the packers explain that their profit on each pound of meat has recently been about four-fifths of a cent. There are a good many pounds of edible meat in 39,000,000 head of cattle and hogs, but Mr. WILSON says that the profit of 87½ cents a head includes what is derived from by-products. It is plain that the packers must slaughter vast numbers of creatures and find a quick market if they are to remain satisfied with a profit of less than a cent a pound.

A decrease in consumption of eight pounds per capita a year means, for the whole country, a falling off of about 840,000,000 pounds and a loss in profits to all the packers of $6,720,000, if they make only four-fifths of a cent on each pound of meat sold. But the packers cannot attribute to the more abstemious American people alone the cloud upon their industry. What of the export market? Has it not of late affected the business of the packers adversely? One of them in a letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES recently said that "exports of fresh beef de"clined from 514,000,000 pounds in "1918 to 174,000,000 pounds in 1919." The packers must look to their export business and sell cheaper than their Argentine and Australian competitors if they want to declare larger dividends. A large export account should mean a lower price for the domestic consumer when the supply of meat animals is abundant. Dr. MOHLER, by the way, says that 200,000,000 pounds of beef could be added to the country's stock yearly by the use of better sires and improved methods of feeding.

As to the decrease in American consumption of meat, our people were taught by the exigency of war to cut down their meat ration, and they learned that they were better physically by eating less beef, lamb and pork. They have not forgotten the lesson. Moreover, the hygienists, whose name is now legion, have preached a million sermons upon the danger to the human constitution of excessive consumption of meat. So the American people, being intelligent, do not eat so much and are more fit. And they are reconciled to getting along on less red-blooded meat by the high prices they have to pay for it. The lesson to the packers is that they must fight for the world markets with Australia and Argentina if the industry is to flourish to their satisfaction.

PROHIBITION NOT ENFORCED.

Changing the Federal Prohibition Agent for New York may be only routine. But most people will believe that it is due to the fact that the law has not been enforced here. Notoriously it has not been. The evidence glares on all sides. Perhaps one Agent can succeed no better than another. But what was freely predicted has come to pass. Prohibition does not prohibit. Liquor can easily be bought in New York. While there is not so much drinking as before, many observers contend that there is more drunkenness. Sorrowful stories are told of men, even young men, even college men, rapidly becoming sots. The graft and bribery in connection with the illegal selling and buying are reported to be on a colossal scale. It is a shocking state of things. No matter what one thinks about the wisdom of the law, it is a demoralizing and awful thing to see it openly flouted by thousands. Respect for all law cannot but be cut into by the continued spectacle. There may be an improvement later, owing to the using up of the supplies or to greater energy of enforcement. But as the case stands today, law-abiding Americans must feel ashamed and alarmed at the wanton and unconcealed disregard of the supreme law of the land.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE AT RIGA

The Polish peace delegation, expected to arrive at Riga yesterday for the conference with the Bolsheviki, left Warsaw asserting that it had no intention of putting forward excessive and unacceptable demands. If the Bolsheviki come in the same spirit, peace ought to be made at last. But the Bolsheviki have one or two advantages in the negotiations which they may be expected to employ as long as they can. Chief of these is the Polish-Lithuanian dispute. Reports from Riga say that the Lithuanians are likely to refuse to submit this to the League of Nations, and recent Lithuanian policy makes that seem quite probable.

The dominant feeling in Lithuania appears to be hatred of Poland. When the Bolsheviki were advancing on Warsaw the Lithuanians got out of the way and let them pass. They were not strong enough to stop them, but they seem to have made no effort. Their sympathies were rather with Russia than otherwise. To most of the territory in dispute the Lithuanians seem to have a somewhat better claim than the Poles, but their desire to include all territory that was ever Lithuanian seems to be as strong as the aspiration in Poland to recover the frontiers of 1772. Both nations are cursed by their history, as are most of their neighbors. They are willing to risk future prosperity in the hope of recovering past splendor; and since most of Eastern Europe has at one time or another been held by three or four different nations, there is not enough land to go around.

The Bolsheviki, of course, are supporting the Lithuanian claim, as they are supporting any other enemy of the Poles. Bolshevist Russia is a greater danger to Lithuania than is Poland, but the Lithuanians are not in a state of mind to appreciate this. Germany is also dangerous to Lithuania, and if the human race was moved by consideration of its interests rather than of the inalienable right to cut off its nose to spite its face, Poland and Lithuania would stand together against the enemy on the east and the more dangerous enemy on the west. As things stand, it is not impossible that Lithuania may furnish the bridge between Germany and Russia.

General PETLURA's Ukrainian Government, whose alliance with Poland last Spring would have been a great diplomatic triumph if the Poles had been able to hold their eastern conquests, is also coming to Riga to make peace. The Bolsheviki insist that it must deal with the Ukrainian Soviet Government, an institution which has always been in existence somewhere since the Winter of 1917, but has rarely been very near the Ukraine. So far as there is a Ukrainian nation, PETLURA is probably its chief representative. But the Polish-Ukrainian alliance has lost practically all of the Russian Ukraine, and, however the Poles may love PETLURA, they are hardly likely to turn over Eastern Galicia to him. Even after the rescue of "ethnographic" Poland from the Russian armies, Poland is in a dangerous position so long as her flanks are unprotected. She failed last Spring to protect them by force, and there seems little prospect just now that she will be able to safeguard them by diplomacy.

MR. LENIN BUYS A PAPER.

It had been supposed that somebody lied in the controversy between the British Government and The London Daily Herald as to whether that Labor organ had actually received a subsidy from the Bolsheviki. But it turns out to have been only a misunderstanding. The Daily Herald declared that it had received "not a bond, not a franc, not a sou." It never said, so far as one may gather from the cabled reports, that it had not received any Bank of England notes. The purity of The Daily Herald dazzles the onlooker. The whole misunderstanding arose because EDGAR LANSBURY, son of the editor, passed some of these notes through his bank to oblige a friend. How could he know that the friend had raised the money to give to his father's paper?

The British Government asserts that The Daily Herald's recent poll of its readers to find out if they thought it ought to take the money was made only after its editors learned that EDGAR had been caught "with the goods." It looks plausible; it fits the chronology; but The Daily Herald is so sure of its innocence that it attempts no defense, but merely says that Mr. LLOYD GEORGE is another.

The truly forward-looking will accept these explanations without hesitation, and only the reactionaries will have any doubts about them. It is a curious affair. In radical circles subsidies seem to be the proper thing, and our pink and red friends had merely assumed that the custom was universal.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Combining Murder and Theft. In the shooting of the Twenty-fourth Street furrier and his wife by the man VAN REED there is a perfect illustration of the moral status and conscious purpose characteristic of every one of the wretches who have of late made what they think—not altogether inaccurately—the discovery that robbery by open violence is both safer and more profitable than theft as secretly committed by the old-fashioned burglar.

The new method requires none of the intelligent plotting and hard work that used to be done by bank robbers. In the majority of cases it involves but little of personal danger, the leveled pistol and threat to kill usually being sufficient to cow into docility and obedience the selected victims.

But every one of these bandits starts on his expedition consciously intending murder should it be necessary for the gaining of his end or to stop pursuers, and the case under consideration is only one of many in which the penalty for resistance or hesitation in obeying the order for raised hands has been death. What VAN REED did all of his kind are ready to do, and it is what dozens of them have done in the past year, right here in New York City.

Too often the actual or potential murderers, thanks to the facility for swift escape that the automobile provides, have eluded arrest, and only a small minority of them have suffered the extremity of punishment earned by their crime. For that crime is doubly dangerous to society in that to guard effectively against its perpetration in a large city is practically impossible, and the apprehension of the criminals is peculiarly difficult.

Justice Must Be Swift. One means, and perhaps the best, of discouraging the sort of robbery that the man VAN REED attempted to commit—the sort of robbery that depends for success on readiness promptly to execute, in case of need, the invariably uttered threat to kill—would be to give convincing proof that quick justice will be inflicted on every one of these murderous ruffians whom the law can seize. For the possessors of minds like theirs there is little that is deterring in a punishment delayed for months, if inflicted at all.

And there are ways of expediting criminal trials. It has often been done, and done, too, with no loss of fairness, and it can always be done when all the representatives and agents of the law are agreed on the need and wisdom of speed and they are fully backed by public sentiment.

There are well-remembered cases of policemen, for instance, who, having committed crimes that disgraced the force as well as themselves, were put behind prison bars within a week, duly tried, convicted and sentenced. VAN REED's guilt is unquestionable, eye-witnesses of his murder are numerous, and he does not deny—he confesses it. In his explanation of his act there is no shadow of excuse or palliation. As a soldier, too, his guilt, like that of a thievish or homicidal policeman, is aggravated by his obligations, voluntarily assumed, to protect the public, even at the risk of his life.

Whatever of utility there is in capital punishment can all be obtained—and only can be attained—by giving him immediately the brief trial that necessarily will take him to the electric chair. Upon the speed with which he goes there will depend in large degree the extent to which the public will be safeguarded by his fate through the fear it will excite in other men of his stripe.

His Plea Is Not Conclusive. To criticism of the way in which he has managed the regulation of automobiles and their operators New York's Secretary of State makes the familiar reply that he has done what he could and the best he could with the inadequate powers and scanty assistance with which the law provides him.

That is a defense of a sort, and not of the worst sort; sometimes it is unanswerable. Always, however, it amounts, as in this instance, to admission that the charges made are inaccurate only in where they place responsibility for the evils mentioned. And, of course, it long has been evident to everybody, as Mr. HUGO says it is to him, that there is something desperately wrong with both our automobile laws and their enforcement.

The result has been a slaughter of pedestrians that it is not much of an exaggeration to call appalling. That is a fact of vastly more importance, and of vastly more interest to everybody except Mr. HUGO, than is the accuracy or inaccuracy of his claim that if he had a larger staff of clerks he could give applicants for licenses the examination they ought to have, and that if the law would make easier the revocation of licenses he would revoke them by the hundreds instead of by the dozen. He has had five years in office, with these defects in administration plainly visible to him all the time, and he has not taken any effective measures to change the situation. That is a responsibility of considerable weight and one not to be eluded.

Mr. HUGO can say, and probably will say, that he is not the Legislature; but, on the other hand, our Senators and Assemblymen like automobile killings no better than do the rest of us, and it is next to incredible that, if Mr. HUGO had been sufficiently energetic and persistent in explaining the defects in the automobile laws and in demanding the amendments they obviously need, he would not have something better to offer than a plea in mitigation and avoidance.

TO PREVENT AGGRESSION.

A Purpose of the League Destroyed by the Lodge Reservation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of your editorial articles in today's issue mentions the misrepresentation by the Republican Party of the League issue and states in substance that the Democratic Party could ride to victory on this issue were it properly understood by the average voter. This is unquestionably true, for one is astounded at the apparent lack of understanding by the average, and more particularly the Republican, voter as to just what Mr. Wilson strove for at Paris and to what extent he was willing to commit this country's action in the future.

The crux of the entire question rests, of course, in Article X. of the League Covenant. Mr. Wilson was willing to commit this country's action in advance to assist in forcing arbitration and preventing aggression. If one admits that arbitration is preferable to war, then it would seem clear that this country's action is committed in advance to a righteous cause, and if the assumption of this moral obligation limits our free action in the future, it does so only in the same sense that the good citizen commits himself to an observance of the laws under which he lives and the readiness to assist in enforcing them if necessary. Mr. Lodge and his associates, on the other hand, would reserve the right of decision by this country until such time as actual conditions arose which would force a decision, and consequently would lose the tremendous moral force which this country's entrance into the League of Nations as now written would exert toward the substitution of arbitration for war and thereby the preservation of world peace.

As between the two—if understood—the voters of America can make only one decision. G. F. BROWN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The League of Nations being the leading issue in the present Presidential campaign, would it not be well for the representatives in both parties who are in favor of the League to carry from now on until election a full-page advertisement in the daily and Sunday papers of the League Covenant, printed in bold type, that all who run may read? Oratory is all very well, but expensive and often confusing, and, then again, the people at large, the great body of voters who are to turn the scale one way or the other—have neither the time, inclination nor opportunity to hear these orators. But, presented to them in their favorite paper day after day, they can mark, read and inwardly digest at their leisure. Or the articles of the League Covenant could be printed on a large card for window display, these cards not to be removed.

Some time ago I had a number of copies given me for distribution in simple pamphlet form easily read and handled, and they were offered free to any one who wished them. But I was simply amazed at the ignorance of the people I came in contact with day after day—some tradesmen, others of the highest cultivation, as education goes—as to the meaning of the League of Nations, and absolutely none as to its great importance in our relations with all the rest of the world. "Oh, yes, I've read it, but —" And that was as far as they could go.

So please do what you can to induce believers in the League in the two parties to devote some of their "funds" toward this simple but effective means of showing just what the League of Nations is, and thus offset the mass of misrepresentation which daily obscures its real meaning.

KATE P. HAMPTON.

THE AUTUMN BATTLEFIELD.

When Autumn days are mild and bright,
And nights are warm and moist,
The fungi soldiers take the field,
And there their tents they hoist.
They come when all the air is sweet
With scent of dew-wet sod,
And ripened, sun-warmed, tangled hedge
Of weeds and goldenrod.

You know them by their uniforms.
Some companies you shun;
For they are poisonous, and kill,
Though minus sword or gun.
And it is well when slightest doubt
Warns one to hesitate,
To go at once away and leave
That fungus to its fate.

There are some jolly members, too,
Of fungus soldiery;
Like cannon-balls or bombs, they look,
All scattered on the lea.
They are the Puff-ball Corps in white,
And good to fry and eat.
The veterans fire harmless smoke
When trampled by the feet.

Then there is Camp Campestris fine,
So popular with all.
This is a noble company,
And good however small.
You wage a warfare different
From any warfare known.
The friends you capture, tent and all;
The foes you leave alone.

With spoils of war you leave the field,
Well pleased with what you won;
And know that after but a night
You may repeat the fun.
At edge of field you pause to rest
And gaze at all the beauty;
And here you find the Lichen Guard
On rail and picket duty!

BLANCHE ELIZABETH WADE.

SENATE OPPOSITION.

More Evidence That It is Not Based on Principle.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The reply of Professor Corwin, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Sept. 3, to my criticism of Senator Harding's speech of Aug. 28th, has been in very large part answered by Raymond Fosdick's letter in THE TIMES of Sept. 4, and by the very recent dispatches from abroad regarding the International Court. There are, however, one or two criticisms of Mr. Corwin's which may be noticed.

Mr. Corwin says that my comments are "misleading." I quoted the language of Mr. Harding and of Mr. Lloyd George exactly as spoken and assumed that that language meant in each case what it said. Mr. Corwin explains it in each case to mean something other than what it says. I am content to rest on the language of my comment and to think that it compares favorably with the fact that Senator Harding put words into the mouth of Lord Grey which that statesman never used, as Mr. Corwin may see if he will read The London Spectator of June 26, at page 852.

I alluded to some of the activities of the League. Mr. Fosdick's letter, which I mentioned above, graphically sets forth those activities in more detail. The theory of Mr. Corwin that the International Labor Organization may not hereafter be connected with the League because of the fact that the labor clauses are separated from the "League" (sic) by some 300 articles in the Treaty, is too droll to require more than mention.

In regard to Senator Harding's proposal of "enforceable" decrees of an International Court, Mr. Corwin seems to suggest that I made the mistake of assuming that Senator Harding meant what he said, but on this assumption I pointed out that a decree which is "enforceable" must be "enforceable" against any defendant, including the United States; that this goes further than Article X. Mr. Corwin does not dispute.

This proposal is simply further evidence of the fact that the Senatorial opposition to the Covenant is not based on principle, but is based on bitter and unreasoning personal hatred of Woodrow Wilson.

DAVID HUNTER MILLER,

Playing Germany's Game.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The purpose of Germany is to escape fulfillment of the treaty terms, in which it has been encouraged by the United States Senate and many Americans. The Republican Party now proposes to repudiate the treaty, which guarantees our victory. It proposes a separate treaty, a resolution, or no action at all. It proposes an affront to our late allies, who should be our friends because their every interest is ours. It proposes in effect to hold out our hands to Germany, and almost apologize to her for ever opposing her. It proposes to sit back and make fun of the League, which cannot function perfectly because we are not willing to give our bit.

Why cannot Americans realize they are playing Germany's game? She does not want the treaty ratified, does she? Then why join yourself with her and comply with her wishes? It is amazing that Americans permit themselves to be so fooled. The war was greater than we know, the field and the stakes were larger than we think, and the end is not yet. An influential German who had fled to Switzerland said of the Germans: "They will beat you yet, those junkers. Having won half the world by force of arms, they will win the other half with tears in their eyes. You do not know them." That is a true statement. Will you believe it? The end is not yet.

I am wondering what American soldiers will have to say about it at the polls. Surely they are willing to try at least the only plan ever devised to end war. I have been a Republican all my life until this year, and I will no longer support a party which proposes to flunk like a coward without even a try, which proposes to crawl out before the world "from under," which strengthens the impression that the United States is after all a nation of money-grabbers. What do Americans say?

Harding's Anti-League Friends.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hope no voter will be deceived by the specious arguments of former Attorney General Wickersham and ex-President Taft with reference to the League. These men say they have reason to think that Senator Harding, if elected, would favor this nation entering the League. Of course, the trend of events would lead him in that direction, so far as we can see now, but these men seem to forget that the League has been made an issue in this election, and therefore, if Senator Harding wins, all the opponents of the League will say, and say with reason, that the issue has been decided by the people and the League loses and we must have peace at once through resolution.

Let the friends of the League consider some of those who are supporting Senator Harding and the powerful elements they represent, people who are also opposed to the League in any form. I enumerate some: First, Senators Borah, Brandegee, Moses, Johnson and the reactionaries; they represent a powerful element; second, all the Hearst papers; third, the Sinn Fein sympathizers, including a large portion of the Irish-Americans; fourth, the German-American Alliance, representing a large percentage of German-Americans.

Others might be mentioned, but perhaps these are the most powerful. There is also a large element that doesn't care either way. All these would say: The issue is decided; let us stay out and not bind ourselves to anything. L. H. ROBERTS,

Apple Grower's Profit.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have 100 acres in apple trees, 16 years old. The crop this year is 92% perfect. That is to say, out of every 100 apples picked from the trees, 92 are 2¼ inches in diameter or more and free from all blemish.

With a crop of 2,000 barrels, the first sample shipment has been as follows:

37 barrels at $4.50 per barrel........		$166.50
Expenses:
Express to nearest city.......	$37.44
Commission merchants' 10%...	16.65
Picking, packing and hauling.	37.00
		137.34
Net to me		$29.16

This equals 79 cents a barrel, or 26 1-3 cents a bushel, or five fine apples for one cent profit.

I trust you will publish this letter, so that when retail dealers sell apples to the consumer the public may know where the poor farmer gets off. GRAHAM F. BANDY.

The "Cardinal Sect."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Relative to the cable dispatch in THE TIMES of yesterday's date reporting the recent creation of a clique of the most radical propensity in Japan, an unhappy mutilation was brought about, which, I think, calls for due correction.

Geographically the alleged new denomination seems to be of rural origin rather than of capital. TAKEO OKA.

GILLETT ASSAILS WILSON.

Blocked Wholesome Bills, Charges Speaker of House.

Speaking before the Republican County Committee at its monthly meeting in Bryant Hall last night, Speaker Frederick H. Gillett of the House of Representatives declared that in his opinion the Republican national ticket would win, not on the League of Nations issue, but because the people were tired of "the inefficiency and extravagance of this Administration.

"Two years after the armistice," said the Speaker, "there are still almost 100,000 employes on the Government payroll in Washington as compared with 40,000 before the war. At the height of the war activities the number rose to almost 120,000. The reduction from that number which has occurred has been caused largely by the refusal of the Republican Congress to appropriate money for them, despite urgent appeals from the Administration. The requests for appropriations have been cut down by nearly two billions of dollars, and yet all Government activities appear to be functioning."

Speaker Gillett said President Wilson had blocked many wholesome measures enacted by Congress, notably the Executive Budget bill.

"Four years ago," said Speaker Gillett, "the people were cheated into electing a Democratic President on the plea that he would keep us out of war, and he had only been in office a month when he asked Congress to declare war. Now they are asking for the election of a Democratic President on the plea that he will keep us forever out of war. I do not believe the electorate can be cheated again by that appeal. We all want peace and want America to lead in securing it, but many think that the President's League covenant, unless amended, would lead to war rather than peace. At all events it is clear that his League unmodified can never command the support of two-thirds of the Senate, and so the only prospect of any league is to elect a Republican President and Senate who will amend and then adopt it."

TO ENTERTAIN MRS. MILLER.

Candidate's Wife Will Be Guest of Honor at Women's Luncheon.

Mrs. Nathan L. Miller, wife of the Republican candidate for Governor, will be the guest of honor at the "get together" luncheon of the Women's Division of the New York County Republican Committee at the Hotel Commodore tomorrow. Mr. Miller will be the principal speaker.

Miss Helen Varick Boswell, Chairman of the Women's Division, heads the committee in charge of the luncheon. Mrs. Samuel S. Koenig, wife of the New York County Republican Chairman, heads the Reception Committee, other members of which are Mrs. Jennie Firstman, Miss Emma Koster, Mrs. John H. Iselin, Mrs. Edith Schacter, Miss Cornelia B. West and Mrs. Mary Cotter. Mrs. Mabel McKinley Baer, niece of President McKinley, will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

One of the features of the luncheon will be the "$100,000 table," at which will be seated business women whose incomes reach the $100,000 mark each year. Among those at this table will be Miss Jane Martin, President of the Advertising Women's Club; Miss Caroline O. Overman, Miss Ella A. Leonard and Mrs. Claudia Quigley Murphy.

PILGRIMS GOING TO MARION.

Foreign-Born Citizens Will Pay Respects to Harding.

An all-American delegation of foreign-born citizens, representing all nationalities in the world, will make a pilgrimage to Marion and its front porch. The delegation will be made up of from three to ten representatives of every State from Maine to Maryland on the Atlantic seaboard, varying in proportion to the foreign-born population of States.

A. B. Messer, Director of the Foreign Language Department of the Republican National Committee, will head the delegation, which will entrain at Grand Central Station this evening. There will be more than 150 pilgrims in the Eastern delegation.

LEGION FIGHTS LIVING COST.

Will Organize Merchants' Associations to Gain Discounts.

The American Legion announced yesterday formation of plans to mobilize its forces throughout the country to fight the high cost of living. In every community where there is a post the Legion purposes to organize retail dealers into an association, prospective merchant members of which, it is said, already have pledged discounts approximating 5 per cent. from current selling prices of all commodities to the 2,000,000 members of the Legion and their families.

Details of the program, which Legion officials say has been approved by large retailers in various cities, were made public last night by G. Robert Baines, business manager of the American Legion Weekly. If sanctioned by the National Executive Committee, it will be submitted to the second national convention of the ex-service men's organization in Cleveland this month.

"All the large retailers we have approached pronounce the plan sound," Mr. Baines said. "In each city where the Legion has a post one or more stores in every line of business will be selected for membership in the American Legion Stores Association. In the list will be grocers, clothing and department stores, automobile dealers, hotel keepers and dealers in many lines. No profits will accrue to the Legion or the association, which would be incorporated and controlled by the directing heads of the Legion."

ASKS $3,634,191 CHILD FUND

Welfare Board Wants an Increase of $1,500,000.

In its request for next year's appropriation the Board of Child Welfare has asked for $3,634,191.19, an approximate increase over 1920 of $1,500,000. In presenting the budget estimate Sophie Irene Loeb, President of the board, said it was estimated that the number of children in institutions was 50 per cent. less than previously.

"During the years 1918 and 1919, and to Sept. 1, this year," she said, "out of 16,000 widows under our care only eleven have come under probation in the Children's Court. As against this, 908 children of other widows not under our jurisdiction have come under probation in the Children's Court.

"At the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children out of 16,000 children or widows only ten were taken into custody, as against 950 children who were not under our care and who received attention from the society. In the Police Department thirty-three, all boys, were apprehended for minor offenses. As against this, for the year 1918 only, in that department 843 children not under our care were apprehended by the police. The saving to the city is plainly to be seen."

Other estimates received were: Bronx Parkway Commission, $192,501; Trustees of Hunter College, $1,015,609; Teachers' Retirement System, $2,929,147; Board of City Record, $1,914,309; Register, Bronx County, $158,938.

Catholic Charities Choose Officers.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Bishop Thomas J. Shahan of this city, rector of the Catholic University, was re-elected President of the National Conference of Catholic Charities today at the closing session of its sixth biennial meeting. Cardinal Gibbons was chosen as Honorary President.

SAYS ROOT COURT WON'T HELP HARDING

Colby Scouts Idea That It Will Operate as Substitute for League of Nations.

PART OF LEAGUE PROJECT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Secretary Colby was asked today regarding the reported attitude of Senator Harding and some other Republicans toward the so-called Root plan for the formation of an International Court of Justice. Mr. Colby replied:

"The idea which seems to have obsessed some minds that the International Court, recommended by the body of which former Secretary Root was a member, will operate as an alternative to or substitute for the League of Nations project, or that it will serve as a plank on which Senator Harding could step ashore, is wholly unfounded and erroneous.

"The report made by the body which worked out the details for the proposed court was submitted to the Council of the League of Nations, which is an authorized part of the League project. That report was not made to the Senate oligarchy nor to the Harding Board of Political Strategy and Control."

It was suggested to Secretary Colby that efforts had been made to have it appear that, while Mr. Root was abroad, he had been engaged in conversations with leaders of the allied Governments with a view to ascertaining whether they would be willing to yield modifications of the League project, and that Mr. Root has made confidential reports to Senator Harding and the Old Guard in the Senate on such conferences.

"I have no information," responded Secretary Colby, "not even of the most nebulous and shadowy kind, that any such conversations ever took place."

Asked whether he cared to comment on Senator Harding's reported substitute plans for the League of Nations he replied with a smile:

"I feel a certain restraint in discussing the plan imputed to Senator Harding because he has not yet evolved one."

Secretary Colby paid a tribute to the services of former Secretary Root.

"Mr. Root," he said, "is a very serious and profound student in his field. Unless he is on the brink of breaking with everything he has said and stood for in the past, I regard it as altogether unlikely that he has done other than try to perform a high duty with the greatest power at his command and in the strictest good faith while serving abroad on the body which worked out the details for the projected world court."

Secretary Colby held that the project formulated by the International Committee of Jurists appointed by the League of Nations was a careful effort to comply with the directions of the Council of the League.

Mr. Colby thought that the thing which gave significance to the work of the committee was the fact that the League of Nations had effected for the first time an organization for the background of the court. The court idea, he stated, was not new, as it was discussed at both conferences at The Hague, and there had long been in existence in the United States a World Court League, of which he was at one time a director.

The difficulty in the way of establishing such a court heretofore, he said, was always the question of its jurisdiction, a constant matter of dispute, as the nations never before agreed to submit causes to it for adjudication nor consented to abide by its decisions. This defect, he stated, had been removed by the Covenant of the League of Nations.

He added that the impression that the court plan offered an alternative for the League of Nations was without foundation.

TCHITCHERIN ASSAILS COLBY

Hopes America Will Reject Secretary's "Short-sighted Policy."

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Soviet Russia considers it necessary to establish peaceful and friendly relations with the "existing governments" of all countries, says The Daily Herald, organ of labor, in reporting the protest of George Tchitcherin, Russian Bolshevist Minister of Foreign Affairs, against the note on Russia sent to Italy by Bainbridge Colby, American Secretary of State.

Hope that America will reject Secretary Colby's "short-sighted policy" is expressed by M. Tchitcherin, says the newspaper, and a desire that normal relations between the United States and Russia may be established, "despite profound differences in their organization," is voiced in the protest.

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—According to a semi-official dispatch reaching Tokio, concrete plans for Bolshevizing the world have been perfected in Moscow, and agents shortly will be detailed to America, Japan, China and Asia generally for the campaign. The plan includes a propaganda offensive against Germany, according to these advices, which declared Bolshevist agents already were active in England and France.

Colonel Roosevelt Assails League.

BILLINGS, Mont., Sept. 16.—Arraignment of the League of Nations as a "death trap" and "a military alliance for war" was made here last night by Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Raymond Robins in two addresses. They spoke to a meeting of women in the afternoon and at separate places at night.

BRITISH VIEW OF ELECTION.

Question of How We Shall Forsake Aloofness, Says London Times.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The London Times in an editorial article says:

"The Presidential election, we are told, will in all probability be fought on domestic issues and not upon the question of the League of Nations or no League of Nations. This may very well be, and yet it is our profound belief that the ultimate issue to be decided by the American people at the polls in November is and must be this: In what temper and to what degree shall they forsake their old aloofness? That they will forsake it is a foregone conclusion. It is as much beyond the power of this country to return to the conditions which ended with the nineteenth century. Forces still imperfectly realized have been set loose which must draw the United States and Great Britain with them, and the blind refusal to recognize the fact will avail nothing. The times call for a courageous acceptance of things as they are as a first condition of their eventual improvement. We live in a sick world, and we must continue to live in it if we are to set about the business of a cure.

"This it is which gives to the American election an importance far transcending the boundaries of the United States. Its conduct is the affair of the American people alone, but its issue is the concern of all the world."

EXPLOSION RECALLS SAGE DYNAMITING

Halifax Harbor Munitions Disaster and Black Tom Blast Most Deadly of Long List.

Twenty-nine years ago, when a maniac attempted to kill Russell Sage by exploding a charge of dynamite in the financier's office, the scenes in Wall Street and the financial district nearby here similar to the one enacted yesterday when a powerful explosive was set off in Wall Street opposite the office of J. P. Moran & Co.

Then, as yesterday, the terrific explosion attracted thousands from nearby office buildings. Police reserves of half a dozen police stations were called out, scores of ambulances clattered up to care for the injured, and the apparatus of the Fire Department was summoned.

The Russell Sage outrage took place within a stone's throw of yesterday's explosion, in the office of Mr. Sage on the second floor of 71 Broadway, on the site of the Empire Building. Norcross, a madman, demanded $1,200,000 of Sage. The financier edged away, waving off Norcross as a harmless crank, but the man cried "Here goes!" and dashed a satchel containing dynamite to the floor. B. F. Norton, Mr. Sage's secretary, was killed and eight persons were injured.

Shooting of J. P. Morgan Recalled.

Many explosions and bomb outrages have occurred in New York and in various parts of the country in recent years. A number of attempts have also been made on the lives of prominent financiers. Among these was the attempt on the life of J. P. Morgan by Frank Holt, the man who set off a bomb in the Senate Building in Washington.

Holt gained admittance to Mr. Morgan's home near Glen Cove, L. I., on July 3, 1915, and fired several shots at the banker, two of which took effect. Junius Spencer, son of the banker, arrived at his father's home with his bride shortly after the shooting. Holt said his reason for shooting Mr. Morgan was that he wanted to induce him to use his influence to put an embargo on war munitions.

Another financier who was the intended victim of a madman was H. C. Frick, the millionaire iron magnate. Alexander Berkman, the anarchist, deported to Soviet Russia a year ago, tried to kill Frick in 1892 and served a term of fourteen years' imprisonment for the offense.

A bomb explosion in which four I. W. W.'s were killed took place on July 4, 1914, on an upper floor of a tenement at 1,626 Lexington Avenue. Berkman said at the time that the bomb was intended for John D. Rockefeller. Among the dead was Arthur Caron, leader in an I. W. W. demonstration against Mr. Rockefeller.

In October, 1915, a bomb was set off in front of St. Alphensus's Roman Catholic Church. Several months later, detectives of the bomb squad arrested two anarchists as they set off a dynamite bomb in St. Patrick's Cathedral.

2,800 Killed in Halifax Disaster.

The bomb explosion in Ink Alley, Los Angeles, on Oct. 1, 1910, resulted in the death of twenty-one employes of The Los Angeles Times. J. J. McNamara, Secretary and Treasurer of the Structural Bridge Workers' Union, confessed to setting the bomb because of attacks by the newspaper on union labor.

During the war explosions of munitions caused the death of several thousand persons in the United States and a large number in Canada.

The Halifax disaster on Dec. 6, 1917, cost 2,800 lives and 3,000 persons were injured. One thousand tons of munitions on the French steamship Mont Blanc exploded when the vessel collided with the Belgium Relief steamship Imo. An area of two square miles was laid waste by the explosion. The scenes in Halifax were said by former soldiers to have been worse than a battlefield. A raging blizzard added to the horror of the situation. The property damage was placed at millions of dollars.

Eighteen tons of black powder ignited in the munition works of the Eddystone Corporation, near Chester, Pa., on April 10, 1917, and 125 persons were killed. The explosion set off 10,000 shrapnel shells.

A man was killed and several injured when an anarchist threw a bomb at a meeting of the unemployed in Union Square on March 28, 1908. The meeting brought together 7,000 persons, but no permit had been accorded the leaders of the demonstration. An advancing platoon of patrolmen, who began pushing the crowd back, swept toward a madman, Selig Silverstein. He raised his hand to throw the bomb, but it exploded and tore his arm off. As he was dying he confessed he took it to the meeting to throw at the police. Had it landed in the platoon many policemen would have been killed or injured. In Silverstein's room was found a letter from Alexander Berkman.

Black Tom Explosion Deadly.

One hundred persons were killed and 800 injured on May 18, 1918, when a charge of T N T went off in the Oakdale plant of the Aetna Chemical Company near Pittsburgh.

Several tons of T N T were exploded on Oct. 4, 1918, in the shell loading plant of T. A. Gillespie & Co. at Morgans, near Perth Amboy, N. J. The toll of dead amounted to from 50 to 150 and the plant, which cost $8,000,000, was wrecked.

Two city blocks were laid waste and forty-four persons killed in a gasoline explosion at Ardmore, Okla., in September, 1915.

A mysterious explosion in the Douglas Starch Works, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on May 22, 1919, killed 25 persons and hurt 100.

An explosion that was heard in five States, wreaking a damage placed at $20,000,000, occurred on July 30, 1916, when a small blaze ignited high explosives on the deck of a barge anchored near Black Tom Island, Jersey City. The explosion was heard for 100 miles and the earth near New York trembled as if an earthquake had occurred. About $1,000,000 worth of plate glass was broken. The death list was placed at two and there was a long list of injured.

One thousand families were rendered homeless when the ammunition plant of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company near Kingsland, N. J., blew up in 1917. The strange explosion caused no loss of life, as the destruction was limited to shells which blew up into the air and fell in the vicinity of the factory.

The lack of detonating fuses in the shells was responsible for the fact that no lives were lost. The explosion of the shells was like a continuous bombardment of a battle and was heard in Northern New Jersey, New York City, Westchester and the west end of Long Island.

Thirty persons were killed and great property damage sustained when forty tons of dynamite exploded at the Communipaw terminal of the Central Railroad of New Jersey on Feb. 1, 1911.

ROOSEVELT RAPS HAYS FOR APPEAL TO WOMEN

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 16.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency, spoke here today before a good-sized audience, about half of whom were women, in the New Bedford Theatre.

During his address Mr. Roosevelt ridiculed the statement of Chairman Hays relative to letting the women decide whether the United States should enter into obligations that would make their sons liable to be ordered abroad to settle foreign disputes. He said that there was no idea of ordering an American army to foreign soil unless the people desired it.

"I have respect for a successful pickpocket and sympathy for a liar," he continued, "but Mr. Hays is far more dangerous than a great many liars, because he gives out statements like that and tries to make the people believe what isn't true."

Mr. Roosevelt said he believed the people of the West had awakened to the issues of the campaign earlier than those of the East. He urged the people to read the arguments of both sides and get away from what grandfather voted and thought.

The speaker's strongest appeal was to progressives to consider the record of Governor Cox, and that of Senator Harding, "representative of a small group of Senators and bosses, who dares not make a move until he receives permission from the clique that he represents."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 16.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for Vice President, defended the League of Nations and the Administration's record in a speech here tonight.

Mr. Roosevelt accused the Republicans of taking their issues out of the past, and said that Congress had spent over $3,000,000 "in conducting, I think, eighty-seven different investigation" to locate extravagance in the Government, yet not a man had been indicted.

GEN. FAYOLLE PRAISES AMERICAN DOUGHBOY

French Soldier on Eve of Departure for United States Pays Tribute to Men.

PARIS, Sept. 14 (Associated Press).—"The American doughboy need not take off his hat to any soldier of any of the armies engaged in the great war. There were some as good as he, but none better." Thus spoke General Fayolle of the French Army, who in the closing phases of the war used in the counter offensive against the Germans alongside the French troops seven American divisions. The General was talking on the eve of his departure for the United States, where he is to represent the French Army at the convention of the American Legion in Cleveland.

"The Americans were simply magnificent," continued General Fayolle. "As a matter of fact, some of them were brave to such an extent as one might call it rashness. You know, it was under my command that the Americans received their baptism of fire at Cantigny. Then again, on July 18, they were with me in the offensive between Soissons and Chateau Thierry."

"Magnificent," "marvelous," General Fayolle kept repeating.

"Your soldiers," General Fayolle went on, "were not only men as regards courage, but also in endurance and unfailing good humor. But there was one branch in the military service in which they were totally deficient, and it was one of the most important in military science.

"They could not cook, or they were too busy fighting to bother about such trifles as cooking."

The General said this with a merry twinkle in his eye. Then he added: "I shall be happy to meet the American poilus who were my comrades in battle."

General Fayolle will be accompanied to the United States by Lieut. Col. Wrequinzv, a member of Marshal Joffre's mission to America, and also Lieutenant Soubiran, who will be his interpreter. This will be the General's first visit to the United States.

FIRST CENSUS IN JAPAN.

Many Citizens Disturbed by Fear of Personal Questions.

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—Japan's preparations for beginning the first census on Oct. 1 are causing many persons extreme perturbation.

Scores have visited the authorities or written praying that their past be not disclosed or examined because they have changed their names on account of family dissensions or other reasons.

The authorities are kept busy issuing tranquilizing notes explaining that the census is merely a scientific investigation to determine the present state of the empire and is not actuated by any desire to probe into the pasts of the populace.

M'KINLEY AHEAD NOW IN ILLINOIS

GOVERNOR FIGHT CLOSE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—All day today the increased returns from yesterday's primary showed the Republican candidates for Governor and Senator, supported by Mayor Thompson, to be still ahead of the candidates backed by Governor Lowden, although the margin continued small and tended to decrease.

Late tonight, however, with a correction in Chicago returns, taking 5,000 votes away from the Thompson candidate for Senator, Frank L. Smith, William B. McKinley, the candidate backed by Governor Lowden, took the lead in the race by 3,382 on returns from 4,973 precincts out of 5,737 in Illinois, including 2,807 outside of Cook County.

The corrected totals in the 4,973 precincts were: McKinley, 299,798; Smith, 296,116.

With about 1,000 precincts missing tonight, Len Small had an indicated plurality of 15,000 for Governor over Lieutenant Governor Oglesby, whom Governor Lowden supported.

Both Oglesby and Small still claim victory. At Springfield, the Oglesby managers say they have complete returns from fifty-four counties which gave Oglesby a lead of 64,300.

The Small managers, on the other hand, assert that Small has a lead of about 100,000 in Cook County, which is more than enough to overcome the down State vote for Oglesby.

Incomplete returns indicate that for the other State offices the candidates on the anti-Thompson ticket won.

Robert Emmet Burke may have won over Peter A. Waller of Kewanee, indorsed by the organization as a candidate for United States Senator. The vote is close, and the result may depend on the official canvass. Burke was the only delegate to vote against Wilson at the St. Louis Convention in 1916, and is an out-and-out anti-League candidate.

COLORADO CONTESTS CLOSE

Non-Partisan League Candidates Lead in Democratic Primaries.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 10.—Returns from Tuesday's primary, compiled by The Denver Times, included 1,126 precincts out of 1,532 precincts in the State, give Karl C. Schuyler of this city, a lead of 2,326 over Samuel D. Nicholson of Leadville, for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

A victory for the non-Partisan League in the Democratic primaries was indicated with nearly complete returns from the principal cities and scattered returns from over the State. In Denver, eleven of the twelve Democratic candidates for the Legislature are non-Partisan Leaguers, as are three candidates for the State Senate. James M. Collins, non-Partisan League candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, has a lead of 7,001 votes in two-thirds of the preceincts. Judge Tully Scott of the State Supreme Court has a lead of 1,051 over W. R. Callicotte, non-Partisan League candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator with half the precincts tabulated.

ASSAILS REPUBLICANS' DATA

"Misstatements and Shameless Attacks," Says Harrison.

Campaign pamphlets which are being circulated by the Republican National Committee bristle with misstatements and shameless attacks not only on the Wilson Administration, but "upon patriotic men and women who served their country during the war," according to a statement made by Senator Pat Harrison, Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau of the Democratic National Committee.

Senator Harrison was prompted to make this statement by a report which reached the committee yesterday to the effect that the Republican National Committee had withdrawn from circulation a pamphlet charging an outlay of $30,000,000 in spruce production for airplane purposes. This pamphlet and others in the same series are being sent out purely for the guidance of Republican campaign orators.

"An error in the text is the reason given for the recall of the spruce pamphlet," said Senator Harrison. "On this basis every pamphlet issued by the Republican Committee should be withdrawn. The full series, printed elaborately and at great expense, is filled with distortion of facts and mendacious misrepresentation.

"Shameless attacks are made upon patriotic men and women who served their country during the war, the sole purpose of the Republican propaganda being to gain votes without regard to the truth. It is no wonder that decent Republicans forced the withdrawal of the untruthful spruce pamphlet, and it will not be surprising if this same element should force the unscrupulous leaders to recall the rest of the series.

"Misrepresentation is a mild term to apply to most of the statements in this Republican series. The proprieties alone deter me from using a stronger term. I think they will prove a boomerang when subjected to the cold analysis of fair-minded Americans."

Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, is in Chicago this week. Colonel Thomas W. Miller, head of the Eastern Speakers' Bureau at headquarters of the Republican National Committee, had nothing to say on Senator Harrison's statement.

Upholds Holcomb's Suffrage Action.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16.—Former Governor Simeon E. Baldwin, a former Chief Justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors, today said that in his opinion Governor Holcomb is right in calling another special session of the General Assembly to specifically ratify the Nineteenth Amendment. He believed that ratification on Tuesday when the Legislature had not had submitted to it the rescript from Secretary Colby was a questionable proceeding.

LONERGAN TO RUN AGAINST BRANDEGEE

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16.—Connecticut Democrats today nominated a full State ticket, placing every name upon it by acclamation.

For United States Senator to oppose Frank B. Brandegee, Augustine Lonergan of Hartford was selected. He has been Congressman from the First District for four terms. He will oppose Brandegee by appealing directly to the people of the State to support the League of Nations, which Brandegee opposed.

A woman was nominated for Secretary of State.

For Controller, Albert P. Walsh of Danbury.

The party gave to Middlesex County the Gubernatorial nomination for the first time in several generations. Mrs. Fanny Dixon Welch of Columbia is the first woman to be placed upon a Connecticut State ticket. She has been a suffrage leader and a leader in humanitarian projects in the State for years. Emil Marzano is one of the most prominent Italian-Americans of Hartford.

The platform indorsed the Administration of President Wilson, congratulated the women of the State on their admission to suffrage, urged a commission to be part of the Labor Board to investigate disputes, asked legislation establishing suitable health insurance, pledged the aid of the party to check profiteering, demanded revision of the civil service code of the State, urged establishing claims courts, provisions for neglected and dependent children and prompt measures for developing agriculture in the State. It urged making Election Day a legal holiday and the creation of an absentee voters' law. It stated that the administrative machinery of the State was choked with useless offices and commissions and that the rising cost of living demanded simplified and more economical State machinery.

Promise Blow at Cox in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 16.—Revelations of country-wide interest in connection with Governor Cox are promised by the Republican State Committee when the Ohio campaign opens tomorrow night. Secrecy is maintained as to the material to be used and manner of using it, but Chairman Clark promises that there will be wide interest in the material placed upon the screens at the meeting. Democrats deny knowledge of what the Republicans have in store, but they do not think it serious.

It was announced at Republican National Headquarters yesterday that Elihu Root and Charles E. Hughes both would speak at the meeting to be addressed here next month by Senator Harding. The date has not been fixed as yet.

Ex-President Taft, it was announced, had volunteered to devote two weeks to campaigning for the Republican candidates. One week will be devoted to New York.

VAINLY SEEK MISSING CHILD.

Union Hill Police Get No Trace of Cirelli Baby.

The kidnapping on Tuesday night of the twenty-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Cirelli, 112 Main Street, Union Hill, N. J., from its perambulator while the mother was visiting a friend is still unsolved. The police still believe a drunken man took the child. Detective Lieutenant Charles Dillman said he had evidence that might throw light on the motive for the kidnapping.

Chief of Police Fred Enge, accompanied by Lieutenants Dillman and Stanford, of Union Hill spent most of yesterday in searching the foreign colonies in Union Hill, Hoboken, West Hoboken, North Bergen, Guttenberg, West New York, Cliffside, Fort Lee, Passaic and Hackensack. No arrests were made.

Mrs. Cirelli is under the care of a physician at her home. Her other three children, Ethel, 11 years old; Patsy, 9, and Laura, 7, are being carefully guarded.

The father of the child, part owner of a clothing establishment on Bergenline Avenue, says he has received no letters asking ransom for the child or any messages from cranks.

TAFT WIRES WADSWORTH.

In a telegram congratulating United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., on his renomination, ex-President William H. Taft said that the "overwhelming vote" in his favor gave "gratifying evidence that the enfranchisement of women held no prospect of party or faction based on sex alone."

In the message, which came from Point au Pic, Province of Quebec, Mr. Taft said: "The newly made voters are looking forward progressively to real issues and are not to be fooled by appeals to personal prejudice because of any issue fully decided in which all acquiesce."

Senator Wadsworth, who visited headquarters of the Republican National Committee yesterday, when asked to comment on his renomination said: "I appreciate very highly the support which Republican men and women gave me in the primary election. A grave responsibility is placed upon me as the Republican candidate for United States Senator. My determination is to expend every effort in helping to win a great victory for the party on Election Day."

William H. Anderson, Superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon League, said yesterday that the defeat of Mrs. Ella A. Boole, the league candidate, was due to the fact that she entered the campaign too late and did not have funds enough to enable her to make a real fight.

COLBY TO STUMP FOR COX.

Secretary Will Make Several Speeches for Ticket.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Secretary Colby is to take an active part in the campaign for the election of Governor Cox.

"It would be a pleasure to make many speeches in this campaign," said Mr. Colby today. "In 1916, in the words of the late Colonel Roosevelt, I had a perfectly bully time making campaign speeches, playing one night stands, while making speeches all the way through to the coast."

Mr. Colby stated that arrangements for him to speak had been made before E. H. Moore came to Washington yesterday.

Mr. Colby will go as far West as Chicago, making about one speech a week, usually at the week end. His itinerary will probably include a speech in New York City and another in New Engand, probably at Boston.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 16.—Following news this afternoon of the explosion in New York, city and county authorities adopted measures to prevent bombing outrages here. The action was based on the supposition that the explosion in New York was the work of anarchists.

These guards tonight are watching the dwellings of Judge John D. Shafer in Marlborough Avenue, Judge Thomas J. Ford in Aspinwall and Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Ingram. CHARGE CONSPIRACY TO WRECK DRY LAW

BLACKLIST ON CANDIDATES

Will Fight Taggart and Representative Porter—Kramer Asks Moral Support.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Declaration was made today by Prohibition Commissioner Kramer that dry law enforcement machinery was inadequate. Coupled with this was a statement by the Anti-Saloon League that the "nation is confronted by a gigantic and vicious conspiracy to discredit and ultimately overthrow prohibition."

Mr. Kramer in making his declaration in an address before the Anti-Saloon League Conference here added that in numerous communities prohibition cases were being dragged into Federal courts at a rate of ten to twenty a week. The result, he said, was jammed court dockets and delay in the trial of dry law violators.

The Anti-Saloon League embodied its conspiracy charges in a resolution which served notice that it would attempt removal of public officials derelict in prohibition enforcement. At the same time officials of the league made public a partial list of candidates for Congress whom it will seek to defeat because of their position on prohibition.

Commissioner Kramer frankly told the conference that his agency in addition to being confronted with a shortage of personnel had within it men who were not "straight." It would have been a "miracle," he added, if there had not been some men who had proved to be unfaithful to the oath inasmuch as the dry enforcement corps had been built up in about six months.

While the conference gave Mr. Kramer's organization a vote of confidence and a pledge of support, speakers asserted this stand would not "soften" condemnation of officials of whatever rank who did not observe the letter of the law in searching out liquor law violators.

The resolution adopted by the conference also called upon Congress to adopt "some standard for 'good behavior' by defining misconduct," for which appointees, such as Federal Judges, might be removed from office. The present laws made impeachment difficult and impractical, the resolutions said, and Congress was urged to provide methods by which those who "wink at violation of" law may be dealt with summarily.

The league in its campaign for a continued dry majority in Congress will support Senator Watson, Republican, against Thomas Taggart, Democrat, in the Indiana Senatorial contest, and Frank B. Willis, Republican, in the Ohio Senatorial race.

Among the present members of the House selected by the league as objects of its attack is Representative Porter of Pennsylvania, Chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Mr. Wheeler said the dry forces anticipated a real fight in Ohio in order to maintain their strength in the Senate.

Representative Brooks of the Twentieth Pennsylvania District, also will be opposed by the dry workers.

Mr. Wheeler said the incumbents in the 25th and 28th Pennsylvania and the 5th and 11th Ohio Districts were satisfactory to the league and that it was supporting their campaigns.

Two districts in West Virginia, the 1st and 2d, provide another battle ground for the dry workers. The two members of the House from those districts were dry and their opponents both are running on platforms of beer and light wines, Mr. Wheeler said. The league proposes that such candidates shall not "pry open the door which already has been closed and locked."

Mr. Wheeler said fights also would have to be made in the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th Districts in Indiana.

S. L. Nicholson of Richmond, Ind., a national organizer for the league, declared that if the league desired to avoid "the hottest fight in its history in 1922" it must retain its present dry majority in Congress this year.

The wets claim they will add twenty-six to their strength in the House, Mr. Nicholson said. He added, however, that the results of primaries thus far did not bear out their optimism.

In making public the list of candidates to be opposed, Mr. Wheeler told the conference that dry workers would not know definitely the names of all candidates on its "black and white lists" until all primaries have been held. He explained the league would enter no local fight except where records of the candidates showed the prohibition question to be an issue.

Commissioner Kramer in addressing the conference suggested the organization of local committees "of a hundred or more" to build up a sentiment for observance of the prohibition law.

"We are having a hard and uphill fight," Mr. Kramer said, "but on the whole it is a winning fight. I am doing my best to enforce the law as it was intended to be enforced. I am not asking for sympathy, I am not seeking to establish an alibi, nor am I trying to 'pass the buck.' I knew this job was a hard one and would require the utmost that is in me. I say, therefore, that I want only your help."

AIMS TO DRY UP CITY FAST AND QUIETLY

A serious attempt to "dry up" New York in as short a time as possible without the enlistment of spectacular "crusades" against liquor sellers will begin shortly, said Frank L. Boyd, Federal Supervising Prohibition Agent in the New York District, yesterday. Mr. Boyd has been appointed to the post hitherto occupied by James Shevlin, who has been transferred to Texas.

The first thing Mr. Boyd did yesterday was to call all the enforcement officers into his office. The conference was private, but it was learned that Mr. Boyd congratulated the men on their work and pledged his absolute support to them, promising to back them to the limit in their duties. He assured the men that so long as they did their duty no influence would be able to reach them and affect their positions.

"Spectacular raids for the purpose of impressing the public will not figure in my plans for the conduct of the office of Federal Supervising Prohibition Agent," said Mr. Boyd yesterday. "I shall expect the men under me to work in a quiet, systematic manner and clamp the lid tight against the trafficking in liquor."

No favoritism will be shown to violators of the law, big or little, he added. All, irrespective of financial power or prestige, if they seek to violate the provisions of the law, will be arrested and vigorously prosecuted, he said.

Mr. Boyd said he would take the first opportunity next week to visit up-State cities and towns in order to make plans for full co-operation between the local and Federal authorities. He said that he would confer with all the agents up-State who worked under Mr. Shevlin and seek their hearty co-operation in the common task. The Canadian border, where there have been many reports lately of liquor running, is a problem in which Mr. Boyd is interested. He intends to look thoroughly into the situation on the border with a view to an early termination of conditions said to exist whereby liquor is smuggled into New York and Vermont across the Canadian border.

It was said that conditions at the border were not so bad as they were earlier in the year and that now none but professional bootleggers were engaged in bringing whisky into New York and Vermont from Canada. Formerly the contraband liquor was brought in by private individuals for their own consumption, but this has largely been stopped.

Although rumors of an impending shape-up in the personnel persisted yesterday, no action was taken by Mr. Boyd as far as could be learned.

In a day or two Mr. Boyd will visit Brooklyn to look over the ground and investigate conditions in that borough. It was said that he was acquainted with William D. Allen, in charge of enforcing the law in Brooklyn, and that he would have an early conference with him. Allen and Shevlin had several disagreements, it was said, especially since Allen was returned to Brooklyn over the head of Shevlin. Nine enforcement agents in Brooklyn are now under indictment.

Mr. Boyd will move his offices on Monday from the Custom House to 49 West Twenty-seventh Street.

Daniel J. Gorman, owner of the Annex Hotel, on the Bowery, Coney Island, was arrested last night by Agents Fleming and Haynes. The agents said he sold them two drinks at 75 cents each.

Gorman was one of the first men to lodge a complaint against Benson C. Laverty, accusing the latter of extorting money from him. When Gorman appeared before the Grand Jury his evidence was considered unsatisfactory and the complaint was not prosecuted.

Agents also arrested Michael Golden of Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, Brooklyn, where they said they found some gin and whisky. Thomas Gunn, Golden's bartender, was also arrested.

William Fox Has Made The Drama Divine

Tonight at 8:15, for the first time, at the ASTOR THEATRE, you will be one of the privileged thousands who will see the first presentation on any screen of Will Carleton's immortal poem,

OVER THE HILL TO THE POORHOUSE

The "story" of this poem has lived for years in the hearts of millions—henceforth on the screen it will be remembered forever throughout the world.

It is a story with a dozen big throbbing punches that will cause you to grip the arms of your chair in the theatre. It has humor and pathos, smiles and tears.

The only living beings who will not enjoy and be deeply touched by this picture are hypocrites. We invite all hypocrites to stay away from the ASTOR during the run of "the story you will never forget."

YANKEES DROP BACK INTO SECOND PLACE

RUTH FAILS IN PINCH

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 16.—The White Sox tossed the Yankees back into second place in the American League pennant race at Comiskey Park this afternoon. The Yanks were beaten 8 to 3, while Cleveland beat the Washingtons and romped back into first place. A crowd of 25,000 fans rejoiced at the come-back of the Sox, who are now only 10 points behind the Huggins troupe.

The Yankees should be kept after school and spanked for losing today's ball game. Extravagant misplays and a wilful waste of opportunity set the Yanks back. Twelve Yank runners were left on the bases to starve. They deserved to lose for not displaying more determination when so much was at stake as today's conflict. Such has been the exasperating ways of the Yankees this season. They fail to come through at critical moments.

Manager Huggins watched both Quinn and Thormahlen warm up before today's game and then pitched Quinn, although Jack has been knocked out of the box in the last two games he has started. The White Sox came to life suddenly when they faced Quinn and knocked him out of the box in the second inning. Mogridge, who took Jack's place, pitched fine ball during the three innings he was in the game.

Kerr Hands Out Passes.

Dick Kerr pitched for the White Sox and more than half a dozen times he was on the edge of the precipice of defeat and not one of the Yanks had the heart to push him over. He issued half a dozen passes and New York got nine hits, but when impending runs were begging to be promulgated, it was then that the Yanks fell down.

The downfall of Quinn followed a stupid play by the Yanks in the second inning which spilled the beans all over the kitchen. After Jackson had opened the second with a double Felsch put a roller on the inner lawn and both Quinn and Ward went after it. This left third uncovered, and as Jackson went to third Quinn stood there with the ball in his hand and shooting killing glances at Ward, while Felsch went to first base unmolested. That is just one little sample of the mental laxity of the Yanks this afternoon.

Quinn was blown out of the box by the dynamite of the Sox bats and they had four runs before Huggins sent Mogridge to the rescue. Four runs is nothing for the Yanks to be afraid of and they had plenty of chances to get them back.

Ruth Fails in Pinch.

Perhaps the most distressing moment of the game came in the sixth when the victory was laid right out in front of Babe Ruth, and the Monarch stood there straining at the leash while he was called out on strikes. Two runs had gone over the plate in this momentous inning and there were two gone and two runners on the bases when Ruth came up. Here was just the dramatic moment for Babe to launch his fiftieth homer. A circuit slam would have sent over three runs and put the Yanks in front by a score of 5 to 4. Kerr wasn't trying to pass Ruth. He was pitching for all he was worth right at him and daring him to hit it. The count was two strikes and two balls when Dick shot over one which Ruth failed to swing at and Umpire Moriarty waved him out.

Strunk got a hit in the Sox first when he bounded a wee grounder to the infield and thereby instituted a brief misunderstanding between Quinn and Ward about which one should take it. Neither of them got it.

Weaver sacrificed Strunk to second and Eddie Collins lined to Lewis, who got the ball back to Pratt in time to make a double play on Strunk. Jackson opened on Quinn in the second with a two-bagger to left centre and Felsch bunted. Quinn fielded the ball and it also pulled Ward in. Quinn turned to make a play at third on Jackson and was peeved when he saw that Ward was not at third. Quinn could have made a play at first, but instead he held the ball.

White Sox Pound Ball.

John Collins ripped a triple to left centre, scoring Jackson and Felsch. Risberg singled to centre scoring John Collins. Risberg went down on a passed ball and Schalk skied to Pipp for the first out. Ward made a great stop of Kerr's hot grounder and threw him out at first. Strunk sounded the knell for Quinn when he doubled to right, scoring Risberg. Mogridge took up the pitching duties for the Yanks. The inning closed when Weaver skied to Lewis.

In both fourth and fifth innings the Yanks laid the foundation for a couple of rallies but didn't go through with them. With one out in the fourth Lewis walked and went to second on Ward's single to right. Hannah hammered a terrific drive between left and centre, but the uncanny Felsch made a great catch. Mogridge ended it when he flied to Jackson.

There was one down in the fifth when Pipp drew a ticket and went to third when Ruth banged a single to right. Pratt's unwelcome contribution was a foul fly to Weaver, while the best that Meusel could do was rolled to Kerr, who chucked him out at first. Kerr lost control in the sixth and walked both Lewis and Ward. Hanna bounded a single off John Collins's shoe and filled the bases.

Yankee Rally Falls.

Sammy Vick was sent in to hit in place of Mogridge and had the colossal nerve to strike out. Peck whanged a long sacrifice fly to left which Jackson caught after galloping back almost to the fence. Lewis scored after the catch. Pipp singled to left, scoring Ward. With Ruth up and two on the bases it looked like curtains for Kerr, but while the crowd howled with delight Ruth was called out on strikes and the rally was over.

Babe Ruth made a great running catch of John Collins's rocket in the sixth and Risberg got an infield hit to second, Schalk fouled to Hanna and Kerr was safe on Ward's fumble. Risberg went to third on a passed ball, and on a double steal Risberg scored. Strunk walked and Pratt threw out Weaver.

The Yanks treated more good opportunities with shameful disdain in the seventh. Pratt walked and Meusel flied to Jackson. Lewis singled to left and Strunk made a nice catch of Ward's fly. Hannah had a good chance to aid the cause, but was called out on strikes.

Eddie Collins got an infield hit in the seventh and went to third when Jackson singled to centre. Felsch rolled to Ward, who threw E. Collins out at the plate. Ward threw John Collins out at first. Peck left Risberg's easy grounder go through him to left centre field and Jackson and Felsch scored on the error. Schalk walked and when Kerr singled to centre, Risberg scored. Strunk forced Kerr for the third out.

Fewster, hitting in place of Collins in the eighth, doubled to left and went to third on Risberg's wild return of the ball. Peck's long sacrifice fly to left scored Fewster. Pipp was an easy out, Eddie to John Collins. Ruth was an easier out by the very same process.

Brooklyn Has Big Edge; Tight Fit in the American

By virtue of its victory over the Cincinnati Reds yesterday, and the fact that the Giants were able only to break even with Pittsburgh, today finds Brooklyn so firmly entrenched in first place that the chances of the Dodgers being dislodged are very remote. Brooklyn has 11 more games to play. Should it win 6 and lose 5 it would stand:

	Won.	Lost.	PC.
Brooklyn	91	63	.591

To beat this mark the Reds would have to win 16 of its 18 remaining games. Cincinnati then would stand:

	Won.	Lost.	PC.
Cincinnati	91	62	.595

Should the Dodgers win 6, the Giants would have to win 15 of their 16 games to beat out Brooklyn. New York then would stand:

	Won.	Lost.	PC.
New York	92	63	.593

In the American League, Cleveland has 16 more games to play. Should the Indians break even their percentage would be:

	Won.	Lost.	PC.
Cleveland	94	60	.610

The Yankees then would have to win 7 of their 12 games to have:

	Won.	Lost.	PC.
New York	95	59	.617

And the White Sox would have to capture 9 of their 13 games to beat Cleveland. They then would have:

	Won.	Lost.	PC.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The Yanks have been in first place three times this season but they have always moved out before they have had a chance to see whether they like it.

The last four runs scored by the Sox were made after two were out and they had both times missed, by foolish errors, the chance to retire the side.

Muddy Ruel rejoined the club today. His lacerated finger has healed but is still too swollen for duty.

The Yanks have never worried yet about a defeat and they don't worry about this one. They expect to take the next two games here just as easily as they lost the first one.

Meusel had three chances to drive in runs but didn't get anything which even looked like a hit.

Ruth got two singles in one day, which is an unusual thing for Babe. He forced Pipp in the third, was called out on strikes in the sixth and went out, second to first, in the eighth.

DODGERS INCREASE LEAD FOR PENNANT

RUETHER IS HIT HARD

Miller Clinches Victory in Sixth with Single That Sends Schmandt Over the Plate.

About 12,000 Flatbush pennant dreamers left Ebbets Field yesterday firm in the conviction that the National League pennant will fly from the highly polished flagstaff of Colonel Charles H. Ebbets. It needed but a clash between the Robins and Pat Moran's raucous Cincinnati Reds to placate the feverish minds of the Flatbush baseball populace. Yesterday the two teams locked horns in one of the diamond's crucial series, and when the smoke cleared Brooklyn's lead in the pennant chase had been enhanced by a 5 to 3 victory. The Flatbush clan is now rollicking out in front, separated by six full games from the pretentious world's champions.

Walter Ruether, Pat Moran's vaunted southpaw, tried his hand at checking the palpitating Robins, but like others who have previously attempted a similar feat, Walter fell down woefully. Dutch started with the confidence supposed to repose in a one-run advantage, but the Robins leaped on him without ceremony and flattened the Red portsider with a shower of three hits and two runs in the first inning, which put a different complexion on the pastime. Manager Moran then realized that Ruether had left his effectiveness in the clubhouse and withdrew him from the fray.

Ray Fisher, former Yankee, resumed where Ruether had left off and for a spell it seemed that Ray would upset expectations. He yielded but one run and three hits up to the fifth inning when his mates hopped on Burleigh Grimes and knotted the count at 3 all. In the sixth, however, the Robins took the lead again. Thereafter Grimes adjusted the clamps securely and there was no further Red frivolity.

Grimes's pitching was not quite up to the standard set by the Robin ace. The Reds fell on him viciously in the first and again in the fifth. In the latter frame Daubert crashed a home run drive past Zach Wheat, scoring Rath and bringing the Reds on even terms with the Robins. The timely stick work of his mates, however, restored Grimes's wavering confidence, and the Red efforts were effectively squelched thereafter. All told the Reds connected for eleven hits, but the fielding gems by Miller and Kilduff nullified four of the blows.

Reds Score in First.

Rath rapped a single through Olson to centre to start the game and the fans looked on in open-mouthed wonder. Daubert forced Rath at second and then Jake stole second as Groh fanned. Roush dumped a single in centre, scoring Daubert and took second on the throw-in, but Schmandt took care of Duncan's foul fly.

In their half of the opener the Robins flayed Ruether into submission. Olson singled to centre, stole second and took third as Johnson was being expunged. Neis was purposely passed and Wheat followed with a single to right which scored Olson and put Neis on third. Myers singled to centre, scoring Neis and sending Wheat to second. Schmandt drew a pass, filling the bases. Here Pat Moran called on Fisher. Kilduff greeted Fisher with a single to centre, which scored Wheat, but the orgy ceased when Miller grounded to the box for a double killing, Myers being forced at the plate, while Wingo shot the ball to Daubert in time to get Miller.

Kopf beat out a hit to Johnson in the second, and raced to third on Wingo's rap to right, but Miller's acrobatic catch near the stands on Rath's foul, stopped the rally. With two down in the fifth the Reds suddenly came to life again and tied the score. Rath singled to centre and Daubert followed with a low drive on a line to short left, which went for a home run. Wheat missed a shoestring catch. The ball bounded past him to the temporary bleachers in left field. Groh sent a triple bounding past Neis to the fence, but was marooned when Myers gathered in Roush's fly.

Robins Score Again.

The Robins came right back in the sixth and again assumed the lead. Schmandt opened with a double to the right field fence and Kilduff sacrificed. Miller here supplied the single to centre which sent Schmandt home with the run that broke the deadlock. In the seventh the Robins added another run just to insure victory. After Olson's expiration Johnson singled to left. Tommy Griffith, who had batted for Neis in the fifth, made his second visit to the plate a productive one. The Flatbush tenor poled out a double to centre, which upset Roush and scored Johnson.

There was no further scoring. Manager Moran tried to shake a rally out of his bag of tricks in the ninth when, with two down, he sent Charley See in to bat for Fisher. Charley grounded to Olson.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—Cleveland went back into first place today when it won an exciting pitcher's battle from Washington, 1 to 0.

The first man to face Zachary in the first inning singled and Cleveland did not get another hit until there were two out in the eighth. Sewell then scratched a single, took third on O'Neill's double to right and scored on a wild pitch. The fielding of Wambsganss and Harris was sensational.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—Boston and St. Louis divided a double-header today, the visitors winning the first game 4 to 3, and the home team capturing the second by the same score.

Seven pitchers were used in jockeying for the first game. Haines was hit hard in the second but excellent fielding kept the Boston score down. Both clubs played errorless ball.

GIANTS SPLIT TWIN BILL WITH PIRATES

Lose First Game by 3 to 1, but Take Second, 4 to 0, on Great Twirling by Nehf.

While it is still mathematically possible, the statisticians declare, for the Giants to step on the Reds, climb over the Dodgers and clutch the National League pennant, the hopes of Manhattan fans received a severe jolt on the plains of Harlem yesterday afternoon when the Pittsburgh Pirates held the McGraw tribe to an even break in a double header. When the Giants blew the first game by a score of 3 to 1 all but a few of the most optimistic Giant supporters laid their hopes to rest beside their straw kellys and prepared to stand the strain of commuting to Brooklyn for their world's series baseball this Fall. Even the balm of a subsequent victory for the Giants in the second game, scored at 4 to 0, failed to have a really soothing effect.

About 8,000 of the faithful who bet even money with the weather man against rain yesterday groaned one of those deep bass groans when the opener went to Pittsburgh. The Pirates deserved to win. George Gibson sent Hamilton against the Giants and the pitcher was in a stingy mood. He held the Giants to three hits, no two of which were made in the same inning.

In the second encounter Artie Nehf did his best to try to make up for the shortcomings of his mates in the first grapple. Artie pitched one of the most masterful games he has turned in since donning a Giant uniform. He came within a single and a base on balls of pitching a perfect game. He held the Pirates to a lone hit, a trickling single by Southworth in the first inning. Southworth was thrown out stealing and had Nehf not issued a pass to Bigbee in the fourth inning, only twenty-seven men would have faced the southpaw. Not a single Pirate got as far as second base during the jamboree.

Nehf's Control Remarkable.

Nehf had a curve that made seven Buccaneers fan the air, three of the seven striking out in one inning, the second. He was able to work the corners or groove the ball as occasion demanded, and it was seldom during the nine innings that he was in the hole on any batter.

In the sixth inning a sparkling play by Davey Bancroft shut off what threatened to be a single by Bigbee. The Pirate outfielder cracked one of Nehf's fast ones flush on the seams and drove it over second base. Banny, running at top speed, speared it with his gloved hand and made a perfect throw to first just in time to nip the runner. There were some who thought Bigbee had beaten the throw, including Bigbee himself, but Umpire Hank O'Day insisted the runner was out.

Nehf himself shut off a sure hit in the first inning when he clutched Cutshaw's liner as a matter of self-preservation. The ball was cracked at the pitcher's head with terrific force. Nehf threw up his hands and the ball stuck in them.

Two home runs helped the Giants' cause materially during the closing half of the twin bill. King cracked one into the lower right field grand stand in the second inning for the Giants' second run of the game, and Ross Young followed suit with an identical smash in the eighth round for their fourth run.

The locals made their first run in the first inning. Ponder got off to a poor start by walking Burns. Bancroft flied to Southworth and Young lifted to Nicholson before Burns stole second. Then Frisch strolled and Kelly made good in the pinch by driving the ball to left for a single, scoring Burns.

Get Another in Seventh.

New York's third run came in the seventh. Kelly bumped a two-bagger to left. Southworth made a great running catch of King's low liner to right, but could not recover in time to prevent Kelly from advancing to third. Doyle popped to McKechnie, but Smith scored Kelly with a single over short.

It was quite a pitchers' battle between Barnes and Hamilton in the first game until the sixth inning, when the Pirates parleyed three hits into two runs. Bigbee singled to right. Barnes threw out Cutshaw. Southworth singled to right and Bigbee scored from second. Southworth took second on the throw-in. After Nicholson flied to Young, Whitted singled to centre and Southworth scored.

The Giants got one in the seventh. Frisch walked. Kelly singled and Frisch romped to third. As King fanned, Frisch and Kelly worked the double steal, Frisch scoring.

The Pirates collected their third and final run in the ninth inning. Griffin had batted for Barnes in the previous inning and Douglas went in to pitch. Southworth made his third hit of the game, a single to centre. Nicholson followed suit, Southworth taking third. Whitted bounced a hit off Douglas's glove and Southworth scored.

I. S. C. ANNOUNCES POLICY.

Aims to Co-operate with Boxing Commission for Clean Sport.

A comprehensive plan of action by the International Sporting Club under the Walker law governing boxing in this State was issued last night by Tex O'Rourke, I. S. C. matchmaker.

The policy outlined in Matchmaker O'Rourke's statement follows:

To co-operate with and comply to all rulings of the commission, not only in New York, but also to all constituted boxing authorities in other States.

Honesty in all destails of contests, weights, &c.

Honesty with the press and public in all announcements.

Scaling of prices to permit purses sufficient to secure the best bouts, to warrant giving members their seats and to hold shows without further profits to the club.

Consideration of the general public at all times.

BOXING AT GARDEN WILL OPEN TONIGHT

To be Three Bouts Under Walker Law—Dempsey and Carpentier to Attend.

Madison Square Garden, the scene of many historic ring bouts, will once again resound with the thud of padded fists and the guttural plaudits of boxing followers this evening. The historic old amphitheatre, under the name of the Madison Square Garden Sporting Club, Inc., will give New Yorkers their first professional bouts under the Walker law. These will be the first legalized boxing contests since the repeal of the Frawley law several years ago, and the first official decision bouts since the old Horton law era, twenty years back. In keeping with the importance of the occasion, therefore, Promoter Tex Rickard has arranged what promises an interesting series of bouts.

A card including a fifteen-round bout, two ten-round bouts and a six-round contest, all to decisions, will be conducted. Two of the country's foremost lightweight championship contenders will mingle in the stellar attraction. Joe Welling, Chicago contender, and Johnny Dundee, the bounding, irrepressible Italian rival of Benny Leonard, will seek to eliminate each other from further consideration. The boxers have agreed to weigh in at 135 pounds at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the legitimate lightweight poundage. Joe Benjamin, California's leading lightweight, and Pete Hartley, the "Durable Dane," will clash in one of the ten-round bouts. In the other Andy Chaney, a formidable contender for Johnny Kilbane's featherweight crown, will exchange thumps with Tommy Noble, English featherweight. The six-round bout will bring together Bobby Hanson of Brooklyn and Sammy Nable, former amateur boxer. The first contest is scheduled for 8:30.

Many familiar fans will participate in boxing's revival. Bill Brown, veteran referee, will officiate in the star bout. Lou White, son of the late Charley White, will referee the preliminaries. Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Georges Carpentier, European rival for the title, will be introduced from the ring, and will personally greet each other for the first time. Joe Humphries, whose oratorical renditions have been part and parcel of important boxing attractions for years, will announce the combatants. Dr. George Muth, who has held watches on many of the ring's notable bouts, will be timekeeper. Charles Thorley and William Muldoon have been selected to judge the bouts. In the event of a disagreement between the judges Referee Brown will render a verdict.

Everything is reported in readiness for the significant occasion. The boxers are reported in good condition, licenses have been obtained from the License Committee by all concerned with the show and the Garden has been altered to accommodate a typical Garden boxing attendance. The details of policing and providing ushers have also been arranged. A capacity crowd is expected, judged by the requests for advance reservations.

ORIOLES NEED ONE GAME.

Defeat Skeeters 7 to 6, and All but Clinch Pennant.

Baltimore made a clean sweep of the series with Jersey City by scoring the third victory over the Skeeters yesterday afternoon by a score of 7 to 6. It was the twenty-second consecutive victory for the Birds and placed them within one game of the International pennant. The league record is twenty-five consecutive victories made by Jersey City in 1903.

Baltimore has three games remaining unplayed with Reading which begin tomorrow and a victory in one contest in the home of the Miners will clinch the flag. Should the Orioles come through with the championship they will immediately prepare for a post-season series with the St. Paul Club, champions of the American Association, which has been arranged to begin the same day as the world's series.

By getting off to an excellent start in their farewell attack Dunn's experts succeeded in harvesting just the required material to shut off the Skeeters in their aggressive windup.

Jack Bentley, the Birds' hard hitting first baseman, laid the foundation for the Orioles' success with a home run drive in the opening frame, following the singles by Lowry and Holden. Another cluster of hits in the third added four more counts.

BOXING LAUNCHED BY BOARD'S ACTION

Commission Formally Installs Sport and Issues Licenses to Fighters and Clubs.

The last obstructions, legal, technical and otherwise, in the way of a rapid resumption of legalized professional boxing in this State were removed yesterday, and the sport was once more formally installed as a reality. At a meeting of the Boxing Commission and the License Committee, at 291 Broadway, the respective Chairmen, Joseph Johnson and Laurence Maguire, paved the way for the first boxing matches to a decision in this State since the repeal of the old Horton law twenty years ago. A crowd of perhaps 200 followers, exponents, promoters and officials of the sport jammed into the headquarters of the boxing supervisors to participate in the ceremony which formally restored the sport.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, and his manager, Jack Kearns, were there. So, too, were Senator James J. Walker, father of the present law, and Assemblyman Marty McCue, another strong advocate of the ring game. A host of fighters, managers and admirers crowded about the reception room and flowed out into the office corridor, while Messrs. Johnson and Maguire closed the details which gave boxing an auspicious start. Dempsey gained the distinction of receiving the first boxing license. Club licenses were issued to the Madison Square Garden Sporting Club, Queensberry A. C. of Buffalo, and the Velodrome A. C. of Buffalo, and a number of licenses for fighters, managers, referees, trainers, seconds, judges, timers and physicians were also distributed.

Address by Chairman Johnson.

Following the meeting at which the licenses were issued, Chairman Johnson of the Boxing Commission delivered an address in which he reiterated the warnings which had been voiced frequently since Governor Smith signed the Walker bill, and made a plea for cooperation from all concerned, boxers, managers, promoters and critics, in the common effort to maintain the sport on the high plane made possible by the provisions of the Walker law. He warned exploiters of the sport that the law was efficient, providing a power of subpoena similar to that of the Supreme Court, and promised that the law would be rigidly enforced.

"Legalized boxing failed in this State in the past because of greed," said Chairman Johnson. "Short-sighted promoters and managers and boxers pulled down their pugilistic temple. Some of them have lain now for several years quite broken in their own wreckage. To them we say that this present boxing law has teeth that are long, sharp and strong, and we shall try to see that they do not ruin boxing again.

"We do not say there shall be no money rewards. We hope that they will not be excessive. We hope that the average man may be able to pay his way into these contests. We hope that the life of the sport may be lengthened by reasonableness and foresight, which will sacrifice avarice to permanence and popularity. We trust it will not be necessary to use the full and discretionary power of this law upon the promoter of the 'clean-up-and-get-away variety.'"

In the Matter of Tickets.

"We of the Boxing Commission, who administer the law after Commissioner McGuire and his associates have issued licenses, wish to call particular attention to an abuse that has driven many patrons of boxing from contests. I refer to the failure to give ticketholders the seats they have paid for. This is not only not a necessary evil, but one which the law specifically condemns and prohibits. Promoters cannot sell a number of tickets in excess of the number of seats. A man is personally conducted to his seat at the opera with certainty and eclat, and he frequently pays less to hear Caruso than he does to see a good boxing exhibition. The promoter who does not know enough to find the right seat for the man from whom he has taken money will be shown the nearest exit."

Chairman McGuire of the License Committee delivered an address in which he added his warnings to those of Commissioner Johnson, and discussed the plans which are entertained for the conduct of the sport. Harry Lyons of the New York Athletic Club has been selected Secretary of the License Committee. The Boxing Commission has not yet selected its Secretary.

WOMEN'S NET TITLE REMAINS IN EAST

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Three players from New York and one from Boston are left to contest final honors in the women's national lawn tennis championships as the result of today's pay in the singles tournament on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club at St. Martin's. In the semi-finals tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory and Miss Helen Pollak of New York will meet in the upper half of the draw, and Miss Marion Zinderstein of Boston will play her doubles partner, Miss Eleanor Goss, of the West Side Tennis Cub, in the lower half.

Today's play assures the retention of the championship in the East, inasmuch as Miss Eleanor Tennant, the last remaining Westerner in the tournament, was eliminated by Mrs. Mallory in the most brilliant match of the day, which went the limit of three sets before a decision was reached in the former champion's favor at 6—2, 2—6, 6—3. Today's other singles matches all went in straight sets, Miss Pollak defeating Miss Edith Sigourney of Longwood, 8—6, 6—3, while Miss Goss and Miss Zinderstein both won with scores of 6—4, 6—2, advancing at the expense, respectively, of Mrs. Nathaniel W. Niles and Miss Leslie Bancroft, both of Longwood.

The semi-finals in the doubles were also reached today, and of the four remaining teams the two generally regarded as strongest will meet tomorrow morning. This match should produce a spectacular battle between Mrs. George W. Wightman, present singles champion, and Mrs. Mallory, former champion, on the one side, and the present doubles champions, Miss Zinderstein and Miss Goss on the other. In the semi-finals of the doubles, the Californians, Miss Helen Baker and Miss Eleanor Tennant are generally favored to gain the verdict over Miss Molly Thayer and Miss Ann B. Townsend, of Philadelphia, although the latter, through well developed team work as well as individual skill, are certain to offer sturdy opposition.

The semi-finals in juior singles left Miss Louise Dixon and Miss Helen Sewell, both of Philadelphia, to contest the national crown tomorrow, while, in the junior doubles, one pair, Miss Sewell and Virginia Carpenter, also entered the final round.

Mrs. Mallory Shows Skill.

Hard and steady driving, admirable court craft and the self-confidence that comes of long experience in rising to the occasion when emergencies are greatest gave Mrs. Mallory a well-earned victory over Miss Tennant in the finest singles match the tournament has thus far produced. Both played brilliantly, Miss Tennant doing her share of hard hitting off the ground and overhead, though her play at the net was not sufficiently severe to prevent Mrs. Mallory from passing her many times. How clearly Mrs. Mallory's victory was earned is shown in the stroke analysis. The former champion made sixteen more errors than the Californian, but her earned points totaled 38, to 18 for the Coast star. There were but two points of difference in the total point scores of the two, but Mrs. Mallory's forcing shots were what turned the tide of battle in her favor.

Each broke through service at the start of the match, and Mrs. Mallory then ran the game to 3—2 in her favor. Miss Tennant was finishing off the points occasionally at the net, but more often Mrs. Mallory was forcing her back. She did this by a beautifully placed lob on one occasion, and on others by some fine cross-court passing shots. Mrs. Mallory broke through service in the sixth game, placing her drives with unerring accuracy, and then followed by capturing her own delivery for a 5—2 score. In the next game she again broke through and won the set point on a wonderful cross-court drive that was a yard beyond Miss Tennant's reach.

Miss Tennant Rallies.

Miss Tennant became more aggressive in the second set. She won on Mrs. Mallory's service in the third game by rushing to the barrier and passing Mrs. Mallory by sharply angled volleys and smashes, and again broke through in the seventh game after trailing at 0—40. Errors by Mrs. Mallory brought the score in this game to deuce, and Miss Tennant clinched it on a chop that landed in Mrs. Mallory's court and bounded back in her own. This was the turning point in the set and Mrs. Mallory made little effort for the next game, Miss Tennant taking the set 6—2, and completely reversing the score of the first set.

A remarkable get by Miss Tennant on a shot to her back hand was the memorable feature of the opening game of the third set, but Mrs. Mallory won the game by passing the Californian at the net. The Norse girl then broke through Miss Tennant's service by clean placements. The variety of Mrs. Mallory's game showed to particular advantage here. Whatever Miss Tennant undertook, her rival went one better. She mixed up passing shots, drives to the corners, shots to Miss Tennant's feet, as the latter went to the net, and lobs, as the occasion seemed to demand. She led at 3—0 and 4—1 before Miss Tennant was able to rally her resources for her last bid for the match.

With Mrs. Mallory serving, Miss Tennant did some of her keenest playing of the week here, forcing Mrs. Mallory into errors and playing with force and finality overhead. She won this game and then in the next, the critical one of the match, the California girl worked up a lead of 40—0 and the game that would have made the score 4—3 and given her a fighting chance seemed in her grasp. But she drove out and Mrs. Mallory brought the score to deuce on two earned points. The next point was a net corder for Mrs. Mallory and she won the game when Miss Tennant hit into the net. Mrs. Mallory then ran out the set at 6—3, passing Miss Tennant in forecourt for the final point.

Miss Zinderstein Is Victor.

Miss Bancroft played good tennis in her match with Miss Zindenstein, but the latter always had something in reserve. Miss Zinderstein gets astonishing pace on her shots with seemingly little effort. Many players of the opposite sex might well envy her her excellent service no less than the speed of her ground strokes and her admirable volleying. Hers is a wonderfully well-rounded game and it is directed by a keen intelligence. One wonders where so diminutive a girl packs the power she applies to her fine assortment of shots and can find the answer only in the perfection of her tennis form.

Miss Goss's victory over Mrs. Niles was as impressive as that of Miss Zinderstein over Miss Bancroft and the meeting of the two winners tomorrow should produce some of the high lights of the week. In the remaining singles match of today Miss Sigourney fought gamely against Miss Pollak, but the latter's drives were better controlled. The first set was bitterly fought and Miss Sigourney, playing her best tennis of several days, forced the score to 8—6 before yielding. The effort sapped much of her energy and she could not stand the pace in the second set, which Miss Pollak won at 6—3.

In the doubles the showing of Miss Zinderstein and Miss Goss was highly impressive in their victory over Mrs. B. F. Briggs and Miss Phyllis Walsh. The champions doubled their opponents' earned points and were never in danger, though opposed to a team of marked ability.

All the doubles matches of the afternoon were won by decisive margins. Mrs. Wightman and Mrs. Mallory again displayed effective team work and variety of forcing tactics against Mrs. Leachman and Mrs. Leroy, to whom they conceded but three games in the two sets, winning by the same score which gave Miss Zinderstein and Miss Goss their semi-final bracket. Miss Baker's chops and slices and Miss Tennant's severe hitting overhead and clever volleying make the Californians a formidable combination, as Mrs. E. V. Lynch and Mrs. Rawson Wood, who lost to them, 6—2, 6—2, can testify. In the remaining doubles match, the Philadelphians, Miss Thayer and Miss Townsend, won with something to spare over Mrs. Weiner and Mrs. Wolff, by scores of 6—2, 6—4.

Coal Heaving Has Kept Navy Gridiron Men Fit

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 16.—Heavin coal into the furnaces of the battleship South Carolina has been the unique means by which the midshipmen of the football squad have kept in condition this Summer. They worked at it steadily during the three months of the cruise to Hawaiian and other Pacific points, according to Commander George H. Laird, who had charge of them during the period, and were in need of no other kind of training. The football men were kept together on the South Carolina, but had no opportunities for shore practice, except at Honolulu where the party was ashore for three afternoons and had some kicking and worked at formations.

JACKSON WINS ON POINTS.

Outpoints Gene Delmont in Twelve-Round Bout at Jersey City.

Before a crowd which comfortably filled the open-air arena, Willie Jackson, Bronx lightweight, outpointed Gene Delmont of Memphis, Tenn., last night in their twelve-round bout at the Armory A. A. of Jersey City. The Bronx boxer, with marked advantages in height and reach, together with a little the best of the weight, easily accumulated enough points to gain an unquestionable popular verdict. The match was a return affair, following a meeting of the boxers three weeks ago. As was the case last night, Jackson carried off the popular award in their last engagement.

In practically every particular last night's contest was a repetition of the previous meeting between the two boxers. In only one detail was it dissimilar. The work of the boxers, on the whole, was not quite as spectacular as that produced in the bout three weeks ago. True, Jackson clearly outboxed, outslugged and otherwise demonstrated marked superiority over his Southern rival, but the work of the Bronx lad was not as sensational or as consistently carried through as were his efforts in the previous meeting with Delmont. This can be said without detracting an iota from the bout, which attracted continued applause from the large crowd of spectators.

Jackson carried off ten of the twelve rounds beyond question. Delmont did not earn a single round. Because of his remarkable ability to assimilate Jackson's blows and his quick returns to the attack despite the buffeting to which he was subjected, the Southerner could be said to have held Jackson even in both the fifth and sixth rounds. In these two sessions Delmont was particularly effective with his offensive and landed resounding blows to Jackson's face and stomach alternately. One of Delmont's rights in the fifth started a stream of blood from Jackson's mouth and served to infuriate the Bronx lad. A sharp exchange of blows followed in which Jackson showed to advantage, but he lessened his speed subsequently and Delmont recovered to gain an even break in the round. Jackson also held himself in check in the sixth round, contenting himself with providing against a damaging blow from Delmont by fighting in spurts, which kept the Bronxite even in the distribution of points for the round.

In every session, however, Jackson went after his rival furiously and carried the fighting at a stiff pace. With characteristic aggressiveness Jackson plied his rival with stinging blows to the face and stomach as openings presented themselves and there was plenty of power behind the blows, notwithstanding Delmont gamely took the battering and sought, though ineffectually, to return the attack.

Olympic Team Members Take Events at Stockholm.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 16.—The American olympic athletes who are visiting Sweden met with success in the greater number of events in an athletic carnival held here today.

W. S. Smith, Chicago A. A., won the 110-meter hurdles in 15 4-10 seconds. J. M. Watt, Ithaca, N. Y., was second. J. V. Scholz, University of Missouri, was easily winner in the 100-meter dash. His time was 10 6-10 seconds.

COLUMBIA PLAYER OUT FOR SEASON

Jerome Reilly, line candidate at Columbia, was taken to his home yesterday suffering with a fractured ankle as a result of an accident in Tuesday's football practice on South Field. It was thought at first that the ankle had merely been severely sprained, but an examination yesterday by surgeons disclosed three small bones broken. The accident occurred during a drill in falling on the ball, Reilly and another player tumbing over the sphere at the same time. The other man fell heavily on Reilly's anke. He will probably be out for the remainder of the season.

Charlie Applebaum, 'varsity fullback, who is out with a wrenched knee, and Louis Nohl, All-Southwestern end in 1916, who had his shoulder dislocated in Wednesday's workout, are the other two members of the Blue and White casualty list. Neither is seriously hurt. Applebaum will return at Monday's practice and Nohl will be out for a week or longer.

The first signal practice of the season was ordered by Coach Buck O'Neill yesterday, three elevens going through the drill. O'Neill himself handled the first team, with Tom Thorp and Alex Telfer taking charge of the other two. The elevens were selected at random and no attempt was made by O'Neill to select what might be called the 'Varsity team. The drill at signals lasted for fifteen minutes and supplemented the instruction begun on Wednesday evening in the indoor practice at the Horace Mann gymnasium. No indoor workout was held last night, O'Neill deciding to give the squad a rest after the afternoon's strenuous activity. The players will also receive a vacation tomorrow.

The two most notable additions to the 'Varsity list yesterday were Jack Thornton, half back, and Eccles, quarter back in 1919 after Quigley and Shaw had been retired to the sidelines with injuries. Thornton bore the brunt of the punting last year until he was put out for the rest of the season with a broken leg, and he is the most promising candidate for the kicking post this year. He reported yesterday weighing in the neighborhood of 180 pounds, considerably over his last year's weight, and he was tanned after the Summer vacation. He seemed in tip-top condition and lost no time in jumping into the thick of the fray. Eccles also unlimbered freely.

The half backs continued yesterday at their open field running, the ends lining up in broken formation to stop them. This drill is strenuous enough to bring out the running ability of the host of candidates for the backfield, and it also affords the ends better tackling practice than they would get with the dummy. Bunk Harris, who was at Syracuse last year but did not play football, looms up as one of the best of the backfield men. He will be a candidate for quarter back, a position that has been left vacant by the losses from last season. The form shown by the backfield men has been the most impressive thing about the first week's practice. They are fast, hard runners and some of the new men have shown themselves adept at picking holes in a broken field.

O'Neill continued yesterday his development of the kickers, a department in which Columbia was weakest last year. With the return of Thornton to the fold, the punters will have plenty of opposition, for the 'Varsity back is capable of great distance in his kicks. Anderson, a new candidate, has been doing most of the punting this week and he is fast improving under O'Neill's tutelage.

CROZIER TWICE VICTOR.

The innovation of open-air amateur boxing bouts was introduced successfully last night by the Crescent A. C. of Brooklyn. The New Moon organization conducted a one-night tournament at its Bay Ridge grounds, transforming the tennis court for the occasion into a boxing arena, and a crowd of 1,500, one of the largest that has ever attended a Crescent amateur tournament, watched the sport.

Ed Crozier, Bronxdale A. C. lightweight, was the most spectacular performer. Competing in the 135-pound division, Crozier carried off the premier award after disposing of two rivals. In his first bout he engaged H. McCleary of the Todd Shipyards A. A. and in less than two full rounds Crozier displayed such unmistakable supremacy over his rival that Referee Eddie Forbes stopped the contest. McCleary was sent to the floor of the ring in the second round just before the referee's intervention. In the final Crozier disposed of W. Marolex, unattached, in even more decisive fashion. One round was all required by the Bronxdale boxer to pound his rival into submission to the complete satisfaction of Referee Forbes, who again employed his discretionary powers.

A surprise was produced in the 150-pound division, and, on top of the shock, one of those peculiarities for which the amateur ring is noted. The surprise came in the defeat of Nick Florio, veteran Paulist A. C. boxer, by George Murphy of the St. Bartholomew's Club. Florio crumpled from a right to the jaw about five seconds before the end of the first round, and Referee Forbes called a halt when it was apparent the Winged P boxer was in no condition to continue after regaining his feet.

This victory placed Murphy in the final against A. Grossfield, Glencoe A. C., who had gained a three-round judges' decision over Otto Favenza, Pastime A. C. The boxers had progressed through about half of the first round when Grossfield sent Murphy crashing to the floor of the ring with a right to the jaw. Murphy regained his feet quickly, however, but before the milling could be resumed Grossfield complained to the referee that in delivering the blow which floored his rival he had injured his foot to such an extent that he would be unable to continue. Referee Forbes, under the circumstances, awarded the bout and the class prize to Murphy.

The tournament was made the occasion for the presentation of his professional boxing referee license to Eddie Forbes, who is a veteran of the ring sport The presentation was made by Edward W. Ditmars of the Crescent Club, a member of the Boxing Commission. Following the presentation Laurence Maguire, License Committee Chairman, steppd into the ring and eulogized the ability of Forbes as a ring arbiter an ddeclared it gave him great pleasure to issue a license to the veteran Brooklyn referee. The summaries:

112-Pound Class—W. F. Murphy, East Side House, defeated H. Penner, Sinclair Club, three rounds, judges' decision; Samuel Fritz, Brooklyn A. A., defeated F. McDermott, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision.

116-Pound Class—W. Singer, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., defeated M. Wechsler, Bronxdale A. C., three rounds, judges' decision; George Daly, Grace Club, defeated L. Goldberg, Pastime A. C., three rounds, referee's decision; judges disagreed.

135-Pound Class—Edward Crozier, Bronxdale A. C., defeated H. McCleary, Todd Shipyards A. A., two rounds, referee's decision; W. Marolex, unattached, defeated T. Mattox, Todd Shipyards A. A., three rounds, judges' decision.

The Pittsburgh Baseball Club of the National League yesterday announced the purchase of Pitcher Moses Yellowhorse of the Little Rock Club of the Southern Association. Yellowhorse is a full-blooded Pawnee Indian. He is only nineteen years old and was one of the leading factors in winning the pennant for Little Rock this season, having won 21 games and lost 7.

TIGERS HAVE DRILL IN LINE PLUNGING

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 16.—Seventy candidates turned out for the second day of football practice at Princeton this afternoon. Coach Roper did not appear on the field, but wired that he would be in town late tonight and instructed Captain Mike Callahan to call a meeting of the squad and coaches for tomorrow morning.

Fitzpatrick again divided his charges into four groups, backs, ends, centres, and linemen, and put them under the care of his assistants. After a long drill on fundamentals, in which forward passing received the greatest attention, the backs were divided up into groups of four, each set containing a quarter back, two halves and a full back. These groups were put through line plunging formations of the simplest type for about an hour. From the stands, which were filled with several hundred students watching the practice, the combination consisting of Lourie, Scheerer, Wittmer, and Murrey appeared to be the smoothest. No signals were used and the quarter backs started each play by taking the ball from the ground.

Jack Winn, end coach, gave the Tiger wing aspirants a hard afternoon's work chasing forward passes down the field against opposing interference, while the linemen and centres were spending their usual heated period charging against the bucking machine.

Captain Hack McGraw of the 1919 team was on the gridiron at University Field today to begin his work as one of the line coaches. The squad has not yet begun to tackle the dummy, although this work will probably begin tomorrow and no roughing has been allowed in the interference or the charging. Fitzpatrick wishes to have his men in first class physical shape before beginning this type of training to avoid injuries, and he stated this afternoon that there would be no scrimmage for another week at least.

Two promising new candidates appeared today in Legendre and Froemke. Legendre, who starred on the basket ball team last Winter, was formerly captain of the Tulane eleven and was considered one of the best ends south of the Mason-Dixon line three years ago. He was at the university last Fall, but could not play owing to the transfer rule. Froemke is also a transfer who has just become eligible. He was one of the stellar wing men in the Western conference two years ago.

BOB LAY GOES IN AT HALF.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16.—Yale's second day's session of signal practice today lasted more than two hours. The only change from yesterday's line-up was the use of Bob Lay at right half back instead of Froggy French.

Eddie Eagan, the crack amateur pugilist, had a trial on the second team at left end, replacing Calhoun, and displayed speed and great tackling power. Cruikshank also replaced Trippe at tackle on the second team.

The scrub team was organized with Jack Cutler, reserve quarter back last year, as captain. Head Coach Jones said tonight that he would change his policy and order the first scrimmage of the season against the scrubs tomorrow.

Clarence Alcott, who was end rush when Jones was quarter back, joined the coaches. The only notable addition to the squad was Trowbridge, freshman tackle last year.

The line-up of the first eleven was as follows: Ends, Munger and Dilworth; tackles, Dicken and Walker; guards, Herr and Acosta; centre, Callahan; quarter back, Kempton; half backs, Lay and Aldrich; full back, Webb.

HARRIS DROP-KICKS WELL.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Sept. 16.—It was announced today by Coach Huntington of Colgate that either Saturday or next Monday the football squad would be broken up into a tentative 'Varsity and second, third and fourth teams.

The feature of the afternoon's practice was the kicking of left end Harris of last year's eleven. Harris was given very little opportunity last year to show his ability along this line, but the coaches expect to use him this year if he can show the same punting talent as in 1918. From a mid-field position Harris demonstrated an unerring and marvelous accuracy in dropping the ball between the posts.

A great deal of the practice for the backfield men was spent with the tackling dummy, while the linemen were kept at the plunging halter until the scrub managers dropped from exhaustion. After their protracted period with the tackling dummy the backfield men were given the ball and told to dodge the ends. A drill in catching and running with the ball closed the day's work for the entire squad.

CARPENTIER IN TRAINING.

Georges Carpentier yesterday began active training for his fifteen-round decision bout with Battling Levinsky, scheduled to be held at Ebbets Field next month. Training quarters have been fitted up for the French champion at Summit, N. J., and he will alternate in his work between this camp and Freddy Walsh's physical culture farm.

Carpentier showed speed in his sparring with Marcel Thomas and Jack Blumfield. After these bouts Joe Jeanette took Carpentier on for a short session, but their bout was more in the nature of advanced boxing, Carpentier endeavoring to find methods of penetrating Jeanette's defense. Carpentier plans to train every day until his bout with Levinsky.

Battling Levinsky returned to his training at Adam Ryan's in Philadelphia yesterday. He will spend the mornings doing road work in Fairmount Park and the afternoons boxing and doing gymnasium work at Ryan's.

KENAN TO COACH WESLEYAN

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Sept. 16.—Dr. Edgar Fauver, director of athletics at Wesleyan, has issued a call for football candidates to report next Monday, Sept. 20. Dan Kenan of El Paso, Texas, a former Wesleyan full back, who helped coach the team before the war, will be the head coach. Kenan will arrive in Middletown today or tomorrow and will arrange to open a training table at the college dining hall at the Foss House.

HALSELL MAKES LOW SCORE FOR SENIORS

Play for the second half of the immense field entered in the annual Seniors' Golf Tournament began yesterday over the Apawamis links at Rye. Hugh Halsell of Dallas turned in the low score, an 80. This is the lowest score ever made for one round in a seniors' tournament, and, unless it is bettered in the final round today, it will give him the championship. Charles D. Cooke of Arcola led the first half of the field, which completed its play on Wednesday, with a low gross of 171 for two rounds.

Halsell admits to 57 years, and this year is his first as a competitor in the Seniors' Golf Association. Even though he was defeated last week in the international matches with the Canadians at Ottawa, the committee rated him at scratch.

One hole alone kept the Texan from breaking 80. This was the tremendously long ninth, a par 5 hole, which he did in 7 as the result of slamming his third into rough grass. He was out in 40 and home in the same figures.

The card compared to the Apawamis par follows:

Out—
Par	4 4 4 4 3 4 4 3 5—35
Halsell	5 4 4 4 3 4 5 4 7—40
In—
Par	4 4 3 4 5 4 4 5 4—37	—72
Halsell	3 4 4 4 6 5 4 5 5—40	—80

Boyce Has Low Net.

John H. Boyce of Fox Hills, a Class C player, also was a centre of attraction. He shot a 90. With his handicap of 18 he made the low net score for the day. W. E. Truesdell of Garden City, a former seniors' champion, took 91 strokes to complete the round. On the whole, however, the scores made yesterday were better than those turned in on the first two days.

George Wright of Wollaston, famous old shortstop of the Cincinnati Reds and now head of the Wright & Ditson concern, shot a 94-15-79; Frederick Snare, originator of the Havana Golf Club, had 88-0-88; T. B. Boyd, the St. Louis banker, 100-14-86; Robert H. Treman, prominent Cornell alumnus, 97-15-82; Colonel J. Ernest Smith, Wilmington, 94-6-88; Ralph Peters of Garden City, president of the Long Island Railroad, 108-18-90.

Announcement was made yesterday of the result of the annual election of officers. Frank Presbrey of Apawamis was re-elected President. The Vice Presidents are Robert W. Lesley of Philadelphia, donor of the famous Lesley Cup, and Judge W. O. Henderson of Columbus, Ohio. Joseph A. Flynn of Greenwich was re-elected Treasurer, and W. H. Hale will again handle the secretarial duties. Dwight L. Elmendorf of Arcola was named Chairman of the Tournament Committee.

The prize winners of the first half of the field which played Tuesday and Wednesday were also announced as follows:

Trainers Seek Adoption of Kentucky Claiming Rules

So much pressure is being brought to bear by trainers and owners for a change in the rules for selling and claiming races that it appears rules adopted by the Kentucky Jockey Club will soon be applied to all courses in the country. At a meeting of local trainers a few days ago a petition was signed seeking the adoption of the Kentucky rules, and since then trainers in Maryland have made a similar request. The rules now in force are blamed for the small fields in many events.

NAHMA SHOWS WAY TO BOSTON YACHT

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 16.—Addison G. Hanan's Nahma, the defending yacht of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, won the first race for the Manhasset Bay challenge cup off here today. Nahma defeated Wasaka II., the property of J. B. Martin of the Boston Yacht Club, the challenger, by four minutes and six seconds over a course of 15 nautical miles.

Save that the sky was overcast and rain fell during the second round, the weather conditions were ideal. The wind was south-southwest and fresh throughout, kicking up tiny whitecaps all over Long Island Sound. It was just the kind of breeze to bring out the best sailing qualities of the yachts.

At the start today Skipper Bowdoin B. Crowninshield of the challenger tried the same trick which he worked so successfully on Wednesday and he almost succeeded. The yachts came down to the line on the starboard tack, Wasaka leading, with Nahma to weather. As they reached the line Wasaka luffed. Nahma was forced outside the mark and for a second it looked as though the Long Island Sound skipper had again been outjockeyed. Crowninshield had misjudged his time, however, and as he ran along the line Wasaka took the bit in her teeth and shot across the line four seconds too soon. Being recalled, Wasaka did not come back far enough. She finally had to go around the committee boat and start again. It cost her exactly 1 minute and 49 seconds, more than enough to lose any close yacht race.

Nahma started on the gun, well-berthed to weather, an advantage she never lost. With the exception of the first run before the wind Nahma gained on every leg. At the weather mark at the end of the first leg the defender was leading by 2 minutes and 23 seconds. She had gained thirty-four seconds in the first heat to windward.

On the first run home Wasaka picked up eight seconds. She was only 2 minutes and 15 seconds astern as the yachts started their second heat to the Long Island shore. On that heat, regardless of the fact that rain fell, somewhat killing the wind, Nahma gained another half minute. She then was ahead 2 minutes and 45 seconds. On the second run home she increased her lead by 1 minute and 21 seconds.

A falling wind somewhat was responsible for the difference in time on the last leg. After the race it was found that Nahma had parted her fore stay early in the race.

The summary:

Atlanta Golfer Wins Testing Round and Then Defeats White at Match Play.

After successfully combating the "medal play stymie" in the qualifying round of the invitation tournament at the Morris County Golf Club yesterday, contestants from all sections of the country—and for that matter from Great Britain as well—paired for the first match round after luncheon, with the result that the semi-final tilt is on for today. Conditions called for players to qualify in fields of eight in order that the tournament should draw to a close today to make room for the exhibition match at Morris County tomorrow with Vardon and Ray opposed to "Chick" Evans and Bobby Jones.

Jones, incidentally, had no fault to find with himself last night, for, besides leading the field in the testing round with a fine score of 74, one under par, the Atlanta lad disposed of Gardiner White of Nassau after a hard match that ended on the home green.

It was White's own fault that he did not win this match, for going to the fifteenth tee he stood 2 up with four holes to play. An extra putt there placed him only 1 up, and he lost the sixteenth after a wild drive to the woods. The seventeenth was halved, so that the pair stood all even standing on the home tee. Both were on the green in two shots, and White had a good chance for at least a half, but, instead, he missed his putt and lost the hole and the match.

Jones plays this course as if it were built for him. In a practice round on Wednesday he had a 71, four under par, and his 74 yesterday was five strokes better than his nearest rival, Cyril Tolley, the British champion, who had a 79.

Out	4 5 2 4 4 4 3 5 3—34
In	5 5 6 4 5 4 3 4 4—40	—74

Cyril Tolley, the British champion, and Roger Wethered, the Oxford captain, were the only Englishmen in sight in the tournament yesterday, Lord Charles Hope failing to turn in a card. The luck of the draw brought Tolley and Wethered together, and the former started out by winning the first six holes. After that it was all over but the details, although Tolley won by only 3 and 2.

Reginald Lewis, the Greenwich golfer who carried Evans to the forty-first hole in the national amateur championship at Roslyn last week, qualified with an 81 and proceeded to eliminate C. F. Van Vleck, a clubmate, who also had an 81 in the morning.

There was a twenty-one-hole match in both the first and second eights yesterday, G. C. Greenway of Garden City winning from Paul Moore of the home club after three extra holes, while Percy Pyne of Piping Rock was defeated in the second eight by F. B. Richardson of Morris County.

FIRST EIGHT.
Bobby Jones, Atlanta	34	40	74

MEADOW BROOK FOUR BEATS BRYN MAWR

Qualifies to Meet Cooperstown Team in Final for Open Polo Championship.

SCORE IS 13 GOALS TO 7

The Meadow Brook polo team, helped chiefly by the brilliant playing of the redoubtable Devereux Milburn, qualified for the right to meet Cooperstown tomorrow afternoon in the final match for the open championship by taking the measure of Bryn Mawr, 13 goals to 7, on the Meadow Brook field yesterday. There are few teams that can withstand the driving onslaught of Milburn when the star is at the top of his form, and Bryn Mawr showed yesterday that it can safely be included in this class.

The veteran of many an international battle played as finely-balanced a game yesterday as he has shown this year. If there was any part of the field that was secure from his hard and fast riding, the Bryn Mawr team failed to find it. He was a veritable stone wall on defense, blocking one try after another, and in the scoring line he contributed, in the seventh period, the most brilliant individual performance of the afternoon, driving a lofter about 100 yards at a slight angle straight between the goal posts. It was his second and last goal of the match.

There were few moments during the contest when Bryn Mawr threatened Meadow Brook's supremacy. If Malcolm Stevenson had been at his position, the result might have been different, for what the losers lacked was a man to cope with the dangerous Milburn. The obstacle of a ten-goal man was too much for Bryn Mawr, although Harry East, who took Stevenson's place, shot three of his team's seven goals and would have been even more effective had he been better mounted. The question of mounts, in fact, was Bryn Mawr's greatest handicap, Milburn especially showing to great advantage mainly because his ponies had both speed and courage. When it became a case of speed, Meadow Brook's mounts were easily the superior, and put the winners in a position to shoot most of the spectacular goals of the afternoon.

Match Brilliantly Played.

The match was the most brilliantly played of the entire championship tournament, not excepting even the senior championship last Saturday. Bryn Mawr was stronger than the score would indicate and showed to much greater advantage in the second half, which in all but the eighth period was brimming with hard, fast riding and splendid shooting. The first two periods of the second half were probably the best of the afternoon, East making the lone goal in the fifth for Bryn Mawr and Skiddy Von Stade usurping that honor for Meadow Brook in the sixth. The seventh was also hard-fought, Bryn Mawr's stubborn resistance being finally broken by Milburn's long goal from the side. Thereafter Meadow Brook was never headed.

Bryn Mawr lost principally because it was slow in getting started in the first half, which ended in Meadow Brook's favor, 8 goals to 2. The losers showed lack of team work, missed many easy shots for goals, and in general had difficulty with their mallets, lacking the sureness that marked Meadow Brook's players. Milburn missed only two shots during the match, and on both occasions his pony lifted him away from the ball. Webb, Von Stade and R. E. Strawbridge, Sr., were also fast and sure, Von Stade being well mounted and displaying his usual superlative ability as a rider. Webb's chief contributions were several difficult shots from seemingly impossible angles, Milburn usually being on the assisting end.

Stoddard Scores Three Goals.

L. E. Stoddard was the best of Bryn Mawr's four. He shot three of the seven goals, East accounting also for three and R. E. Strawbridge shooting the other. The younger Strawbridge shone especially through his long driving.

Threatening weather kept the attendance down to a few hundred. Shortly after the match got under way rain fell for a few minutes, but soon stopped and gave way to the sun. The conditions for the match were perfect and the field was in better condition than at any time in the championship tournament, the ponies' footing being more firm than in Saturday's senior match.

Webb started Meadow Brook on its way to victory with a goal in the first period, after more than four minutes of scoreless playing. It was the only goal of the period, but Von Stade kept up the good work in the next, in which he shot two more goals for the white-clad team, making the score 3 to 0. The third of the successful shots followed a series of passes from Strawbridge to Webb to Von Stade, the latter finally shooting the goal.

The third saw some great blocking by Milburn, Bryn Mawr losing several goals through his defensive work. Stoddard, however, finally broke through for Bryn Mawr's first goal, but Webb promptly erased the shot by taking a long pass from Milburn and sending the ball flying between the goal posts. The angle was difficult, but Webb's left-hand shooting came to his aid. A minute later Webb showed that the shot was not an accident by duplicating it, even to the angle. Milburn again got an assist. This goal closed the third period and made the score 5 to 2 in Meadow Brook's favor.

The fourth saw Milburn's first goal, an easy shot that came after the back had driven far and followed it up in front of the posts. Webb also shot a short one and Von Stade then added another, after taking the ball more than half the length of the field in two drives.

In the fifth Bryn Mawr stiffened its play, East shooting the only goal of the period after one minute and twenty-two seconds of play. In the sixth came another goal by Von Stade after the ball had been driven from the side line to directly in front of the goal. Milburn, in the seventh, hit his second goal, which was followed in thirty-nine seconds with a long drive by Von Stade. East brought the period to an end with two short goals after some of the most brilliant playing of the match.

Strawbridge, Jr., added a goal to Bryn Mawr's total at the beginning of the final period, when he made a difficult angle shot. Webb brought the score to 12—6, and the older Strawbridge shot another one. Stoddard made the score 13—7 just before the bell rang for the end of the period.

Man o' War and Paul Jones To Meet at Havre de Grace

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 16.—Samuel D. Riddle of Philadelphia wired from New York this afternoon that his unbeaten three-year-old Man o' War, hero of the Preakness, Withers and other stakes this season, will leave Belmont Park this evening for Havre de Grace to start on Saturday in the $10,000 Potomac Handicap. The Potomac, a race of one mile and a sixteenth, for three-year-olds exclusively, will, unless all the signs fail, develop the most brilliant contest between three-year-olds of the current season. Man o' War is asked to take up the crushing burden of 138 pounds. His prospective opponents are Paul Jones, 114, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Suburban Handicap; Wild Air, King Thrush, Blazes, and possibly Damask. Paul Jones, which has not started since the running of the Suburban Handicap, is in grand condition, and it is generally agreed that Man o' War has set before him for Saturday one of the hardest tasks of the season.

POP GEERS IS HURT WHEN HORSE FALLS

SYRACUSE, Sept. 16.—Edward F. Geers, the veteran light harness driver, suffered painful injuries when thrown from his sulky in the first race of the Grand Circuit card on the State Fair track here this afternoon. The veteran driver drove Wiki Wiki, finishing in second place in the second heat of the 2:18 trot, and just as the horse neared the line it stumbled and fell, throwing Geers heavily to the track. The driver sustained severe sprains of the shoulder and wrist, but hopes to be able to resume his driving at the Columbus meeting opening on Monday.

King Watts, driven by Alonzo McDonald, captured first honors in the Onondaga Cup race for 2:18 trotters, the principal event of the day's card. Wiki Wiki, driven by Geers and after the accident in the second heat by Edman, finished in third place. Wiki Wiki made a spectacular finish to take second place in the second heat when he stumbled and slid ten yards, barely crossing the line under the wire.

Geers sent Goldie Todd to an easy victory in the first heat of the 2:03 pace, and Edman captured the remaining heats behind the Geers mount.

Sanardo, Tom Murphy's great pacer, will attempt to lower the season's record of 2:01 made by Single G. in an exhibition mile at the final running of the Syracuse meeting tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. F. E. DuBois of Baltusrol won the gross prize at the women's one-day golf tourney yesterday at Upper Montclair after a play-off with Mrs. F. B. Ryan, a club member. Mrs. Albert Taylor of Hackensack won the prize for low net score with 99—12—87, and the second honors went to Mrs. Ryan with her 97—5—92. WIDENER HAS GOOD DAY AT AQUEDUCT Naturalist and Pilgrim Take First Money in Feature Events of the Card.

J. E. Widener's Naturalist, which has been one of the most consistent performers of the season, in spite of the fact that he has a reputation for being a sulker, added another victory to his list yesterday by winning the Arverne Handicap, the feature for the opening day at Aqueduct. This a six-furlong dash, which was just suited to the high flight of speed of the Widener gelding, and he won by a length from G. W. Loft's On Watch, with M. L. Schwartz's Audacious third among the five that accepted the issue.

It was altogether a good day for the Widener colors, for following the victory of Naturalist, Pilgrim won the Luke Blackburn Handicap, at a mile and a sixteenth, defeating his only rival, Tailor Maid, by two lengths, having been sent to the post at the short price of 1 to 3.

While these were the chief events on the card offered for the first day of the Aqueduct meeting, the other contests were interesting, and a large crowd was present for the inaugural. Aqueduct had been put in good condition for this final session of racing.

Naturalist Leads Throughout.

The Arverne Handicap proved to be an excellent contest, in spite of the fact that Naturalist led all the way and won by a length without being put to a drive. He was closely pressed right at the end, but Jockey Kummer gave him a hand ride to the finish, and only urged him slightly a few jumps from the wire, when On Watch made a desperate effort to get up. The Hildreth pair, Lord Brighton and Krewer, were withdrawn, as was H. P. Whitney's Dr. Clark, the latter leaving it up to Panoply.

Naturalist was well backed and was a 7 to 10 choice at post time. While the horses were going to the post Naturalist gave his supporters a scare when he suddenly broke from a canter and made a dash through the backstretch. It appeared that he was running away, but Kummer got him in check before he had gone more than a sixteenth of a mile and the brief dash did him no harm.

When the barrier went up Naturalist broke in front with a rush, but was quickly joined by Panoply, which showed excellent speed for a short distance. These two drew clear of the others by four lengths rounding the turn, but the pace was too much for the Whitney filly and she was raced into submission by the time she reached the head of the stretch.

On Watch, which had been running in the second flight, worked his way up on the outside and, once turned for home, closed with a rush, in which he gained considerable ground. With but 114 pounds to the 133 carried by Naturalist, he became a dangerous contender.

Kummer Takes No Chances.

Kummer let Naturalist run his own race without urging and never touched him with a whip until near the finish On Watch had moved up to within a length of the leader and was charging with such determination that Kummer took no chances on a close finish and urged his mount just enough to get one or two more jumps out of him. This was sufficient to win the race handily. Audacious was never able to follow the pace closely, and although ridden hard in the stretch he could not get up and was unable to meet the rush of On Watch. Panoply finished out gamely, but was badly beaten, and Wedding Cake was outrun from the start.

With Salvestra scratched, the Luke Blackburn Handicap was a two-horse race, but it was a pretty contest right to the end. Pilgrim and Tailor Maid ran head and head for the first mile, with Pilgrim leading by a slight margin. Tailor Maid gave the Widener gelding a real tussle while her speed held out and Pilgrim did not appear to be a 1 to 3 shot until he was straightened out in the stretch. Then he drew away gradually and won by two lengths.

The Bellrose Stakes, for two-year-olds at five furlongs, fell rather easy prey to the Oneck Stable's Frigate, which had little trouble in disposing of the small field which opposed him. He won by five lengths from Rep, with Rolo third. Frigate was another short-priced favorite, having gone to the post quoted at 2 to 7. Frigate had all the speed. He broke in front, raced into a good lead before reaching the elbow out of the chute, and was never threatened to the end. Rep was the best of the others and was second by three lengths.

Ticket Wins Steeplechase.

Lawrence Waterbury's Ticket, which has developed into a very good fencer, was an easy winner of the steeplechase event. There were but three starters and one of these lost his rider. Elmer Johnson got second money, finishing eight lengths back of Ticket, while Sweepment, which was making his first effort over the field, showed the need of schooling, for he took the obstacles badly and at the third one unseated Jockey Phillips. After that he continued around the course and interfered repeatedly with the other horses.

ROSS HORSES TAKE THREE IN MARYLAND

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 16.—The colors of Commander J. K. L. Ross were very much in evidence here this afternoon when the Canadian sportsman scored a triple triumph. A. A. U. COMMITTEE CONSIDERS CASES

One Athlete Is Suspended and Two Boxers Are Declared Professionals.

I. Weiner, an unattached athlete, was suspended for three months last night by the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan A. A. U. Weiner was haled before the track and field jurists on charges of improperly competing in a track meet last July. It was charged that he participated in an event for novices when he was not entitled to classification as a non-prize winner, having previously broken his novice career.

The protest of the St. Anselm's A. C. over the Knights of St. Antony victory in the point battle at the Caledonian Club's games Labor Day was discussed, but no definite action was taken. The St. Anselm's protest charges that O. F. Anderson, whose points in a novice race decided the point struggle in favor of the Knights of St. Antony, was not qualified to race as a novice. It is alleged Anderson broke his novice career at an American Legion meet in Babylon, L. I. Anderson, appearing before the committee last night, maintained that the American Legion meet was a closed affair, and the committee decided to defer rendering a decision until further investigation can be made of the facts in the case.

Jack Hausner, Clark House A. A.; Joe Florio, Paulist A. C., and Al. Johnstone, unattached boxers, were formally declared professionals by the committee on the ground that they had participated in professional ring bouts.

THE MENLO

THE MALVERN

THE FIFTH AVENUE

IT is reasonable to suppose that in the great city of New York, there must be a multitude of men who would prefer to wear a hat of real reputation.

We believe that for some reason, entirely unwarranted, a percentage of these very men hesitate to step into a Knox Shop. To be perfectly plain—they apparently do not feel that a Knox Shop is their shop. They labor under the impression that a Knox Hat is only for the so-called exclusive type of person.

Let us state, emphatically, that Knox shops are organized and operated to capably serve any man who feels inclined to come in. Simply because Knox is one of the oldest and most reputable establishments in the world, one should not deny one-self the advantages of purchasing a Knox at a time when it is more necessary to secure a warrant of service than ever before, and when the prices of all hats are practically on a par.

It is a well established fact that the bigger the man, the more approachable he is; and the clearer his grasp of service and all it means to his fellow men.

So, through eighty-four years of selling hats, Knox has gained a most satisfactory and helpful understanding of men's needs, and has constantly increased its desire and ability to serve. Do not stay away because Knox has a reputation—come because of it and all it means in quality, style and service.

FUGITIVE IS SHOT IN BANDIT CHASE

HUNTERS BECOME HUNTED

Bullets Fly as Crowd Follows Two Assailants—Third Is Overpowered in Fight.

Two men are in Gouverneur Hospital, one suffering from stab wounds over the heart and the other from a gunshot wound in the groin, as the result of a series of free for all fights that followed an attempt to hold up Philip Gordon, at his confectionery stand, 127 Forsyth Street early yesterday. Gordon was stabbed while fighting off three robbers. A man giving his name as Matthew Collins, 242 East Eighty-fourth Street, was mysteriously shot as he was running down Forsyth Street, pursued by a mob. He is a prisoner at the hospital as a suspicious person.

Gordon's stand is near Delancey Street and the approach to the Williamsburg Bridge. The three hold-up men, one of them six feet tall, and another very short in stature, entered the place shortly before 3 o'clock and one of them asked Gordon if he would like to play a game of poker. He replied that he did not want to play. Then one of the three began striking him in the face. A second man joined in the beating and Gordon was being pummeled severely when he managed to break away from his assailants and ran south on Forsyth Street. The robbers pursued, brushing aside all persons who got in their way.

To a crowd sitting on a stoop in front of Herman Zeller's Tea Room, 97 Forsyth Street, Gordon told of the attempted hold-up, pointing to the three men who were following him. As the pursuers approached, the party sitting on the stoop ran into the tea room.

Max Renner, a merchant, 190 Forsyth Street, who was in the tea room, dashed to the sidewalk, where he attacked the six-footer, who was flourishing a knife. Renner grabbed the man by a leg and threw him to the sidewalk. Meantime the tea room crowd returned to the street and attacked the tall man's companions. They ran down the street, pursued by the crowd. Near Broome Street somebody fired five shots. A man dropped to the pavement, who afterward said he was Collins. Later the police found a revolver lying on the sidewalk near by.

Renner held the tall man until Patrolman Gunther of the Clinton Street station arrived and arrested him on charges of felonious assault and attempted robbery. He gave his name as Tobias Levine, 221 Division Street.

Gordon, before going to the operating table at Gouverneur Hospital, identified both Collins and Levine as two of his assailants.

ASKED ON FRENCH BOAT TO AID G. O. P. FUND

DETROIT, Sept. 16.—At least $1,000,000 of the Republican national campaign fund was to have been obtained from passengers on transatlantic liners, according to Colonel Angus McLean, who commanded a hospital unit overseas during the war and went to France this Summer on a special investigation mission for the Government, returning to Detroit.

Colonel McLean asserts that representatives of the Ways and Means Committee created by Will Hays solicited passengers of the vessel he was on, and it was the France, a French boat, Colonel McLean added.

"The men in charge of soliciting aboard the France told me," he said, "that before the end of the Summer they hoped to get $1,000,000 from passengers crossing to Europe. He explained that passengers usually were wealthy people and would sign up for a large amount without a great deal of concern.

"There were three speakers, a Mr. Michelin, who is an attorney for the Standard Oil Company; Judge E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, and John Willys of the Willys-Overland Company. All said they were members of the Ways and Means Committee. The speakers explained that they wanted $1,000 from each of us."

Colonel McLean stated that women in particular were resentful of the nature of the meeting, declaring it seemed poor taste to solicit funds from ocean passengers going on vacations and traveling on foreign boats.

OUSTED SOCIALISTS ALL WIN AT POLLS, BUT TO BE BARRED

LIGHT VOTE IS REGISTERED

All the five Socialist members of the Assembly who were expelled at the regular session of the Legislature this year on the ground that their party was disloyal to America made a winning fight against the combined forces of the two major parties at the polls yesterday in the special election ordered by Governor Smith. The election was for the purpose of filling the vacancies in their districts, preparatory to the extraordinary session of the lawmaking body which is to convene on Monday night.

In every district where an expelled Socialist was seeking re-election to the Assembly the Democrats and Republicans had agreed on a fusion candidate to oppose him. In every instance the Socialists showed sufficient strength to overcome the joint opposition of the older parties and rolled up majorities exceeding their majorities in the election last year or even their pluralities in districts where there was a three-cornered fight in the 1919 election.

In the Nineteenth Assembly District in Brooklyn, where Governor Smith has ordered a special election to fill a vacancy arising out of the death of Assemblyman John Damico since the regular session adjourned, the Democratic candidate won a three-cornered fight. The defeat of the Socialist candidate in this district, who was not one of the ousted quintet, was looked upon as lending color to the belief that a certain proportion of the vote cast for the ousted Socialist was supplied by Democratic or Republican voters as a protest against the methods used by Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet and his lieutenants in the Assembly to get rid of the Socialist members of the Assembly.

It was stated last night after the result of the election had been announced that the five Socialist Assemblymen-elect would not be permitted to take their seats in the Assembly but would be challenged at the bar of the House when they appeared to take their oath of office. Speaker Sweet was not in the city last night and the report could not be confirmed through him, but it emanated from a source that usually has been found reliable.

Louis Waldman, Eighth Assembly District, Manhattan.

Samuel Orr, Fourth Assembly District, Bronx.

Charles Solomon, Twenty-third Assembly District, Brooklyn.

The winning candidate in the Nineteenth Assembly District in Brooklyn was Benjamin C. Klingman, the Democratic candidate, who has seen some years of service in the Assembly, but was defeated a year ago by John Damico, the Republican candidate, by a plurality of 19. His plurality in yesterday's election over Francis Xavier Giacone, the Republican candidate, was 75 votes. Nat Rubin, the Socialist contender in the Nineteenth, ran third.

The vote in yesterday's election was light, but the Socialists polled a stronger vote than did their opponents in proportion. The combined vote of the anti-Socialist candidates in the five districts where Socialists won was approximately one-third of the vote polled against the Socialist candidates in the general election last year. The Socialist candidates received approximately 11,000 votes less than they did when they ran last year.

Poll Light Vote.

Dem. and Rep.	11,336	32,516

Thus in the election last year the Socialist candidates in the five districts ran 4,047 votes behind their opponents, and while all the five candidates were elected this was due to the fact that in the two Bronx districts and in the Twenty-third District in Brooklyn fusion had failed, with the result that there were three-cornered fights. In the special election yesterday, in a total vote less than half the vote cast last year, the Socialist candidates had a clear aggregate majority in the five districts over their fusion opponents of 6,318, a shift of more than 10,000 votes.

The following table shows the vote cast in the six districts where special elections were held yesterday, together with the majorities in the five districts where there was fusion against the Socialists and the plurality in the Nineteenth Assembly District in Kings, where three candidates were in the field:

*In these districts there was no fusion in 1919. These figures represent the combined Democratic and Republican vote. There was a Socialist plurality in the district.

Election Is Orderly.

The election was orderly from start to finish, although in some instances spokesmen for the Socialist candidates complained that attempts had been made to intimidate Socialist voters. The Socialist State Committee had sent hundreds of watchers to the polling places in the six Assembly districts, and their work was supplemented by agents for the Honest Ballot Association, who were out in force.

Only two arrests were reported, Jacob Brownstein, a nurse, and his wife, Yetta, of 21 East 104th Street, were taken into custody on a charge of illegal voting in the Seventeenth Assembly District in Manhattan. The arrest was made by Abraham Rosen, Chairman of the Election Board that sat at the polling place at 26 East 105th Street. Rosen said the name of Mr. Brownstein and his wife were on a challenge list he had received from the Board of Elections.

Cuvillier to Back Sweet.

Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier of the Twentieth Assembly District in Manhattan, who was active in the prosecution of the charges against the Socialist members at the regular session, made public last night a letter he had sent to Speaker Sweet of the Assembly in which he questioned the eligibility of the five Socialist Assemblymen and expressed willingness to support Speaker Sweet in the scheduled move to oust them anew.

Here is Assemblyman Cuvillier's letter:

My dear Mr. Sweet:

The Socialist Party, designated to fill the vacancies in the Assembly, Louis Waldman in the Eighth District, August Claesens in the Seventeenth District, Manhattan; Samuel A. De Witt, Third District, Bronx; Samuel Orr, Fourth District, Bronx, and Charles Solomon, Twenty-Third District, Brooklyn, for the coming extraordinary session called by Governor Smith, to be convened on the twentieth instant. In the event that either or all of the above named men are elected, I am of the opinion, after a thorough investigation, that they will not be entitled to their seats in the Assembly, as the Assembly, by an overwhelming vote, declared their seats vacant.

Article III., Section 2, states, "The Assembly shall consist of 150 members, who shall be chosen for one year."

Article X., Section 6, "The political year and legislative term shall begin on the first day of January; and the Legislature shall, every year, assemble on the first Wednesday in January. Article III., Section 10, states, "Each house shall determine the rules of its own proceedings and be the judge of the election, returns and qualifications of its own members."

Article IV., Sec. 4—Governor. "He shall have the power to convene the Legislature on extraordinary occasions," and Executive law gives the power of the Governor to call an election to fill any vacancies that may exist in the Legislature by reason of death, resignation or removal of any of its members; as an Assemblyman is elected from Jan. 1 for the entire year, and if he is expelled during the term for which he is elected by the Assembly, he is absolutely ineligible to be elected to that same body that expelled him.

This was demonstrated in the House of Representatives at Washington in the case of Victor Berger. If the Socialists had nominated other candidates than those heretofore expelled, then the question of their rights to seats in the Assembly would have to be determined by an investigation of their fitness, but the stupendous blunder of the Socialist Party in sending these men back, who were expelled for disloyalty and against the Government of the United States, is only adding insult to the Assembly of the State of New York, and I for one shall without hesitation vote to unseat any of the above men if elected at this special election. I do not think that they even should be permitted to take a seat in the Assembly. Respectfully,

LOUIS A. CUVILLIER.

In the long inquiry that preceded the ousting of the five Socialists, the principal attack against their eligibility to membership of the Assembly was that in becoming members of the Socialist Party they had subscribed to its Constitution, which, it was charged, contained clauses that would make it impossible for them, in case they desired to live up to the obligations to their party, to fulfill their duties under the oath of office they had taken before assuming their seats.

One of the clauses in conflict with the State Constitution which an Assemblyman swears he will uphold, prohibits Socialists as members of legislative assemblies to vote for any appropriations for military or naval purposes. The State Constitution provides that it shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide sufficient money to maintain a State militia which even in times of peace must have a strength of at least ten thousand men.

Ex-King Manuel Urges All Portuguese to Unite

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 15 (Associated Press).—A long letter is printed in today's papers from Manuel, ex-King of Portugal, to his representative here, Councilor Ayres Dorneeldes, who is in prison, advising the union of all Portuguese citizens in view of the grave crisis Portugal is suffering, the worst since 1580. The letter urges the conservative forces to unite and form a barrier for the purpose of defending from anarchy those who want order restored in the country.

Manuel says his letter is not advocacy of war, but on the contrary an appeal which he makes from exile to his partisans and all Portuguese to save their country and its honor. He urges the necessity of amnesty for political prisoners as indispensable for the union of all Portuguese. Although he does not abdicate his principles, he is ready to do all in his power for his country when it is in danger. He concludes the letter by saying he will continue to work in England, which is Portugal's traditional ally, for the good of his country.

HOPES YET TO AVERT BRITISH COAL STRIKE

Sir Robert Horne Says Unions Have Made New Proposals Which May End in Settlement.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The conference of the coal miners' executive with Sir Robert Horne, President of the Board of Trade, adjourned late this afternoon without an agreement having been reached in settlement of the controversy between the miners and the Government.

Sir Robert Horne declared, however, that new proposals made by the miners constituted an advance toward a peaceful solution of the trouble.

The miners proposed that the Government grant the increase in wages demanded by them, but declared that an increase should not be put on the price of coal for consumption in households. They also asked that tribunals be appointed to inquire whether the financial situation of the coal industry would stand a reduction in the declining price of coal, an inquiry into the declining output of coal and an investigation of the present wage system with a view to granting up-to-date standard wages.

Sir Robert Horne replied that the only method of deciding the selling price of coal was that already adopted, and on this point he declined to accede to the miners' proposal.

MODERATES SEEK SINN FEIN PARLEY

Urge "Republicans" to Confer on Dominion Rule Within the British Empire.

HOPE TO SAVE MACSWINEY

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Reports from Brixton Prison today, the thirty-fifth of Terence MacSwiney's hunger strike, by physicians to the Home Office and by the Irish Self-Determination League agreed that the starving Mayor of Cork passed a "very bad" night and was "extremely weak and worn out."

Despite these reports, however, friends and relatives were cheered by the constantly growing opinion that if MacSwiney's resistance can tide him over a short space more he may be released.

This depends upon the success of negotiations now pending between moderate Republicans in Ireland and the Standing Committee of the "Dublin Peace Conference" of Dominion Home Rulers, appointed three weeks ago, which is trying to arrive at some proposal for Irish self-government within the British Empire.

A member of the Republican "Government" declares that such a proposal has been made to Arthur Griffith, "Acting President of the Irish Republic," and that Griffith has not refused it.

He is still considering the matter, and it is considered possible that he may consent to take part in the Congress at which leaders of the Sinn Feiners will meet Irish moderates with this end in view.

It is asserted, however, that Griffith is bound to consider the strength of the Irish irreconcilables, of whom Michael Collins, "Republican War Minister," is said to be chief.

On the British side it has already been stated that if such a proposal is made by persons who could fulfill their promises in Ireland, the Government probably would be prepared to reconsider its attitude with regard to MacSwiney and the other hunger strikers.

It is reported from Ireland that the Dublin Castle authorities have recommended to Downing Street the release of Joseph Murphy, said to be an American citizen, on a hunger strike in Cork, on the ground that there is only circumstantial evidence against him. At the military inquiry yesterday Frank Marratt, a former soldier, said that Murphy visited him in 1916 and picked up a disused bomb, which he asked permission to take as a souvenir. A bomb was produced in court as having been found in Murphy's possession when he was arrested, and the Murphys claim this is the souvenir. Murphy's father corroborated this testimony.

The other hunger strikers at Cork are reported as steadily sinking, with everything possible being done to ease their last days.

Bonar Law, who is handling the Irish situation for Mr. Lloyd George, denied today that the Government had any plan to smash the Sinn Fein before Parliament reassembles or that there has been any change in the general policy of restoring law and order.

Mr. Law also stated that the appointment of an Assistant Under Secretary for the six counties in Ulster was preparatory to bringing the Home Rule bill into force both in Southern Ireland and Ulster.

MacSwiney Reported Very Weak.

LONDON, Sept. 16 (Associated Press)—Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, was much weaker this morning after spending a bad night, according to the report to the Home Office from the physicians at Brixton Prison, where the Lord Mayor is incarcerated. The physicians stated that MacSwiney had enjoyed less rest than for several nights previously.

"The Lord Mayor," said the morning bulletin issued by the Irish Self-Determination League, "passed a very bad night indeed and was very weak and worn out this morning."

The evening bulletin of the Irish Self-Determination League quotes Mrs. MacSwiney, wife of the Lord Mayor, as saying her husband is "nearly worn out." She visited her husband this afternoon.

"He is extremely weak, he is nearly worn out," she said. Miss Annie MacSwiney, sister of the imprisoned man, is quoted as having said that the Lord Mayor "remains very exhausted."

Timothy Healey, a delegate of the American Federation of Labor, called at the prison today to convey fraternal greetings to MacSwiney.

CORK, Sept. 16.—With the exception of Sean Hennessy, the 19-year-old boy, all the hunger strikers in Cork jail were conscious this morning. Peter Crowley, 18 years old, the youngest of the eleven hunger strikers, was reported to be in a critical condition today, as also was Kenny.

The prison physicians today reported that the prisoners were emaciated, that their restlessness was more marked and that there was a gradual failing in their pulses.

LEAGUE COUNCIL AT WORK.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The Council of the League of Nations began a three-day session here today for the consideration of several important international questions.

Today's meetings largely concerned the Aland Islands case, but final decision was withheld pending further discussion Saturday. The Swedish Government was represented by Premier Branting and Finland by M. Enckell, Finnish Minister to France.

Leon Bourgeois, who presided, presented the report of the committee of international jurists on the legal aspects of the case.

DAVIS TO RETURN TO LONDON

But He May Make a Few Speeches Before Returning.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—John W. Davis, Ambassador to England, will return to London soon, it was learned at the State Department today.

There are many questions of importance to be taken up, and it is felt that prolonged absence of the Ambassador might hamper consideration of some of them.

It is expected that Mr. Davis will make one or two speeches before returning to London.

Mine Manager Shot Dead From Ambush; Two Deputy Sheriffs Also Wounded, Die

JASPER, Ala., Sept. 16.—L. M. Adler, general manager of the Corona Coal Company, was shot and instantly killed today, and Deputy Sheriffs Edgel and Brown, traveling with him in an automobile, were wounded so seriously that both died later.

The shooting is considered the outgrowth of the coal mine strike which has been progress in Alabama for ten day, and after the killings Sheriff Clark Guthrie of Walker County called upon Governor Kilby for troops. Late tonight the Sheriff announced that he had been informed that the State forces would begin arriving at the mining camps at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Adler and his party were all shot from ambush, the authorities said. Feeling has been growing bitter between mine guards and miners since the institution of the strike, though no conflicts had taken place prior to the shooting today. Sheriff Guthrie reported to the Governor, however, that armed bands were gathering at Corona, Townley and other mining camps in the district, and said that the situation was out of his control.

GIOLITTI TO NAME STRIKE COMMISSION

Decides to Attempt Solution After Meeting Workers and Employers.

TO REPORT TO PARLIAMENT

Hopes to Submit Plan to Conduct Plants to Both Houses Early in Session.

ROME, Sept. 16.—Premier Giolitti has decided to attempt the solution of the metal workers' complication by appointing a commission comprising manufacturers and workmen to prepare a settlement plan, it was stated today.

The Premier, according to Turin advices, reached this decision after having heard representatives of both the workers and the manufacturers present their cases to him at conferences in that city. A decree will be issued naming the commissioners.

The project for the conduct of the plants, to be formulated by the commission, it is added, will be presented by the Government to the Houses of Parliament when their sessions open.

Preparations for recruiting an Italian Soviet Army are going on in Milan, Turin, Rome, Naples and other large cities throughout the country, according to the newspaper Epoca, which prints a statement to this effect by a superior officer of the Italian Army. It is said that one of the leading chiefs of the Soviet organization is Enrico Malatesta, the Anarchist chief.

Signor Vella, a member of the Chamber of Deputies from Sicily and ranked among the extreme revolutionists in the Chamber, denies in an interview with the Tribuna any connection with this alleged Bolshevist army. Vella enlisted during the war and refused promotion and later was court-martialed for disseminating anti-war propaganda. He was convicted and received an additional sentence for contempt of court.

Giolitti Meets Workers and Masters.

TURIN, Sept. 16.—Conciliation and moderation were urged by Premier Giolitti in his conferences with workmen and employers here in the hope that a compromise which will satisfy both sides of the Italian metal workers' conflict may be reached. A section of the employers suggested it might accept intervention in the management of factories, and representatives of the workmen asked if this intervention would be exercised by the State in the interests of the men.

Among those attending the conferences were Senator Conti, Deputy Olivetti, Signor Lusignoli, Prefect of Milan; Signor Taddei, Prefect of Turin; Deputies Daragona and Baldesi, representatives of the Confederation of Labor; Deputies Buozzi and Colombino, delegates of the Federation of Metal Workers, and representatives of Chambers of Commerce and banking institutions.

Circulation of automobiles and motor lorries has been prohibited in the district of Biella, one of the most important industrial centres of Piedmont, the authorities claiming that this step is in the interest of public order. Signor Barberis, Socialist, has visited plants in this city and inspected machine guns in possession of the workmen occupying them. He is credited with saying that "the bourgeoise power is tottering."

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

TURIN, Sept. 16.—John Parodi, Chairman of the Central Communist Committee operating the mammoth Fiat auto works, with face and hands grimy, and in overalls, received me this evening in the luxurious mahogany and velvet office of the deposed President, Ognelli, and conducted me through the plant.

"We cannot pay the men until communism spreads everywhere in Italy, but we have arranged to get money from Russia, where we have arranged to sell automobiles on account. We will not compromise with capital. We will not pay for this plant, which belongs to the workers and not to the employers."

I asked a highly skilled workman if he were getting more money than before the seizure. He answered unhesitatingly:

"I do not deserve more than the others. I desire to work only to obtain a living, not to live to work."

He favored conscription of skilled workmen to make them stay in the communized works.

"The reason communism is backward in America," he added, "is because of untrammeled official tyranny against the agitators, even deportations; but America will swing over eventually to communism which must be worldwide to be successful. We must pay for food by promises, but the tradesmen must accept our accounts or we will communize them, too."

Signor Parodi refused to permit me to visit the blueprint room because the trade secrets are hidden there.

MORRIS WAITS ON PARLEYS.

Ambassador to Japan Remains Pending Treaty Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Ambassador Morris will probably not return to Japan until after the State Department and Baron Shidehara, the Japanese Ambassador, shall have gone ahead with their negotiations upon the terms of the new treaty which may be concluded between the two countries.

It is understood that the main problems involved in the present negotiations are the rights of Japanese subjects in the United States and the regulation of Japanese immigration to the United States.

It is said on excellent authority that the Ishii-Lansing agreement, in which the United States recognizes Japan's special interests in Asiatic regions contiguous to Japanese territory, will not be brought up in the negotiations, there being no occasion for discussion.

EX-ROYAL REFUGEES WORRY THE SWISS

HAS BIG PROPAGANDA FUND

Charles of Austria, Also Suddenly Possessed of Ample Means, Thought to be Intriguing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—The presence in Switzerland of many refugee ex-royalties is causing the authorities uneasiness. Despite denial that the Greek Government had requested the expulsion of former King Constantine, I learn that notes have been exchanged between Switzerland and Greece concerning him and his plotting.

It is known that Constantine after arriving in Switzerland received 10,000,000 Swiss francs from Herr Simson, chief of the late German propagandist press service in Zurich. It is also known that Constantine has been paying sums of money through his aide de camp to professional propagandists and agitators, some of whom have been obliged to leave Switzerland for Germany. Frau Sophie, Constantine's wife and sister of the ex-Emperor of Germany, is no less busy plotting.

The 10,000,000 francs which he received from Simson is explained as having been subscribed by tobacco manufacturers in Germany, the United States and Italy to whom Constantine is said to have promised a tobacco monopoly in Greece after his restoration.

Another ex-royalty whose presence is causing Switzerland to fear international complications is Charles Hapsburg, ex-Emperor of Austria-Hungary. His castle near Geneva is the continual meeting place of Austrian and particularly Hungarian royalists.

Charles, who a year ago complained of lack of money and asked the British Government to advance a loan on the security of jewels which he brought from Austria, now seems to lack nothing. Hardly a day passes without his giving luncheon or dinner parties to royalists visiting him, and he has almost as many servants and attendants as at Schönbrunn.

As the League of Nations will so soon be established in Geneva, many Swiss insist that Switzerland should first be rid of all these ex-royalties, as otherwise she may again become that plotting ground of Europe which she was during the war. It is thought that some island might be found for the ex-Emperor of Austria and Constantine and all other princes and princelings with whom the world does not quite know what to do and whose presence in the heart of Europe is becoming dangerous.

Many Constantinian and Hapsburgian agents are known to have applied to United States Consulates in Switzerland for permission to go to America, but unsuccessfully. Some then left for Holland and tried under assumed names and with false passports to get American visés. Some perhaps succeeded, but the United States passport service is so efficient that fraud is generally detected.

AMERICAN KILLED ON MEXICAN BORDER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The State Department received a telegram today from the American Consul at Nuevo Laredo stating that E. W. Speed, an American citizen, residing at Derby, Frio County, Texas, was shot and killed on the Mexican end of the international footbridge by Santiago Cavazos, a Mexican, about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Cavazos is now in jail in Nuevo Laredo, which is just across the border from Laredo. Speed's body was brought to the American side and his father, S. G. Speed, at Dilley, Frio County, Texas, has been notified by the American Consul.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16 (Associated Press).—Felipe Pifieda, leader of a revolt in the State of Chiapas, has surrendered to General Francisco Cosio Robelo, commander of Government forces in that State, according to an announcement by the War Department. San Cristobal and Las Casas, two towns occupied by Pifieda's men, have been taken over by General Robelo.

SALEM, Mass., Sept. 16.—Counsel for Victor Albert Searles, nephew of the late Edward F. Searles, who left an estate estimated at from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000, this afternoon filed in the Probate Court a motion asking, that the court direct that issues of fact shall be tried by a jury and that the issues include the questions as to whether the instrument of July 24, 1920, propounded as Searles's will was executed according to law, whether Searles was of sound mind at the time of its execution and whether it was procured to be made through the fraud and undue influence of Arthur T. Walker, Lewis L. Delafield, Joseph F. McCarthy and Mary Allen Rowland, or any of them.

An opportunity will now be given for counsel for the will to decide whether they wish to ask for an early hearing.

Another appearance in the case was entered today when Charles Dickinson and Arthur Black, 53 State Street, Boston, representing Ames L. Smith of Detroit, Mich., appeared in opposition to the probate of the will.

DESCHANEL RESIGNS; ELECTION CALLED

ASSEMBLY TO CONVENE

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—President Paul Deschanel today presented his resignation from office to Premier Millerand at Rambouillet. The Premier will present the resignation to Parliament early next week, and a joint session of the chambers will be held at Versailles toward the end of the week to elect the President's successor.

As early as the Deputies and Senators can return from the country both chambers of Parliament will be convoked in special session to receive the President's resignation. This probably will be on Tuesday or Wednesday. Then the President of the Senate, Leon Bourgeois, will summon both houses to meet together as a National Assembly at Versailles to elect the new President. They probably will meet on Thursday or Friday and the new President will be elected by Saturday at the latest.

It is still uncertain who the new President will be, as until M. Deschanel's resignation is officially communicated to the Parliament it is incorrect for any one definitely to announce his candidacy. This applies particularly to the outstanding possible candidate, M. Millerand, who as Premier cannot depart from an attitude of reserve.

In an interview with the Intransigeant correspondent yesterday in the train from Lausanne M. Millerand did, however, indicate that his intention not to stand was by no means so categorical as other press writers had declared. The correspondent said: "Your friends think you would make an admirable President." M. Millerand replied: "They are wrong. I don't think so. In any case, the higher interest of the country is all that matters."

It is freely suggested today that not only his position but his close personal friendship for M. Deschanel is the cause of M. Millerand's reserve, and that he will be willing to accept the office of President when the time comes.

The Echo de Paris, however, declares that M. Millerand's refusal was emphatic, and that he indicated M. Jonnart as his own personal choice.

Against Jonnart it is objected that he is too old, nearly 64. Leon Bourgeois is even older, and General Castelnau has passed 60.

This argument favors the present President of the Chamber, Raoul Peret, who is only 50, but it is beyond doubt that if Millerand is willing to stand he can be elected.

It now appears that the apoplectic stroke from which President Deschanel suffered in May was more serious in effect than officially stated. M. Deschanel is said to have been afflicted with intermittent aphasia, and the Temps goes so far as to state tonight that on Friday morning last he was seen struggling in the water of a canal which runs past the grounds of Rambouillet Chateau. Fortunately the water was quite shallow and he was rescued without injury, but it was then realized that complete recovery was impossible and his resignation was considered inevitable.

PARIS, Sept. 16 (Associated Press).—President Deschanel's resolve to resign from office was reached upon the advice of his physicians, according to the Echo de Paris. The President reached a decision in the matter several days ago, and since that time has seemed to be much relieved over the prospect of a release from the burdens of public life. He rambled through Rambouillet Park with his wife and children yesterday, the newspaper says, and the fact that he is soon to return to private life seems to have given him renewed hope and confidence.

"The latest chapter in the life of M. Deschanel," says the newspaper, "reads like an act from a Shakespearean drama. A few mornings ago he was found walking toward a lake in the park where his valet was fishing, and it seemed that he was drawn toward the water by some mysterious force. He was led back to his apartments and physicians were hastily summoned, but they found no serious symptoms had made their appearance."

Immediately after taking up his residence in the Palace of the Elysée following his induction into the Chief Magistracy, adds the Temps, President Deschanel became greatly depressed, owing to a too abrupt change from an active life.

REPORTS INVASION PLOT.

BERLIN, Sept. 15 (Associated Press).—The Foreign Office today exhibited a large number of typewritten documents in Polish, military maps and other material comprising orders and reports alleged to have been taken from a Polish courier who attempted to swim the border stream between Beuthen and Sosnowice on the night of July 30.

Although the Government has been in possession of what it terms concrete evidence supporting its assertions that the Poles have been attempting a violent conquest of Upper Silesia for the last six weeks, it is only now making it public, the delay being explained on the ground of its desire to make certain of the authenticity of the documents, which it charges emanate from the Pan-Polish headquarters at Beuthen.

HOLDUP VICTIM IMPROVES.

Mrs. Rabinowitz Is Not Told of Her Husband's Death.

The condition of Mrs. Emma Rabinowitz, who was seriously wounded Wednesday in the holdup of her husband's tailor shop at 233 West Thirty-fourth Street in which her husband Max was shot to death, was reported to be improved at New York Hospital yesterday. Dr. William F. MacFee said that no operation had been found necessary, the two bullets having passed cleanly through the body. The surgeons were much concerned, however, by the woman's insistent questions as to her husband's condition. Her condition is such that the physicians have not felt it safe to tell her of his death.

Harry Van Reed, perpetrator of the holdup, giving his age as 36 years and his address as 52 St. Nicholas Avenue, was held without bail to the Grand Jury for murder by Magistrate Raphael Tobias in West Side Court. Van Reed had nothing to say in court, and appeared stolid.

Vienna Paper Appeals to Us To Come to Rescue of Europe

VIENNA, Sept. 16.—The Neue Freie Presse of Vienna editorially appeals to America as the only country which can save Europe from utter breakdown, saying that America is now indissolubly connected with Europe's distress and very existence, and should not look on idly while nations are dashed into unparalleled misery and Europe blindly courts disaster.

SAVE CONSTITUTION, HARDING URGES

A Spirit Abroad in the Land Seeks to Weaken the Basic Law, He Says.

WARNS AGAINST AUTOCRACY

MARION, Ohio, Sept. 16.—Declaring the Constitution to be the "ever standing proclamation of the right of the people to speak as the sovereign power of the nation," Senator Harding, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, issued a statement here today, preliminary to the celebration of Constitution Day tomorrow, in which he declared that there was a "spirit abroad in the land which seeks to weaken the adherence of the people to their Constitution and which recklessly challenges its worth."

He said that "if by some tragic dispensation of fate this Constitution should cease to be, the door would no longer be closed against the stealthy appropriation of autocratic power and the gradual absorption of the people's sovereignty."

"There is abroad in the land a spirit which seeks to weaken the adherence of the people to their Constitution, and which recklessly challenges its worth. It is well, therefore, to have one day in the year set apart for the clearing of our vision and the regeneration of our faith.

"To assail or belittle the flag is to invite and incur the just and passionate resentment of all country-loving men, but the Constitution may be attacked or disparaged with impunity, and all too often, with approval, and yet the one is but a symbol—though a very precious symbol—while the other is the very warp and woof of our national existence.

"It has sometimes been asserted that the Constitution was imposed upon the many for the benefit of the few. On the contrary, it is the one thing, above all other things in our polity, which both in origin and expression is universal in its democracy. A statute rests upon the delegated authority of a small official group, but the Constitution is the direct fiat of all the people. It is their mandate—expressing not their wishes, but their will—fixing the immovable boundaries of power beyond which their servants who administer their Government are forbidden to go. It is declared to be 'the supreme law of the land,' with which every other law and every official act must coincide or fall.

"It is an ever-standing proclamation of the right of the people to speak as the sovereign power of the nation, whose body and soul they are, for does it not begin with the imperial words: 'We, the people of the United States, * * * do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.' If by some tragic dispensation of fate this Constitution should cease to be, the door would no longer be closed against the stealthy appropriation of autocratic power, and the gradual absorption of the people's sovereignty.

"So long as it endures the people will never have a master, but will rule themselves, subject to no compelling force but their own authority and the will of God.

"Whether it shall endure will be for the men and women of America to determine. Respect for it, reverence for it, is not enough. They must take hold of its meaning, penetrate its spirit, cleave to its principles, confound its enemies. More dangerous than open repudiation is insidious subversion.

"Our people must set themselves to the task of ending the attempt to subject the legislative power of the control of the executive, and of restoring the substance of constitutional government under which the several departments are separate but coequal, answerable not one to another but each to the people from whom alone it derives its power to be or act at all."

After a long distance telephone conversation between Senator Harding and Senator Harry New of Indiana, head of the Speakers' Bureau of the National Committee, it was announced this noon that there would be no Harding trip to the Pacific Coast. At the same time three speaking dates for the candidate were given out.

When Senator Harding completes his front porch campaign Sept. 25 he will board a train for Baltimore, where he will speak Sept. 27. The next night he is to speak in Wheeling, and on the night of Sept. 29 he will give an address in Ashland, Ky.

HITS $30,000,000 CHARGE.

"More Windmills," Says Republican Treasurer Upham.

"More windmills," was the way Fred W. Upham, Treasurer of the Republican National Committee, characterized the most recent charge by Governor Cox of Ohio, Democratic nominee for President, that the Republicans, not content with a $15,000,000 "slush" fund, were trying to pile up a fund of $30,000,000 for campaign purposes. Mr. Upham was at headquarters of the Republican National Committee yesterday.

"More windmills, just the same as before," said Mr. Upham when questioned regarding the $30,000,000 fund. "Governor Cox is not getting anywhere with his sensational and uncorroborated charges. Even such Democratic Senators as Pomerene and Reed showed that they were getting disgusted with the charges at the Chicago hearing.

"We have 40,000 subscribers. When summoned before the Senate Committee at Chicago I produced a complete list. When the Treasurer of the Democratic National Committee was asked to produce his list the same as I had done, he seemed surprised and said he did not think the committee would want it.

COX WOULD MEET FAIR RESERVATIONS

Would "Make Any Reasonable Concession" to Put America in the League, He Says.

SURE SENATE WOULD AGREE

TALKS ON LABOR IN RENO

RENO, Sept. 16.—Governor Cox made public here tonight a telegram he had sent to Professor Irving Fisher of Yale, in which he defined his position in regard to reservations to the League of Nations covenant and made it plain that in the event of his election he expected a compromise to be reached that would bring about the speedy ratification of the treaty and covenant. The Governor said that he will "endeavor to meet all reasonable desires for proper reservations which are offered in sincerity and are not merely presented as trumped up for political purposes."

The telegram was sent in response to a message from Professor Fisher, who has organized a movement among independent voters, favoring the entrance of the United States into the League. Professor Fisher spoke of a statement by ex-President Taft that the election of Cox would mean an uncompromising attitude on both sides in relation to ratification. In his telegram to Professor Fisher, the Governor said:

"I am determined to secure the earliest possible entrance into the League of Nations, with the least possible delay and with the least possible change as needed to accomplish that result.

"The platform adopted by the convention at which I was nominated permits reservations which will clarify and reassure. Our people do not want reservations which will destroy the league. I have no doubt the Republican and Democratic Senators alike will loyally fulfill the people's mandate which my election will signify.

"I shall endeavor to meet all reasonable desires for proper reservations which are offered in sincerity and which are not merely presented as trumped up for political purposes. My heart is in the fight and I shall put forth all effort to make any reasonable concession to win it, that we may secure membership in the League for America."

From the first Governor Cox has stated that he would favor reservations that would eliminate any doubt concerning the safeguarding of American rights. He holds that this can be done without destroying the effectiveness of the treaty and League.

It is the further belief of Governor Cox that the people will register their approval of the League by electing him President in November, and the Republican Senators would not dare to hold out against public opinion, especially when it is so expressed in a Presidential election, for the full protection of American nationality.

Charges have been made by others than President Taft that the election of Cox would mean an endless discussion of the issue, with the Republican Senators refusing to give ground. In his telegram tonight Governor Cox attacks this contention, declaring he is convinced that if he is elected President a common ground would be reached, assuring early ratification of the treaty and entry of the United States into the League.

Carries Fight Into Nevada.

Governor Cox carried his fight into Nevada today, having apparently satisfied, through the big demonstrations of yesterday, that Utah was to be counted safely in the Democratic column in November.

The Governor discussed labor unrest in his addresses here and said that extreme elements among the employers and employes were causing unrest to become dangerous.

"It is an unprofitable business policy on the part of employers to allow this to continue," he said. "Productive efficiency of labor cannot be obtained under such conditions. If continued the current will inevitably swing from reaction to radicalism with disastrous results to labor, to business and to enterprise.

"It will, therefore, be more profitable to heed the lessons of the times and to realize the necessity of setting radicalism with progressive and liberal constructive statesmanship and thus minimize industrial conflict and make possible the legitimate development of our industrial enterprise.

"To continue the present industrial controversy will mean the impossibility of attaining industrial stability and prosperity and will probably terminate in serious losses arising from reaction and reprisals."

"I will tell you what my creed is," he said. "It is Lord God Almighty first, America, the leader in the world, America, the leader in the readjustment now at hand. What of America first instead of Mexico, Turkey and Russia as the associates in the reactionary candidacy?"

Statements on Post Office.

"Well, they are not enough," answered Governor Cox. "There are a lot of things to be done in the Post Office Department, and I hope to do some of those things if I am elected." This reply caused prolonged cheering.

In regard to prohibition Governor Cox said:

"The Eighteenth Amendment is in the Constitution. On the 4th of March I will take an oath of office. I will swear before Almighty God to defend, protect and enforce the Constitution and the laws of the United States. I did it as Governor of Ohio, and during my administration, for the first time in all the history of that commonwealth, the front door and the back door of every saloon were closed on Sunday."

Governor Cox made brief addresses to gatherings of the people at a dozen small settlements in Nevada today. There was evidence here, as in all of the States west of the Mississippi he has campaigned, of an unusual interest on the part of women voters.

At noon tomorrow Governor Cox will speak in Sacramento, the home of Senator Johnson, and tomorrow night the Governor will speak at Convention Hall in San Francisco, where he was nominated.

CORNELL ATHLETES IN CAR RUNAWAY

ITHACA, Sept 16.—One man was killed and twenty persons were injured, three perhaps fatally, here, when a runaway street car, heavily loaded with passengers, many of whom were members of the Cornell football squad on their way to practice, crashed into a tree this afternoon, after running down hill for four blocks.

One of the most seriously injured is A. G. Nosek of Cleveland, a candidate for the Cornell football eleven. His injuries are internal. The other two whose injuries the physicians say may be fatal are Mr. Berger's wife, who has severe spinal injuries, and Mrs. Mary Moe of this city, whose skull was fractured when she jumped.

The car got out of control as it was ascending the steep Eddy Street grade, and had just reached the Eddy Street gate to the University grounds, when, according to the motorman, something snapped, and the car began to back down the grade. Efforts to stop it were unsuccessful, and after it had run four blocks, gathering momentum as it descended the grade, it jumped the track and crashed into a tree, a few feet short of a sixty-foot embankment.

The impact split the car half its length and threw the passengers in all directions.

Passengers began to jump as soon as the car began to run away. The motorman, who stuck to his post in a vain attempt to stop the car, had several ribs fractured and a leg broken.

The injured were taken to the City Hospital, only a few hundred feet from the scene of the accident.

DRAFT HOUSING BILLS.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The Housing Committee of the Legislature began actual work today in preparing bills which will be presented to the Legislature next Monday night. The committee, of which Senator Charles C. Lockwood of Brooklyn is chairman, met with members of the bill-drafting commission and several bills were drawn. These were gone over carefully and will be further revised tomorrow. It is understood that before they are given to the public Governor Smith will be asked to look them over and see if they carry out his ideas.

The Governor will not be here until Saturday and other legislative leaders are not expected before Sunday.

It is understood that before the bill is passed the public will have a chance to present any objections at a public hearing to be held before the Joint Committee on Housing. This hearing will probably not take place until the latter part of next week, so it is certain that the Legislature will be in session all of next week.

Those who attended toda 's meeting of the committee were Senators Lockwood, J. Henry Walters, Syracuse; John Dunnigan, Bronx, and James H. Caulfield, Jr., Brooklyn.

PTERIOTSIS AID ARRESTED.

Commerce Company Secretary Is Put Under $50,000 Bail.

Anastasius G. Vernard, known also as V. V. Nicus, who was indicted with six others on a charge of having defrauded banks and trust companies of $220,000 by means of raised bills of lading, was arrested by Special Agent J. J. Kennedy of the Department of Justice at the curb market in Broad Street, a few minutes before yesterday's explosion. Vernard was secretary of the American Company of Commerce, of 79 Wall Street.

Judge William B. Sheppard in the United States District Court held Vernard in $50,000 bail for pleading. George D. Pteriotsis, President of the company, and George Brouzo, the Treasurer, are held under $100,000 bail each.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Sept. 16.—Dr. Otis W. Sedgewick, physician and surgeon of Whitehall, Mich., is in the jail here facing a warrant charging him with murder in the first degree of his wife, Mrs. Luverne Sedgewick, and his little three-year-old daughter, Ruby.

He has not uttered a word since the victims were found strangled to death upon the front lawn of his home in Whitehall this morning and a posse of officers and men broke in the rear door of the house and arrested him as he lay in bed undressed and staring at the ceiling. Another child, one year old, was in a crib in an adjoining room.

County authorities believe that Dr. Sedgewick strangled his wife and daughter and threw their bodies on to the lawn. All efforts to induce the physician to discuss the tragedy, however, have been unavailing. Letters found in the house, the officers said, indicated that he had been unbalanced for years. They were from a brother of the physician and the father of his wife and inquired as to the doctor's mental condition.

NEW AMERICAN LINER STEAMS INTO PORT

The first oceangoing passenger vessel built in American yards in twenty years, and the first to sail under the American flag for London, steamed up the North River to-day. The steamship is of 21,000 tons, christened the Panhandle State, and will be operated by the United States Mail Steamship Company. As the Panhandle State steamed up the North River, her pier 86, North River, whistles and

You Are Really Buying a Service

YOUR dealer will go a long way toward delivering Hosiery and Underwear satisfaction when he realizes that he is selling a service, and not a mere commodity.

You buy these goods for what they will do. What you get for what you pay is not merely a pair of hose, or a suit of underwear, but so many weeks or months of wear and comfort and satisfaction.

You are really buying a service. So that the institution back of the goods—the intent and purpose of the Maker—is vitally important to you.

What is his point of view? How does he regard his business? Is he merely creating merchandise, or a service? Is he thinking of his product as goods, or is he thinking of it in its relation to you?

Too many men have several kinds of Underwear on hand—a mixed lot, instead of all of a kind, and just the kind they like.

There should be somewhere the exact thing you want—the kind, the price, the wear, the comfort.

In short, somebody should be offering the service you require.

For thirty years the mills of the Allen A Company have been giving such a service to millions of men and women everywhere.

Their famous brands of Black Cat Hosiery and Cooper's-Bennington Spring Needle Underwear may now be identified by the additional mark "Allen A."

A personal earnest of uniform quality and dependable value—the Maker's pledge of satisfaction and service to you.

Your dealer can supply you with Allen A Black Cat Hosiery for men, women and children, in silk, lisle, wool, or cotton—full length, of lasting shape and free from imperfections.

With Allen A Cooper's-Bennington Spring Needle Underwear for men and boys, in all weights and for all seasons.

Mills that build service and stores that sell service will find an ever-increasing business, a permanent repeating custom, from more people all the time.

Dresses Win Winter Trade.

One of the important developments in the retail garment trade is the way dresses have supplanted suits in Fall and Winter buying. This season has shown more popularity than ever for dresses and dwindling sales on suits. The latter appear to find their greatest strength in Spring and Summer offerings. At present the wholesale suit business is about completed, but there is still activity in the dress branch of the industry. The demand for dresses has stimulated the business on coats.

Quite a little buying at auction has been done by local and nearby retailers. This is taken as evidence that the surplus stocks in the hands of these stores have been fairly well cleaned up and that further purchases are required to keep up assortments. The auction offerings taken by the retailers do not amount to large quantities, but they are frequent purchases. The strict merchandising policy against heavy orders is still being enforced, even when buyers bring up the best arguments why certain goods should now be bought in larger amounts.

Gray Goods Sales Active.

Business in gray goods here yesterday, while confined more or less to the standard constructions of printcloths and sheetings, was larger than has been the case for a long time. Most of the sheetings sold during the day were for delivery through this and next month, although some of the deliveries ran over into November. In the sales of these goods were 56-60, 4-yard cloths at 15 cents; 5-yard sheetings at 12¼ cents and 5.50s at 11¼ cents. In the day's business in printcloths were September-October sales of 38½-inch 60-48s at 12 cents. September lots of 39-inch 68-72s brought 16 cents, while spot buisiness in 38½-inch 64-60s was done at 15 cents. The latter construction also sold at half a cent a yard less for shipments running through the last quarter of the year.

The appearance of the fur-trimmed bathing suit has stirred the hope among furriers that a fad may be started which will help the industry. It is not many years since Summer furs were first introduced, and the prosperity of the trade, it is pointed out, practically dated from that time. Furs then became increasingly fashionable and the result was the heaviest business ever done. The bathing suit of fur or the fur-trimmed suit, it is thought, has some practical standing as a beach costume and may re-establish the popularity of furs.

Silks Slightly Improved.

While no great amount of silk buying has been done, nevertheless there is a distinct feeling in the trade that conditions are on the mend in that industry. Jobbers have been doing a little purchasing when it has been possible to get low prices, so as to average up their own costs. The cutting-up trade has not displayed much activity as yet, and the business from this source is decidedly limited. Some silk factors, however, have shown what could be done with new designs and weaves and it is thought that others will follow their example. Stabilized raw silk prices are regarded as a strengthening factor.

Veiling Range Is Wide.

It is a long time since buyers of veils and veilings have been offered as wide a range of merchandise to choose from as is the case this Fall. The showings include everything from bridal effects to sport veils with jaunty borders. Designs, colors and meshes are numerous. Yard goods are seen in all the newest colorings, and some of them combine the character of a face veil with that of a "made" one. They are woven of a heavy mesh that has something of the quality of silk, giving them body enough for use either as a draped or flowing veil. At the same time they are soft enough to be used as face veils. A wide range of scarfs for evening wear is also shown, in which sequins, spangles, iridescent beads and bugle embroidery play important parts as trimmings. Black, white and sapphire are held to be the leading shades.

While trading in the Yokohama raw silk market has been rather quiet in the last week, pending the completion of the plan for Government financial aid, there has been a general strengthening of tone to prices in the primary centres. Canton reports an increasing demand from European buyers, but sellers, expecting higher prices, are acting cautiously. Cables received from that market by H. L. Gwalter & Co. say that new style filatures continue to be quoted there considerably above the figures asked locally. Shanghai advices indicate a quiet but firm market, with the best seam filatures quoted nominally around $9 a pound. American buying is still missing at Milan, but increased European trading is making prices firmer there. The local market is more active and is advancing under the influence of bullish reports from primary centres.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Yesterday's session of the stock market came to an abrupt and dramatic end at noon, when William H. Remick, President of the Stock Exchange, took matters into his own hands almost before the noise of the explosion in Wall Street had ended and ordered business suspended. Very shortly thereafter the Governors of the Exchange affirmed Mr. Remick's action and voted to keep the institution closed for the remainder of the day, with deliveries of stocks sold during the two hours of the forenoon deferred until Monday. The Exchange will reopen this morning at the usual time.

Before the explosion occurred the market had been moving along well. Prices were rising and there was a good volume of business. There appeared to be more or less general interest in the list and the traders seemed to be receiving some fairly good support from the commission houses in the advance. The rails were not especially active, but those of them which were being dealt in were generally up fractionally.

In the industrial department there was a demand for the oils, some of the sugar stocks, the equipments and a few of the steel issues. Just before the closing there were some slight reactions from the earlier high prices, but these were not sufficient, except in a very few cases, to effect net losses from the day before.

The strength, such as it was, was largely in response to the improved tone of the money market. On Wednesday time funds came down quotably and yesterday there were further recessions. Wall Street, which had been waiting for such a development, appeared to be well pleased with the realization, and the disposition to buy stocks was more marked than on any day in some time, with the exception of Tuesday, when the Maine election news stimulated business.

Foreign exchange, which also closed for the day at noon, was further improved. Sterling advanced about 1½ cents in the pound to $3.49¼ for demand bills and French francs were up 4½ points to 6.56. The other Continentals also were firm, with a rising tendency when business was suspended.

Announcement by the Federal Reserve Banks of the impending importation of some $111,000,000 gold now held for the account of the Federal Reserve Banks by the Bank of England attracted some interest, but it may be stated that this operation will not affect in the slightest the reserve position of the Federal banks, for the gold, ever since its acquisition in the Fall of 1919, has been counted as reserve, despite the fact that it has not been actually in the United States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Secretary Houston today announced that the total amount of subscriptions allotted for the two issues of Treasury certificates of indebtedness dated Sept. 15, 1920, was $448,596,000. Subscriptions for the two series closed on Sept. 15, the date of issue, and the amount offered was $490,000,000, or thereabouts. HUNGARY HAS BIG DEFICIT.

Ten-Billion-Kroner Debt to be Met by Levy and Loan.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 14.—Hungary's budget, which was submitted to the National Assembly here today by M. Laranyi, Minister of Finance, shows a deficit of 10,000,000,000 kroner. Expenditures have been 20,000,000,000 and revenues have amounted to 10,000,000,000, according to the Minister's report. The deficit will be met by a levy on capital and a foreign loan. Greater economy is said by the Minister to be imperative. The whole Hungarian budget prior to the war never exceeded 2,000,000,000 kroner.

"There is no cause for despair," said M. Laranyi in discussing the budget, "as all European countries are suffering from the same conditions that prevail here."

DEFENDS RATE RISE TO CONTROL CREDIT

Gov. Harding Says Federal Reserve Thereby Checked Speculation and Financed Crops.

PROFITS GO TO GOVERNMENT

Policy Was, He Asserts, Not to Reduce Amount, but to Divert It to People's Needs.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—Governor W. P. G. Harding of the Federal Reserve Board, speaking before the Chamber of Commerce here this evening, defended the board's efforts to deflate credit, and said that it had on the one hand checked speculation and on the other made possible the financing of the crop movement.

"During the last six months of the year 1919," said Mr. Harding, "tendencies toward unrestrained extravagance and abuse of credit were manifest all over the country. It became evident that the rediscount facilities of the Federal Reserve Banks were being used too freely, and that unless corrective measures were applied the situation would become exceedingly dangerous.

"The Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve Banks, while recognizing the necessity of holding these dangerous tendencies in check by means of a reasonable and effective control of credit in order that its flow might be once more regulated and related to the economic welfare of the country and the needs of its producing industries, were reluctant to take any precipitate action. It was realized that productive industries are profoundly affected by credit conditions, that modern business is done on credit and that the mood and temper of the business community are deeply affected by the state of credit and may be easily disturbed by ill-considered or hasty action.

"The predominant idea was not necessarily to reduce the loan accounts of the banks of the country, but to bring about such a readjustment in them as would ultimately lead to a restoration of a proper balance between the volume of credit and the volume of concrete things which credit helps to produce and which are the normal basis of credit. The board believes that this equilibrium can be restored only by speeding up the processes of production, by the orderly distribution of goods, by the avoidance of excessive consumption and by the increased accumulation of savings.

Forced to Increase Rates.

"On several occasions, before changes were made in the discount rates of the Federal Reserve Banks, the Federal Reserve Board brought these matters to the attention of the public with a view of testing thoroughly the theory that the credit situation could be controlled without advancing the discount rates of the Federal Reserve Banks. But because of the exhaustion of capital throughout the world and of the universal demand for credit, it soon developed that this was impossible. Rates were advanced slightly during November, 1919, and again on Jan. 23, 1920, approximately to their present level. The rates established, however, were still considerably lower than current market rates.

"It became evident early in the Spring that no reduction in the total volume of loans was taking place, and that unless a more discriminating judgment was used by member banks in granting accommodations the country would be confronted with a real crisis during the crop-moving period, into which we have now entered.

"At a conference held last May between members of the Federal Reserve Board, members of the Federal Advisory Council and the Class 'A,' or banker, Directors of the Federal Reserve Banks there was an exhaustive discussion of the banking and financial situation. In presenting to the conference an outline of the board's views I pointed out that since June 30, 1914, there had been an expansion of banking credit in the United States, properly attributable to the war, of $11,000,000,000, and that during the same period there had been an increase in the volume of money in actual circulation of about $1,900,000,000.

"When it is considered that our Government during a period of three years floated $26,000,000,000 of securities to meet war requirements, the credit expansion which had taken place could not be regarded as excessive or alarming when viewed from the standpoint of war necessity. Attention was called, however, to the continued expansion which had taken place since the flotation of the Victory Loan in May, 1919, in the face of a decreased production of essentials.

"In order that you may understand the board's viewpoint of some of our major problems last May, I shall quote literally from the statement presented to the conference:

"'It is this tendency of production to decline, particularly in some essential lines, which constitutes a very unsatisfactory element in the present outlook. It is evident that the country cannot continue to advance prices and wages, to curtail production, to expand credits and to attempt to enrich itself by nonproductive operations and transactions without fostering discontent and radicalism, and that such a course, if persisted in, will eventually bring on a real crisis.

Wanted Free Flow of Goods.

"'It is true that under existing conditions the volume of credit required in any transaction is much greater than was the case in pre-war times, but it is also true that the resources of the member and non-member banks would be ample to take care of the essential business of the country and to a large extent of non-essentials as well if there were a freer flow of goods and credit. If 'frozen loans' were liquefied, and if commodities which are held back either for speculative purposes or because of lack of transportation facilities should go to the markets, and if large stocks of merchandise should be reduced, the resultant release of credit would have a most beneficial effect upon the general situation. In the meantime everything must be done to expedite the release of these credits and to restrict non-essential credits in future.'

"The policies outlined by the board have, generally speaking, met with the approval of solid banking and business sentiment, and there has been since last Spring a marked improvement in the credit situation. This is due to the better character and greater liquidity of bank credits rather than to any actual decrease in the volume of credit.

"It is known that as a direct result of the discount policy of the Federal Reserve Banks there has been a very large decrease in the amount of speculative and non-essential loans, and it is believed that the increase in the loan account of these reporting member banks has been due largely to a response to legitimate agricultural, commercial and industrial requirements.

"The rapid expansion in loans which is just now taking place is due, undoubtedly, to crop moving requirements. Seven Federal Reserve Banks are now rediscounting paper with three other Federal Reserve Banks, and at the close of business on Sept. 9, 1920, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York had rediscounted with other Federal Reserve Banks bills receivable amounting to $35,250,000. The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond had rediscounted $20,000,000; Atlanta, $30,200,000; St. Louis, $27,422,000; Minneapolis, $21,293,000; Kansas City, $18,902,000, and Dallas, $37,618,000, making a total of rediscount transactions of $190,685,000. Of this amount the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston advanced $76,195,000; the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, $4,000,000, and the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, $110,490,000.

"With the exception of New York all of the borrowing Federal Reserve Banks are located in agricultural sections. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York is the greatest single supporter of the acceptance market and it is known that member banks in New York City are lending heavily just now to country banks in the farming sections. Consequently it is not overstating the case to say that all of the Federal Reserve Bank interbank borrowing is for crop moving purposes."

"The figures should convince any one that there has been no restriction of credit for legitimate business, but, on the other hand, an unusually large expansion of credit. Exception is frequently taken, however, to the discount rates now prevailing at the Federal Reserve Banks. There has been some criticism of the Federal Reserve Banks' percentage of profits as related to their paid-in capital.

"As is the case with other banking institutions, the earnings of the Federal Reserve Banks are derived principally from interest on their loans and investments. Their earnings vary according to the volume of loans and with the rate of discount. The return from $3,000,000,000 of invested assets at 6 per cent. is exactly the same as that from $4,500,000,000 of loans at 4 per cent. While the Federal Reserve Banks were not organized for the purpose of making money, their present high rate of earning is unavoidable, and would not be reduced by a reduction in the discount rate, which would merely attract a larger volume of rediscounts and involve a reduction in reserve already nearly at the legal minimum.

"The law allows Federal Reserve Banks to retain for distribution annually to their stockholding member banks, out of their net earnings, only an amount equal to 6 per cent. of their paid-in capital stock. The remainder of their net earnings goes to the Government, either indirectly in the shape of additions to surplus or directly as a franchise tax.

"Our money market at present is distinctly a lenders' and not a borrowers' market, and banks all over the country are having applications for loans which they cannot make and many of which they would not care to make even during a period of extreme ease in the money market. However, I do not think it altogether fair for any bank to say to an applicant that it cannot make a loan because the Federal Reserve Board or the Federal Reserve Bank will not permit it to do so. The Federal Reserve authorities have no jurisdiction whatever over the loans which the Directors and officers of a member or non-member bank may deem it expedient to make or to decline.

"The Federal Reserve System is still confronted with conditions more or less abnormal, but we have passed through the period of exhilaration or intoxication which characterized American business activities several months ago, and notwithstanding the gloomy predictions which were frequently made at that time the transition to a more normal basis is proceeding quietly and without alarming features.

Trading on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange will begin today as usual at 10 o'clock in the morning following the suspension yesterday as the result of the explosion in Wall Street.

A general advance in stock prices was in progress on the Stock Exchange yesterday before trading was suspended when the explosion occurred. Easier time money reports and call money at 7 per cent. met with a more widespread approval than had been expected and trading was more active in some issues than for several days. The oil shares were the leaders as a group right after the opening, and some of the railroad shares were active and moved into higher ground. Shortly before midday there was evidence of profit-taking in the oils and there were some slight reactions due to this, but in the main the trend was upward until the crash of the explosion and falling glass on the trading floor ended business for the day.

At the opening there was a display of underlying strength in the Denver & Rio Grande shares following publication of denials that the Western courts had ordered the properties sold at auction Sept. 27. This did not carry far, however, and before the emergency closing a few minutes after noon both the common and the preferred had eased off fractionally. The volume of business was almost as heavy as it had been in the corresponding period of the preceding day, and this was attributable in part to selling orders from out of town and from quarters which had not heard the denials which were issued late on Wednesday afternoon.

One of the features of trading on the big board was a gain of more than a point in American Writing Paper preferred. The turnover was not heavy and the sensitive quality of the stock was obvious. American Writing Paper earnings are said to be running at a favorable rate, and the gain was attributed to this even though the exchange of shares was comparatively small.

The Speculators and Reading.

Reading was again the centre of speculative enthusiasm yesterday. The general belief that there will be an official announcement within a short time regarding the plan for the segregation of the properties and the distribution of large surpluses has made the stock attractive to the speculative element. The stock touched a high for the day at 95, from which there was a fractional reaction, the trend being slightly downward when the Wall Street explosion let go. There was a large crowd of brokers and floor messengers around the Reading post in the centre of the trading floor and these milled uncertainly about immediately following the crash of the explosion and falling glass until there was a suggestion that the dome of the Exchange might collapse. The Reading post is directly under the dome and a few second after the suggestion the post and its vicinity was deserted, every one running to the sides of the room and the space underneath both galleries where the telephone booths are located.

Marine Common a Surprise.

An advance of 2 points in the common shares of the International Mercantile Marine Company was somewhat of a surprise yesterday morning in view of the unfavorable reports which have recently been current regarding the trend of ocean freight rates to lower levels. This stock, in company with the preferred shares, has been in times past almost a plaything for professional traders, and yesterday's bulge, in spite of unfavorable shopping news, was attributed in conservative quarters to that source. The preferred shares were comparatively quiet, although they registered a fractional advance at the close.

Mexican Petroleum Strong.

Mexican Petroleum was again in heavy demand at rising prices, the closing quotation of 177¼ being the high for the day. Reports continue to come forth that some important developments with relation to this company are in prospect, and this has led to extensive speculation in the shares. Just what it is that is expected in Mexican Petroleum the rumor mart does not disclose. A short time ago it was held that the dividend on the shares would be increased. This has come to pass, but other news of importance is now hinted. Both Mexican Petroleum and Pan American Peroleum were quoted ex-dividend yesterday, but as the abrupt closing of the Stock Exchange ended the trading session three hours earlier than normal the two companies notified the Stock Exchange that the closing time for the transfer books, on dividends payable Oct. 11, had been extended to the close of business Monday, Sept. 20. The early closing of the Exchange prevented brokers from depositing certificates for transfer before the termination of business yesterday.

Copper Market Improves.

The demand for copper is steadily improving. It is reported now that heavy purchases of the metal are being made by certain of the European countries, although shipment may not be made for some time. Germany is reported to be one of the purchasers, the arrangements having been made through England. A goodly portion of the copper for Europe will probably be carried on margin by bankers here, the postponement in actual delivery being in the hope that the exchange situation will have improved by the time the metal is urgently needed.

Baldwin Active.

Baldwin Locomotive came back into the speculative limelight with an advance of more than two points, the volume of trading being fairly large. This issue has for a long time been a target for the bears, and it is believed that an extensive short interest exists. It was undoubtedly covering which was responsible for yesterday's advance. The belief still persists that eventually there is to be a melon-cutting in Baldwin, but the time for this does not seem to be any nearer than when the subject was one of the chief topics of stock market conversation more than a year ago.

An idea of how wide has been the distribution of the French Loan can be gleaned from comparative figures showing the distribution of some important rail and steel issues. The French loan was $100,000,000. The common and preferred capitalization of the United States Steel Corporation is $870,000,000 and the capital of the Pennsylvania Railroad $500,000,000. There were 39,000 subscribers to the French Loan, while the Steel Corporation stock is distributed among 175,000 individuals and the Pennsylvania Railroad to 127,000. If the stock of the two companies were as widely distributed as the French Loan, taking into consideration the difference in volume of the issues, the Steel Corporation would have to have 339,300 stockholders and the Pennsylvania Railroad 175,000.

Reports are beginning to find circulation that another stock dividend distribution will be made by Crucible Steel before the end of the year. Already the company has distributed substantial stock dividends, but there is a balance of stock in the treasury which permits of another melon-cutting. The increase in capital was undertaken with the express idea of stock dividends when the Directors should see fit to pursue such a course. There is, however, no official indication from Crucible as to whether another dividend is to be in order shortly.

New Haven and Pere Marquette Active.

New Haven and Pere Marquette were two of the active railroad issues, the former making a net gain on increased business of a point and the latter on a good turnover advancing more than 1 point. In both instances last prices were the highs for the day, the movement being stopped only when the ringing of the gong on the trading floor suspended trading. There was also evidence of increasing interest in Southern and Union Pacific, both of which closed at their top prices for the day.

Changes in the Business World have a definite and important bearing on investment holdings. It is our thought that this is the time for investors to look over their list of securities and consult with their investment bankers as to advantageous exchanges or purchases.

We shall be glad to submit definite investment suggestions for the consideration of any investor. Write for Circular G-6.

EXCHANGE DECLINE DEPRESSES BERLIN

EXPECTS NO ALLIED RELIEF

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—Germany is again suffering from a severe fit of depression. The mark has fallen heavily again today, being quoted at 210½ to the pound sterling. That means a depreciation of 40 per cent. in the last six weeks.

I find banking circles not unanimous as to the cause of the heavy decline. Some experts believe that the talk of a capital nevy, regarding which the Government has given no signs of having made up its rather slow-working mind, has told on the confidence of foreign countries, which look on the possibility of such a levy as a sign that hope is being abandoned of relieving the financial situation by normal means.

Another authority whom I consulted points to the chaotic state of German finances, and declared that that, together with the tremendous continuous issue of banknotes, amounting last week to 1,250,000,000 marks, is bound to tell adversely on marks.

A third reason given is "the flight from the mark," as the papers call it—the loss of confidence which drives people to purchase foreign paper.

All these causes doubtless play their part. The Boerse this afternoon was exceedingly depressed by them. The evening papers gave the result of the Franco-Italian conference at Aix-les-Bains. And prices began to totter still more.

It will be remembered that the mark achieved a sustained improvement early in the year, when it was thought here that there was a prospect of negotiations regarding Germany's indemnity and of a big international loan. These high hopes have not materialized, and it is the general belief that Aix-les-Bains and the postponement of the Geneva conference will consign such things to the Greek kalends.

Most papers agree this evening that the official statement regarding the Aix conference gives no encouragement to Germany to hope that she can carry her burdens.

I learn that the Reichsbank is faced with a serious problem. A very large edition of fifty-mark notes is being called in on Sept. 18, and it is certain vast numbers of such notes have been forged. If the bank accepts them it will lose very heavily, while if it does not it will bring about the collapse of many businesses, so great is the amount involved, and even a panic may result.

Meanwhile the prices of the necessaries of life go on increasing steadily. There is double the amount of unemployment now there was in the earlier part of the year, and 50 per cent. of the present unemployment is in Berlin, which is a centre always easily susceptible of trouble. Unemployed demonstrations are being held again here and in the country, and food distribution seems to be as faulty as ever.

Throughout the whole country there is very noticeable depression.

Declares Its First Dividend.

The United States Distributing Corporation has declared an initial dividend of $1 a share on its common stock, payable Oct. 15 to stock of record Oct. 1. The corporation was organized a year ago. One of its subsidiaries, the Tongue River Trading Company of Sheridan, Wyo., recently paid an initial dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. yearly.

LANSING AND POLK ENTER CABLE CASE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—A real struggle for the cables of the world at the Communications Conference to be held here was indicated today when it was learned that the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company had engaged the firm of Lansing & Woolsey and Frank L. Polk to represent it, while the Western Union Company has retained William G. McAdoo as its representative. The Postal's representatives have all been connected, until recently, with the State Department and are thoroughly familiar with the cable situation and the struggle between Great Britain, aided by Japan, and the rest of the world for control of the cable communications of the world.

Protests have been received from Chambers of Commerce in various parts of the country, headed by the Chamber of Commerce of New York, and from several American business men against the control of the cables in the Pacific by the Japanese and in the Atlantic, especially to the east coast of South America, by the British. These protests are filed with the State Department and form a part of the case that will be presented by the United States to the Communications Conference.

GUFFEY SEES COLBY ON OIL.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Joseph F. Gufffey of Pennsylvania, who recently acquired large oil properties in Mexico, was in conference with Secretary of State Colby today. Mr. Guffey was invited to the department by Mr. Colby, although he had come to Washington to see the Secretary before he received the invitation.

Mr. Guffey is understood to have discussed with Mr. Colby the entire subject of Mexican oil titles, concerning which there is confusion owing to the great number of defects in titles.

ILLINOIS SOUTHERN SOLD.

Road Goes to Chicago Clearing House for $725,000.

SALEM, Ill., Sept. 15.—The Illinois Southern Railroad, which was declared insolvent and placed in the hands of a receiver in September, 1918, was sold for $725,000 to the Chicago Clearing House, one of the creditors, at public auction today.

The sale was authorized in a decree issued July 16 last by Judge Faris in the United States District Court, St. Louis, where the general offices of the company are located.

Japan to Aid Silk Industry.

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—The Government has decided to come to the relief of the silk industry. It will loan the silk syndicate 50,000,000 yen, with an additional 15,000,000 yen through the Bank of Japan. The object is to keep up the price of raw silk and control exports.

$111,458,044 IN GOLD DUE FROM LONDON

COMING TO RESERVE BANKS

Will Make No Change in Reserve Position, as It Already Is Credited.

Gold to the amount of $111,458,044, now held at the Bank of England, London, for the account of twelve Federal Reserve Banks, is to be brought to this country within a short time, according to a statement issued by the New York Federal Reserve Bank yesterday. Of this amount, $40,905,694 belongs to the New York bank and the remainder, $70,552,350, is the property of the other Reserve Banks in the system.

This gold is the balance left from the $173,348,876 which the United States Grain Corporation received from Germany in payment for foodstuffs exported into Germany in the Spring and Summer of last year. In August, 1919, the gold was sold to the Federal Reserve Banks and was shipped from the Continent to London, where it was deposited with the Bank of England as London agent for the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Since its deposit in London $61,890,832 has been sold to bankers who desired to ship gold out of the United States and who were willing to accept delivery of the metal in London rather than entail the expense and inconvenience of taking it direct from this country. In recent months such sales have practically ceased, according to officials of the Reserve Bank, and it has now been decided to bring the remainder to New York. Whether the portion belonging to the other Reserve Banks will be transferred to their vaults or will be held here for their account was not stated yesterday.

The arrival of this gold will have no effect whatever upon the reserve positions of the Reserve Banks. In explaining this point, a statement was given out by the local Reserve Bank which said, in part:

"Inasmuch as this gold has been continuously carried as reserve by the Federal Reserve Banks since its arrival at the Bank of England shipment of the gold to this country will have no effect whatever upon the reserve position of the Federal Reserve Banks."

A Landmark of Madison Square

Have you ever thought what it means to be a landmark in the ever changing, progressive City of New York? If we were not stable, if we were not successful in meeting the banking needs of the business men of the District, if our service was not efficient, we would not be, we could not have become, the landmark we are today.

Foreign Securities

GOVERNMENT, Municipal and Industrial bonds, selling in foreign markets at or around par, can be bought from us at prices in some cases approximating 1-10th of their market value abroad, because of the drastic decline in the exchange value of the currencies of these countries.

BAR UNION MEDDLING IN CONTRACT MINES

47 COMPANIES ASK ACTION

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 16.—A temporary injunction restraining labor union men from attempting to persuade non-union coal miners to join unions in violation of employment contracts was granted today by Judges Ritz, Poffenbarger and Miller of the Supreme Court of Appeals.

Application for the injunction was made Monday by the Algonquin Coal Company and forty-six other companies of the Pocahontas Coal Operators' Association of Mercer County and by the Algoma Coal Company of McDowell County. These companies employ 12,600 men, 9,300 of whom, the companies say, are employed on a non-union contract. The mines of the concerns produce 25,000,000 tons of coal a year.

Applications for such an injunction had been made to the Judges of the Circuit Court of Mercer and McDowell Counties, but were refused by Judge I. C. Herndon on Sept. 11. Then Judge Joseph M. Sanders and Attorneys Greever, Gillespie and Devine appeared before the Supreme Court of Appeals in behalf of the coal companies with the application for an injunction.

The writ enjoins John L. Lewis and other national officers of the United Mine Workers and President C. F. Keeney and other officers of District No. 17, United Mine Workers, from inducing miners of the complaining companies from breaking their contracts of employment by means of threats, intimidation, violent or abusive language or persuasion, and also from using the same means to induce them to join the United Mine Workers in violation of their contract. The order restrains union men from going on the property of the coal companies for the purpose of inducing miners to break contracts of employment.

The coal companies based their demand for an injunction on the decision of the United States Supreme Court in 1917, in the case of the Hitchman Coal Company against J. L. Mitchell and others. They also cited the contract clause of the Federal Constitution.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 16.—"That is more government by injunction,' said William Green, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, commenting today on the issuance of a temporary injunction by three Judges of the West Virginia Supreme Court forbidding attempts to organize non-union mines in that State.

REPLIES TO CRITICS OF RESERVE BOARD

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 16.—The buying public has "rebelled against ever mounting prices and has forced a period of readjustment of values," Vice Governor Platt of the Federal Reserve Board declared today in a speech here before the annual convention of the West Virginia Bankers' Association. Analyses of the country's business condition with respect to the price situation disclose a marked lessening of demand, he said, adding that the refusal to buy was traceable directly to public sentiment against high prices.

Mr. Platt's speech, the first since his appointment, was designed as a reply to critics who had charged that the Board's credit restriction and rediscount policies were responsible for the closing or part time operation of scores of manufacturing establishments. Such charges, he said, were without merit as the reasons for the closing of many factories were found to be "deeper-seated and more widespread."

Discussing the drop in prices of several consumable commodities, Mr. Platt said the courses followed by the markets indicated a restoration of the old law of supply and demand, but he would not forecast the extent to which price recessions would go. A lower range of prices would materially "ease up the credit situation," Mr. Platt declared, expressing the fear that it also would "increase grumbling and criticism."

The speaker explained the Board sought to conserve credit for productive and crop moving purposes and did not desire "to open the flood gates of credit for speculation for such would absorb credit which might be employed in useful purposes."

GIRLS WEAR PAPER RIBBONS.

Economy Inspires Hoboken Pupils to Drop Silk Hair Decorations.

The girl pupils in the high and grammar schools of Hoboken appeared in their classrooms last Tuesday with ribbon decorations in their hair. President James Laverty of the Board of Education spoke to them on the high cost of living and the prices that were paid for the ribbons. The Principals of the schools also spoke to them along the same lines.

The girls appeared at school yesterday with ribbons, but they were made of paper and not of cloth. Hoboken seems to be the first city where girl pupils have shown this spirit of economy.

PERU, from the days of the Incas, has always been known to the world as a country of great mineral wealth. Although copper, silver, vanadium and gold are mined in large quantities, they represent only a small part of the latent resources of the country.

A rich soil, combined with a diversity of climates, produces such varied products as sugar, wheat, coffee, cotton, rubber and tobacco. A great increase has taken place in the Peruvian live-stock industry as instanced by llama raising. Peru is the only country where llamas are raised, and of their wool alone, over 200,000 tons are produced annually.

Our affiliate, the Banco Mercantil Americano del Peru, is thoroughly acquainted with conditions in this country, both as a field for productive undertakings and as a market for American goods. The facilities and experience of our affiliate are available to those interested.

A booklet describing our facilities will be sent on request.

COTTON RECOVERS IN FIRST TWO HOURS

PRICES UP 25 TO 40 POINTS

There was a substantial recovery in the cotton market yesterday morning, with prices advancing 28 to 40 points in the first two hours, after a rather irregular opening in which the near months scored small gains while the far months showed heaviness and losses of 10 to 13 points. The action of the market was probably nothing more than a readjustment of the technical position, which had been strengthened by the break in the last hour of Wednesday, during which a good many short sales were made. The foreign news also helped put up the list, but the weather reports, again being highly favorable in most sections, were bearish.

Advices from abroad indicated less probability of the threatened strike of coal miners being realized and the Liverpool market was somewhat better than due. Trade reports from abroad were not especially encouraging, but domestic trade advices were better than in several days.

When the explosion occurred in Wall Street, at noon, trading almost came to a stop. Many on the Cotton Exchange were anxious to have business formally suspended, but this was not done and the Exchange did not close until the usual time. However, business in the afternoon was on an exceedingly small scale and attendance on the trading floor was limited to only a few ring operators and a handfull of trade representatives.

Nixon Orders Manhattan & Queens to Resume.

At the direction of Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon, Acting Commissioner Alfred M. Barrett at a hearing yesterday afternoon on the application of the Manhattan & Queens Traction Corporation for permission to increase its fare from 5 cents to 13 cents, directed the receivers for the company to resume immediately operation of the company's trolley line, extending from Second Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, Manhattan, across the Queensboro Bridge to Jamaica in Queens, which has now been suspended for more than four weeks. The company alleged as a reason for the suspension that the revenue received from the 5-cent fare was insufficient to meet actual operating expenses.

Watson B. Robinson of Frueauff, Robinson & Sloane, attorneys for the receivers, when asked whether the company would comply with the commission's direction, replied that he could not at the moment make a positive and definite reply. The hearing was adjourned until Wednesday next.

DR. JOWETT MAKES APPEAL.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A revival of the primal motives which actuated and inspired the Mayflower voyagers was prescribed by the Rev. Dr. John H. Jowett, minister of Westminster Chapel, as a solution for the world's present day problem in an address at the Guild Hall this morning.

He was addressing a meeting arranged by the Congregational Union of England and Wales as part of the day's program, marking the culmination of the tercentenary celebrations held in England in connection with the Pilgrim fathers.

"The world today," said Dr. Jowett, "approaches civic problems with moral and spiritual nakedness, content with certain expedients and unstable compromises. The Pilgrims defined their objectives as, first, for the glory of God; second, the advancement of humanity, and, third, for King and country. It is because we today are neglecting the first of these that the other two are becoming sluggish and faint."

Franco-Spanish Move in Morocco.

MADRID, Sept. 15.—French and Spanish troops will co-operate in operations against Moroccan tribesmen in the zone lying between the Spanish and French territories there, it is announced here. These operations will begin tomorrow, and will be directed toward the occupation of Wazan, the capital of the Moroccan Shereefs. Ten thousand French troops, equipped with tanks and airplanes, have been concentrated for the advance.

Tisza Assassins Sentenced to Death.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 15.—Stephen Bodo and M. Sztenykowski have been convicted by a court-martial of the assassination of Count Stephen Tisza, who was shot and killed Nov. 1, 1918, and have been sentenced to be hanged. M. Huettner has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment for his share in the crime and Eugene Jagoj and Wilhelm Prienze, two other men accused, have been sent to jail for three months.

Protest for Professor Unamuno.

MADRID, Sept. 15.—Protest against proposals by the State Attorney that Professor Unamuno, now on trial at Valencia for lèse majesté, be sentenced to prison for twenty-four years has been made by the Spanish League for the Defense of the Rights of Man. Professor Unamuno was brought to trial because of three articles criticising the monarchy.

Spanish Actors Win Strike.

MADRID, Sept. 15.—Actors and theatrical employes seem to have won a complete victory in their controversy with managers of theatres in this city. At a meeting attended by authors, actors and managers an agreement was reached by which the managers will recognize the unions and concede extra payment for double performances on Sundays and festivals.

QUESTIONS TOKIO CHARGE.

Japanese Representative Asks About California Negotiations.

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—Subsequent to the recent visit of a committee of the opposition to Viscount Uchida, the Foreign Minister, to inquire with regard to the questions at issue with America, Representative Shimidzu, a member of the committee, called upon Edward Bell, the American Chargé d'Affaires, to seek further information regarding the California question. Mr. Bell told Representative Shimidzu that the negotiations on this question were proceeding in Washington and not in Tokio, and that Viscount Uchida probably was better informed as to the developments than was the Chargé.

M. Shimidzu, Mr. Bell continued, could rest assured that the negotiations were being conducted in an atmosphere of good will and amity. He said, however, that he could not venture any prohpecy as to the outcome of the negotiations.

Later M. Shimidzu made a report on his visit at a meeting of the political affairs committee of the Kensei-kai Party. It is understood the committee will hold further discussions over the California question and the Jones shipping law.

SPANISH LINER LAUNCHED.

BILBAO, Spain, Sept. 15.—Great throngs witnessed the launching today of the transatlantic liner Alfonso XII., the first steamer of over 14,000 tons ever built in Spain. King Alfonso saw the giant ship slide down the ways and congratulated the builders on the completion of their work. He later addressed the crowd in a happy vein, saying:

"This ship is like the Spanish nation. She paused just before sliding down to the water, and the country hesitates before taking a plunge toward her destiny. The plunge once taken, however, she goes straight onward toward success. This ship will carry the name of Spain to all parts of the earth. She was built entirely of Spanish materials and bears the name of a Spanish King, signifying the close union of the monarch and nation."

Telling of the shipment of 4,500 tons of coal from Vancouver, B. C., to Sweden, an agent for W. R. Grace & Co. says that so far as shipping records are available this is found to be the record distance for shipment of a cargo of coal. As agents for the Johnson Steamship Line, the company arranged for the Swedish motor ship, the Pacific, to take on this cargo.

In taking this shipment to "England's back door," the motor ship travels down the Pacific coast, through the Panama Canal, across the Atlantic and through the North Sea, more than 10,000 miles. Agents of the company said that this record shipment was due to the coal shortage in England, where most of Sweden's coal was obtained in the past. Hitherto the record haul of coal was from England to Peru, a distance of about 9,000 miles around Cape Horn or about 5,000 through the Panama Canal.

WHEAT MARKET DECLINES.

Lack of Aggressive Buying Responsible for Decrease.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Lack of any aggressive buying today led to material downturns in the value of wheat. Prices closed heavy, 2⅛ to 3¾ cents lower, with December $2.37¾ to $2.38 and March $2.32½. Wheat prices began to sag as soon as the market opened, and at no time did they show much power to rally. Moderate offerings proved to be more than sufficient to satisfy the current demand.

Prevalence of bearish sentiment was due more or less to word that supplies in Great Britain and on passage for that country were ample to fill all requirements until January, 1921, and that European continental countries were making great efforts to economize in the use of wheat. Some export business, however, was said to have resulted from today's decline in prices here. Domestic milling demand was also asserted to have been the best so far this season.

MINE LEADERS CALL MEN BACK TO WORK

HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 16.—Declaring that the present situation in the anthracite coal region is the result of the "unwise action of a few unthinking men," the Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers of the Hard Coal Fields issued tonight a proclamation advising and recommending that "all loyal union men return to their work and vindicate the faithfulness to contracts and the justice of our cause."

Union officials of the three anthracite districts are empowered by the committee to call a special tri-district convention "to take such action as may be necessary" if the mine operators attempt to discriminate against any of the "vacation" strikers.

As soon as work is resumed throughout the hard coal region the Policy Committee will proceed to Washington and attempt to obtain a reopening of the wage negotiations and the award of the Presidential Coal Commission.

Referring to the idleness of the mines due to the miners' "vacation," the proclamation asserted that it had served "a two-fold purpose in that it has given the mine workers a well-earned vacation and at the same time made manifest their displeasure at the scant measure of justice meted out in the award of the commission."

The decision of the committee came tonight after four days of almost continuous sessions at the local mine workers' headquarters. The proclamation was unanimously signed by all the members of the Policy Committee, which was authorized to adopt a program that would end the "vacation" strike.

President Thomas Kennedy of District 7, Chairman of the committee, announced that officials of the various districts will immediately communicate the proclamation to their local unions. A number of mass meetings were immediately scheduled throughout the region for tonight.

"I believe that some of the men will be back to work tomorrow," he said, "and practically all mines will be operating at least on Monday."

Act Without Promises.

Chairman Kennedy announced that the committee had acted without waiting for a reply from Secretary of Labor Wilson to their inquiry as to the attitude of the Department of Labor should mine operators attempt to discriminate against pumpmen, enginemen, firemen and monthly men who went on vacation in District 9 in sympathy with the mine workers.

He said he did not know whether the telegram had reached the Secretary of Labor, who had been away from his office in Washington.

"During the past four years of the last contract the officers of the mine workers were on two occasions told at Washington that further increases in wages were impossible, yet the very increases thus denied were shortly thereafter written into contracts. Our demands today are no less meritorious. Upon the officers of the union now devolves the task of securing for our people a fuller measure of justice—a task made the more burdensime by the precipitate action of those men who acted with haste and not with wisdom. To this task of obtaining a rectification of the mistakes of the commission every effort of our officers will be dedicated, and in its accomplishment we ask the loyal co-operation of every mine worker."

All operators in the Hazelton district reported tonight that they were ready to resume operations tomorrow providing sufficient men returned to work.

Many Resume Work At Scranton.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 16.—Thousands of mine workers in the Scranton district who have been "vacation" for some days streamed back to their working places at a number of collieries in this part of the district today.

Coal companies' officials reported that operations have been resumed at the Storrs Colliery of the L. L. & W. Coal Company; the Pine Brook, Johnson and Mount Pleasant collieries of the Scranton Coal Company; the Von Storch colliery of the Von Storch Coal Company; the Manville colliery of the Hudson Coal Company; the No. 1 and No. 5 collieries of the Pennsylvania Coal Company.

Throughout the Scranton district numerous locals met last night and voted to resume work, placing their dependence for the continuation of the fight to win more substantial advances in wages to officers of the organization. As a result of the action taken by these locals there came the rush back to work this morning of "vacationists."

Name Director for Rehabilitation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Industrial rehabilitation work, provision for which was made in a recent act of Congress, will be under the direction of Lewis R. Carris, former Assistant Commissioner of Education in New Jersey. Appointment of Mr. Carris as Assistant Director was announced by the Federal Board for Vocational Education. He will have supervisory control of the work as it is carried on by State boards for vocational education and has been employed by the Federal board since 1917.

Nicholson Heads Army-Navy Club.

Brigadier General William J. Nicholson, former commander of the 157th Infantry Brigade, 79th Division, was elected President of the Army and Navy Club of America here last night. He succeeds Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, who resigned because of his removal to Washington. Admiral Fiske was unanimously made an honorary President for life.

248 City Teachers Become Brides.

Dr. Ettinger, City Superintendent of Schools, has reported to the Board of Education that during the summer 248 young women teachers married, and that their new names should be substituted for their former ones on the pay rolls. There were 101 brides among the Brooklyn teachers; 86 in Manhattan, 39 in the Bronx, 18 in Queens and 4 in Richmond.

ARMORY CHARGES DROPPED.

Prosecutor Says There Is No Legal Case Against Major Dunseith.

Charges filed eight months ago with the District Attorney against Major J. Franklin Dunseith and others of the First Field Hospital and Third Ambulance Company, at 56 West Sixty-sixth Street, which alleged among other things that an absent member had been carried on the payroll, others directed to do private work, while the armory was used for storage of private autos and an "elephant" from a circus, and that women friends of the officers had used the arena for riding lessons were dismissed yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Edwin P. Kilroe said he had made a thorough investigation and had found no cause for action by the District Attorney.

Mr. Kilroe recommended that the charges be referred to David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts; to the Armory Board and to Adjt. Gen. Berry at Albany. Copies of the District Attorney's report on the subject were sent to each of these offices.

The charges, made by Sergeant Harry Schnirring, a member, of 531 East 170th Street, Bronx, also included the allegation that moving pictures were displayed in the armory to exploit oil stock and that soldiers who had returned from war service with the A. E. F. were discriminated against and their places given to others who had not been overseas.

JACKSON HEIGHTS
and The Need for Homes
BUILDING costs today are higher and more uncertain than at any time since the outbreak of war in Europe in 1914. While building costs continue to increase, rents cannot be expected to decline. The only solution of the problem is to build, and build, and build until the supply overtakes the demand. It is a question whether a decade of normal building activity would succeed in bringing the supply abreast of the demand, especially as regards the demand for apartments.
The problem of the Individual can be solved in but one way, viz: To purchase an apartment on the tenant-ownership and management plan, thus to obtain the maximum amount of protection against rent increases and enforced removals.
Under the original Tenant-Ownership plan, as inaugurated at Jackson Heights, Borough of Queens, only a comparatively small initial investment is necessary to obtain a permanent home in a highly restricted community and to minimize your future rental payments.
New Garden Apartments, of 4, 5 and 6 rooms, will be ready for occupancy this Fall. They are offered for sale on the 100 per cent Jackson Heights Plan of Tenant-Ownership, under which more than 400 apartments, valued at approximately $2,000,000, have been sold recently to selected tenant-owners.

CO-OPERATIVELY OWNED

THIS rare combination of apartment house, hotel with a restaurant, a swimming pool, roof gardens, terraces and balconies, on the upper floors, has been designed especially to solve the high rent and servant problems for those who require hotel service, and a permanent New York City home, free from rent waste, and valuable as an investment, with extra servants' rooms if desired.

Each apartment is a complete miniature home, comprising a living room, one or more bedrooms, with baths, a complete serving room, and a foyer hall. Maids, valets, porters and cleaners supplied, on "hourly service" plan, when desired. Hotel and restaurant service at all times.

The return of B. R. T. strikers to their former jobs began in volume yesterday when, according to Receiver Lindley M. Garrison, nearly 350 strikers got their posts back. He declared that the company had 4,500 men at work, of whom returned strikers numbered 2,700. The men going back did not receive their seniority rating, a serious setback to the older employes.

Strikers or sympathizers attacked two trolleys in Williamsburg last evening, smashed the windows with stones and clubs and attacked the motormen. The police broke up both demonstrations. No arrests were made.

At Nostrand and Park Avenues a crowd of 200 attacked a Nostrand Avenue trolley operated by John Callen, 885 Bergen Avenue, Jersey City. John Moos, 238 East 195th Street, Manhattan, was the conductor. The crew sought refuge within the car. The windows were smashed and several passengers were struck. A policeman drew his revolver and dispersed the mob after two control levers had been stolen.

The second attack occurred at Union and Driggs Avenues upon a Union Avenue trolley in charge of Louis Levenroth, who gave his address as the Ridgewood car barns. A brick hit Levenroth on the head and he dropped. The crowd stole his levers and threatened to lynch him and the conductor. Reserves from the Bedford and Greenpoint stations scattered the crowd.

"The appeal for funds by the allied unions," said Mr. Garrison, "in this neighborhood reveals a shocking instance of bad faith and insincerity on the part of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes. The appeal frankly declared the object of the strike was to bring about the closed shop. The Amalgamated Committee assured me in writing, during our negotiations before the strike that they withdrew from consideration their demands for a closed shop."

In addition to the evidence presented at the hiring office of the B. R. T.—long lines of men seeking places—a member of the strikers' own committee admitted the loss of the strike.

"I admit that the strike is lost," he said, "and it won't be long before I look for another job. It was our leaders that lost the strike. They had nothing but Socialist speakers at our meetings, and these speakers attacked the newspapers, and then the press turned against us and we lost public opinion."

About 500 strikers and several score of women, many with children tugging at their skirts, appeared at the union headquarters in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, Myrtle and Willoughby Avenues, during the day, seeking strike benefits. They were informed that only $7 a week would be paid to married strikers and that single men might be asked to refuse to accept any benefit at all, in order that the strike fund might be stretched over a longer period.

Further and substantial improvement in all types of service marked the day as far as the company wes concerned. As a result of the absence of disorder during the last few days the first reduction in the number of policemen assigned to guard duty was ordered last night. A big detail of guards, however, was kept on duty.

A piece of stovepipe three feet long rolled down a hill on the Brighton Beach line, near the Botanical Garden station, and lodged between the third rail and the outer wheel rail in the afternoon. Traffic was held up for fifteen minutes while an investigation was made. Nothing was found to indicate that the incident was the result of strikers' activity.

Patrick Mardone of 145 Nineteenth Street, Brooklyn, driver of a truck which on Sept. 3 crashed into a Hamilton Avenue surface car at Third Avenue and Thirtieth Street, Brooklyn, was held in $5,000 bail in the Fifth Avenue Court. Seven passengers received minor hurts in the collision.

Edward Smyth, 2,075 Seventh Street, Brooklyn, a strike-breaking conductor of a Fifth Avenue trolley car which hit a motor bus at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street a few days ago, resulting in injuries to twenty-four persons, was discharged yesterday in the Fifth Avenue Court. Motion to set the conductor free was made by Assistant District Attorney Louis Goldstein. Joseph Wallace, motorman of the car, has not yet been found by the police. Harry Abos, 92 East First Street, Manhattan, driver of the bus, was held for hearing on Monday. He denied that the accident was due to his fault.

Three alleged B. R. T. strikers were arraigned in the County Court before Judge Haskell. The charge was injuring railroad property. The men described themselves as Leo B. Finke, 92 De Kalb Avenue; Nathan Wichkoff, 33 Hooper Street, and Charles Eclam, 925 De Kalb Avenue. It was charged that the men had thrown missiles at an elevated train, smashing windows and endangering the passengers. They were held in $1,000 bail each for trial.

We have come across so many men of taste and refinement who feel that to pay more than $50 for a Suit is an extravagance that we have decided to make a $50 Special that these men will take pride in wearing—as much pride as we take in making it!

Come in and see for yourself the wide range of quality fabrics from which you may choose!

OLIVE OIL

There is no Substitute for Olive Oil

To the epicure, gastronomy is art and science both. For the discerning palate, salad oil must be olive oil: and olive oil must be Barton and Guestier's.

There is no substitute for B. & G. Its purity is unexcelled. Its exquisite fragrance of flavor is unequalled. It is an essential in the symphony of the perfect salad.
